THE idea of embracing in the compass of this little volume any thing like a tolerable outline of Universal History, would doubtless excite a smile on the lip of a college professor, should he ever so descend to peep into our humble title-page. But let our object be clearly understood, and we hope the attempt we have here made may not be deemed either ridiculous or presuming. A work which gives in detail the history of mankind, must necessarily be voluminous. It is, therefore, beyond the utmost stretch of the youthful intellect to compass it; the young reader shrinks back in despair, even from undertaking the task of its perusal. Abridgements of general history have been usually liable to still greater objections. They are little more than dry lists of dates, presenting no pictures to the imagination, exciting no sympathies in the heart, and imparting few ideas to the understanding. And yet it is very desirable that every person should, at an early period of life, have imprinted on his mind, in bright and unfading colors, a clear outline of the story of mankind, from its beginning in the plain of Shinar, down to the present hour. The advantages of this are obvious. It makes all subsequent reading and reflection on the subject of history both useful and interesting; it becomes a stimulus to research; it is ever after a thread to guide the inquirer through the labyrinths of historical lore.

The attempt has been made in this work to give the pupil such an outline of UNIVERSAL HISTORY; to weave into a few pages a clear, vivid, and continuous tale of the great human family, one that may be both intelligible and entertaining to the young reader. The success attained by the previous editions, during the last thirty years, encourages the publishers to hope for a fair measure of success in this.

Numerous improvements have been introduced into the work. The engravings are for the most part new, and several additional maps have been inserted. The questions have been re-arranged at the foot of the pages to which they refer. The history of every country has been brought down to the present day, and such topics as have increased in interest have been treated at greater length.

UNIVERSAL HISTORY.

STUDYING GEOGRAPHY FROM A BALLOON.

CHAPTER I.—INTRODUCTION.

About travelling in a balloon, and the curious things one would see.

1. IF you should enter a balloon, rise into the air, and sail along over the country, how many interesting things would you see! At one moment you would be passing over a city, at another you would look down upon a valley, or a river, or a hill, or a mountain!

CHAPTER I.—1. What would a person see, if he were to sail along over the country in a balloon?

2. What a pleasant method this would be of studying what is called geography! For geography, you know, is a description of cities, rivers, valleys, hills, mountains, and other things that a traveller meets with.

3. How much more delightful this would be, than to look over maps, which only give you a sort of picture, showing where towns are placed, how rivers run, and where mountains lie. But as very few of us can travel about in balloons, we must be content with maps, and learn geography from them as well as we can.

4. Suppose that in travelling in some distant country, we should meet with a building different from any we had ever seen; suppose that it was built of stone, covered with moss, and marked with great age, as if it had been erected at least five hundred years ago.

5. Suppose that on entering this building we should find strange, dark rooms of vast size; suppose that we should find in this building the graves of persons who died two or three hundred years ago, with their names carved upon the stones beneath which their bones repose!

2. What is geography? 3. What are maps? 4-6. Suppose we should meet with some old building, what should we desire to know?

6. Now what do you imagine we should think of all this? Should we not be curious to know why this building was erected—when and by whom it was built? Should we not be anxious to know something of the people who constructed such a wonderful edifice? Should we not desire to go back five hundred years, and learn the story of that distant time?

7. And if we could meet with some old man who had lived so long, should we not wish to sit down by his side and hear him tell how this structure had been built? Should we not ask him a thousand questions about the people who erected it, and those who had been buried in it?

8. Now if you were to travel in foreign countries, you would meet with a great many such buildings as I have described. You would indeed find many that are more than five hundred years old.

9. If you were to extend your travels to Italy, or Greece, or Egypt, or some parts of Asia, you would often meet with the ruins of temples, palaces, and cities, which existed even two or three thousand years ago. Some of these would excite your wonder on account of their beauty, and some on account of their grandeur.

7. Suppose we should find a man equally old. what should we do? 8. What would a traveller meet with in foreign lands? 9. What would he meet with in Italy, Greece, Egypt, or Asia? How would these ancient ruins excite his wonder?

10. Such things you would meet with in foreign lands, but no man could be found old enough to tell you their story from his own observation. What then would you do? Perhaps you would be content, after returning from your travels, to sit down with old Peter Parley, and hear the history of these ancient times.

11. Well, I suppose that most of my readers have either travelled about, or read of distant countries. Perhaps, then, they are curious to hear an old man speak of the olden time. If the reader is not already tired of my stories, I beg him to sit down and hear what I have to say.

About History, and Geography, and other Matters.

1. I SUPPOSE you have often met with the words History and Geography. History is the story of mankind since the world was created, and may be compared to an old man who has lived for thousands of years, and who has seen cities built and fall into decay; who has seen nations rise, flourish, and disappear; and who, with a memory full of wonderful things, sits

10. Could you find such a man? What would you do then?

CHAPTER II.—1. What is history? To what may it be compared?

down to tell you of all that has happened during so many ages.

2. Geography, as I have before said, is a description of towns, rivers, mountains and countries—the things which a traveller sees in going from one place to another. Geography, then, may be compared to some roving fellow who has been all over the world in ships, cars, and steamboats, and has come back to give us an account of what he has seen.

3. You will see, then, that History is a record of events that have happened, and that Geography tells you of the places where they happened. In order to understand the former, you must know something of the latter. In this little book I shall therefore sometimes assume to be the old graybeard of history, who has lived for thousands of years, and tell you of what has come to pass; and sometimes I shall take you in a balloon or vessel, and carry you with me to the places where the events I relate have occurred.

4. I shall, in the progress of my story, tell you how the first man and woman were made, how they had a large family, how these increased and spread themselves throughout different countries. I shall tell you of the great nations that have existed, of the great battles that have been fought, and of the deeds of celebrated persons.

2. What is geography? To what may it be compared? 3, 4. What will the author do in telling his story?

5. But, before I proceed, I must remind you that the world is round, and that men and animals live upon the surface; that the face of the earth is divided into land and water; that on the land trees, grass, herbs, and flowers grow; that on the land men and animals dwell; that on the land towns, cities, and villages are built.

6. A high piece of land, you know, is called a mountain or hill; a low piece of land is called a valley. Water running in a stream through a valley, is called a river; a still piece of water surrounded by hills, is called a lake.

7. About one-third of the face of the earth is land, and two-thirds are water. The land is divided into two great continents; the western continent consists of North and South America; the eastern continent consists of Europe, Africa, and Asia.

8. If you will look at page 17, you will see a map of the eastern continent; and at page 18, you will see a map of the western continent.

5. What is the shape of the earth? How is the face of the land divided? Where do men and animals live? What grow upon the land? What live upon the land? What are built upon the land? 6. What is a mountain or a hill? A valley? A river? A lake? 7. What part of the face of the earth is land? What portion is water? How is the land divided? What of the western continent? The eastern?

QUESTIONS ON THE MAP.—What ocean lies west of Europe? What lies to the west of Africa? What to the south of Africa and Asia? What to the east of Asia? How is Europe bounded? Which way is it from Africa? How is Africa bounded? How is Africa separated from Asia? What sea lies between Africa and Europe? Are Europe and Asia separated by water, or do they lie together in one piece of land? How is Asia bounded? Where is Australia?

QUESTIONS ON THE MAP.—What ocean lies east of America? What lies to the west? What country lies to the south of the United States? What large islands lie in the Pacific ocean? What islands lie between North and South America in the Atlantic ocean? What large rivers are there in South America? What straits separate North America from Asia? Where is Greenland? Terra del Fuego? Newfoundland? Hudson's Bay?

How the World is divided into Land and Water.

1. I HAVE said that about two-thirds of the face of the earth are covered with water. This water is one vast salt sea, but to different parts of it we give different names.

2. That part which lies between America and Europe is called the Atlantic Ocean, and is about three thousand miles wide; that part which lies between America and Asia is called the Pacific Ocean, and is about ten thousand miles wide. There are many other names given to other parts of the great salt sea.

3. Ships, as you well know, sail from one country to another upon the water, and in this way a great deal of trade or commerce is carried on. But as mankind live on the land, my stories will chiefly relate to what has happened on the land.

4. I suppose you have heard people speak of the four quarters of the world. By this they mean America, Europe, Africa, and Asia. Besides these,

CHAPTER III.—1. What of the great mass of water that covers two-thirds of the earth? 2. What of the Atlantic Ocean? The Pacific? 3. What of ships? What of the land? 4. What are the four quarters of the world?

there are a great many pieces of land surrounded by water, called islands.

5. In the Pacific Ocean there are many of these, the inhabitants of which are very numerous. These islands are considered a fifth division of the world, and are called Oceania.

6. Now what I am going to tell you has happened in these different parts of the world. In order to understand my stories, it is necessary you should look over the maps which are given with them. These will show you where the different countries are, about which I am going to speak.

What is an island? 5. What of Oceania?

INHABITANTS OF ASIA.

CHAPTER IV.—INTRODUCTION CONTINUED.

About the Inhabitants of Asia, Africa, and other Countries.

1. BEFORE I proceed further, I must tell you that Asia is a vast country with a multitude of cities, occupied by a great many different nations.

2. The principal of these nations are the Tartars, who wander from place to place, and dwell chiefly in tents; the Arabs, who have large flocks of camels and fine horses, with which they roam over the desert;

the Hindoos, or inhabitants of India, who travel about on elephants, and worship idols; the Persians, who are very fond of poetry and have splendid palaces; the Chinese, from whom we get tea; the Japanese, who have remained, until late years, shut up and secluded from the rest of the world; and the Turks, who sit on cushions instead of chairs.

3. The whole population of Asia is about seven hundred millions, which is more than half the inhabitants of the whole globe. It has nine times as many people as the whole of North and South America put together.

4. Africa, you know, is the native land of the negroes. It has a few large cities, but the whole number of people is but eighty millions.

5. Europe is divided into several nations, such as the English, French, Italians, Spaniards, Germans, Russians, and others. It has many fine cities, and about three hundred millions of inhabitants.

6. America is the country where we live. It has some large cities, and many pleasant towns and villages, but nearly half of the country is uninhabited. The whole population is about seventy millions.

7. Oceania, as I have before said, consists of many islands in the Pacific Ocean. Some of these, as Java,

8. What is the population of Asia? 4. What of Africa? Its population?
5. What of Europe? Its population? 6. What of America? Its population?
7. What of Oceania?

Sumatra, Borneo, and New Holland, or Australia, are very large, the latter being the largest island on the globe. From these countries we get pepper, cloves, coffee, and other nice things. The whole population of Oceania is about thirty millions.

CHAPTER V.—INTRODUCTION CONTINUED.

About the different kinds of People in the World.

1. THUS you see that the whole number of the inhabitants upon the globe is nearly twelve hundred millions. All these are descended from Adam and Eve, who lived, the Bible tells us, in the garden of Eden!

2. What an immense family to have proceeded from one pair! You may well believe that it has taken many years for the human family to increase to this extent.

3. If you were to travel in different countries, you would observe that the inhabitants differ very much in their color, dress, and mode of living.

4. Some have dark skins, like the color of a dead leaf, as the American Indians; some have a yellowish or olive color, like the Chinese; some are a deep, sooty brown, like the Hindoos; some are black, like the negroes, and some are white, like the English and the people of the United States.

5. In some countries the people live in huts built of mud and sticks, and subsist by hunting with the bow and arrow. These are said to be in the savage state. Our American Indians, some of the negroes of Africa, some of the inhabitants of Asia, and most of the Oceanians, are savages.

6. In some countries the people live in houses partly built of stone and mud. They have few books, no churches or meeting-houses, and worship idols. Such are most of the negroes of Africa, and many tribes in Asia. These are said to be in the barbarous state, and are often called barbarians. Many of their customs are very cruel.

7. In some countries the inhabitants live in tolerable houses, and the rich have fine palaces. The people have many ingenious arts, but the schools are poor, and but a small portion are taught to read and write. The Chinese, the Hindoos, the Turks, and some other nations of Asia, with some of the inhabitants of Africa and Europe, are in this condition, which may be called a semi-civilized state

8. In many parts of Europe, and in the United States, the people live in good houses, have good furniture, many books, good schools, churches, meeting-houses, steamboats, railroads and telegraphs. These are in the highest state of civilization.

9. Thus you observe that mankind may be divided into four classes;—those who are in the savage state, those who are in the barbarous state, those who are partly civilized, and those who are in the highest state of civilization.

8. What of people in the highest state of civilization? 9. Into what four classes may mankind be divided?

STUDYING THE MAP OF ASIA.

CHAPTER VI.—ASIA.

About the Climate, Productions, Mountains, People, and Animals of Asia, and other things.

1. I HAVE already said that Asia is a vast country, containing a great many cities, and a multitude of inhabitants. It lies on the opposite side of the earth from us, and you may go to it by crossing the Pacific Ocean on the west, or by crossing the Atlantic Ocean and Europe on the east.

CHAPTER VI.—1. What of Asia? Where is Asia? How can you go to it? Point your finger toward Asia.

2. In the southern portion of Asia the climate is warm, as in our Southern states. These parts are chiefly inhabited by the Chinese, Hindoos, Persians, Arabians and Turks. In many places the country is fertile, and in the valleys, beautiful flowers, spicy shrubs, and wild birds of the most brilliant colors, are found.

3. In the centre of Asia there are mountains whose tops are covered with everlasting snow. These are the loftiest peaks in the world, and are nearly six miles in height. To the north of these there is a cold region, where there are vast plains with scattered tribes of Tartars roaming over them, for the scanty pastures they afford for their camels and horses. They build no houses, but dwell in tents, and live upon the milk and flesh of their flocks.

4. The native animals of Asia are many of them very remarkable. The elephant is found in the thickets, the rhinoceros along the banks of rivers, the lion in the plains, the royal tiger in the forests, monkeys and apes of many kinds abound in the hot parts, and serpents thirty feet in length are sometimes met with.

5. In the southern portions of Asia, hurricanes sometimes overturn the houses, rend the forests in pieces, and scatter ruin and desolation over the land. The country is often parched with drought. Sometimes millions of locusts come upon the wind, and devour every green thing, so that nothing is left for man or beast. Pestilence often visits the people, and sweeps away thousands upon thousands.

6. Such is Asia, a land of wonders both in its geography and history. It is the largest of the four quarters of the globe; it contains the loftiest mountains, it affords the greatest variety of animal and vegetable productions, and the seasons here display at once their most beautiful and their most fearful works.

7. Asia, too, is the most populous quarter of the globe; it contained the first human inhabitants, and from this quarter all the rest of the globe has been peopled. Here, too, the most remarkable events took place that belong to the history of man. Here the most wonderful personages were born that have ever trod this earth; and here, too, the mighty miracles of Jehovah were wrought.

About the Creation.—The Deluge.

1. The first portion of the world inhabited by mankind was Asia; the next was Africa; the next was Europe, and the last was America. How long it is since this latter country was first peopled by the Indians, we do not know; but the first white people came here about three hundred and seventy years since.

2. Let us now go back to the creation of the world. This wonderful event took place about six thousand years ago. The story of it is beautifully told in the first chapter of Genesis.

3. Adam and Eve were created in Asia, and were placed in the garden of Eden, not far from the river Euphrates. This river is in the western part of Asia, and is about six thousand miles in an easterly direction from New York and Boston.

CHAPTER VII.—1. Which quarter of the globe was first inhabited? Which next? Which quarter was inhabited last? When was America first peopled by the Indians? When by white people? 2. How long is it since the world was created? Tell the story of creation, as related in the first chapter of Genesis. 3. Where did Adam and Eve live? Where is the river Euphrates? How far is it from New York? Which way from Boston?

4. Adam and Eve were for a time the only human beings on this vast globe. Yet they did not feel alone, for God was with them. At length they had children, and in the course of years their descendants were very numerous.

ADAM AND EVE.

5. These dwelt in the neighborhood of the Euphrates, and here they built towns, cities, and villages. But they became very wicked. They forgot to worship God, and were unjust and cruel.

6. The Creator therefore determined to cut off the whole human family, with the exception of Noah and his children, both as a punishment to the disobedient, and as a warning to all future nations that evil must follow sin.

7. Noah was told of the coming destruction, and therefore built an ark, into which he gathered his family, and a single pair of the various kinds of land animals. It then began to rain, until all the countries of the earth were covered with a deluge of water.

8. Thus all the nations were cut off, and the world once more had but a single human family upon it. This event occurred sixteen hundred and fifty-six years after the creation.

CHAPTER VIII.—ASIA CONTINUED.

How Noah and his Family came out of the Ark.—How the People settled in the Land of Shinar.—About Babel.

1. THE people who lived before the flood are called antediluvians. We know nothing about them except what is told in the Bible. It is probable that they extended over but a small part of Asia, and that no human beings dwelt either in Africa, Europe, or America, before the flood.

CHAPTER VIII.—1. What of those who lived before the flood?

2. The deluge is supposed to have commenced in November, and the rain is thought to have ceased in March. After a while the waters subsided, and Noah's ark rested upon the top of a tall mountain in Armenia, called Ararat, which is still to be seen.

3. The people and animals now came out of the ark. The animals spread themselves abroad, and after many centuries they were extended into all countries.

4. Noah had three sons, Shem, Ham, and Japheth. These, with their families, proceeded to the land of Shinar, which lies to the south of Mount Ararat. Here they settled themselves on the borders of the river Euphrates, probably the same country that had been inhabited by the antediluvians. It is in this region that the first nations were formed.

5. All who remembered the deluge, or had heard of it, were afraid that the wickedness of mankind would again be punished in a similar way. They therefore resolved to build a tower, that they might mount upon it, and save themselves from destruction.

2. When did the deluge begin and end? What of Mount Ararat? 3. What of the people that came out of the ark? The animals? 4. What three sons had Noah? Where did they settle? Where was the land of Shinar? 5. Why did the people resolve to build the tower of Babel?

6. Accordingly they laid the foundation of the edifice on the eastern bank of the river Euphrates. Perhaps they expected to rear the tower so high that its top would touch the blue sky, and enable them to climb into heaven.

7. Their building materials were bricks that had been baked in the sun. Instead of mortar, they cemented the bricks together with a sort of slime or pitch.

8. The workmen labored very diligently, and piled one layer of bricks upon another, till the earth was a considerable distance beneath them. But the blue sky, and the sun, and the stars, seemed as far off as when they first began.

9. One day, while these foolish people were at their labor, a very wonderful thing took place. They were talking together as usual, but, all of a sudden, they found it impossible to understand what each other said.

10. If any of the workmen called for bricks, their companions at the bottom of the tower mistook their meaning, and brought them pitch. If they asked for one sort of tool, another sort was given them. Their words appeared to be mere sounds without any sense, like the babble of a little child, before it has been taught to speak.

6-8. Describe the building of the tower. 9, 10. Describe the confusion of languages.

11. This event caused such confusion that they could not go on building the tower. They therefore gave up the idea of climbing to heaven, and resolved to wander to different parts of the earth. It is likely that they formed themselves into several parties, consisting of all who could talk intelligibly together. They set forth on their journey in various directions.

12. The descendants of Shem are supposed to have distributed themselves over the country near to the Euphrates. The descendants of Ham took a westerly direction, and proceeded to Africa. They settled in Egypt, and laid the foundation of a great nation there. The descendants of Japheth proceeded to Greece, and thus laid the foundation of several European nations.

13. Some travellers in modern times have discovered a large hillock on the shore of the Euphrates. It is composed of sun-burnt bricks cemented together with pitch. They believe this hillock to be the ruins of the tower of Babel, which was built more than four thousand years ago.

11. What was the consequence of this confusion of languages? 12. What of the descendants of Shem? Of Ham? Of Japheth? 13. What have some travellers discovered? What is the hillock supposed to be?

About the great Assyrian Empire, and Reign of Queen Semiramis.

1. WHEN the rest of mankind were scattered into different parts of the earth, there were a number of people who remained near the tower of Babel. They continued to inhabit the land of Shinar, which was a warm country and very fertile. In course of time they extended over a much larger tract of country, and built towns and cities.

2. This region received the name of Assyria. It was the first of the nations of the earth. Its boundaries varied at different times, but its place on the map may be seen in the vicinity of the two rivers Tigris and Euphrates, northward of the Persian Gulf.

3. Ashur, the grandson of Noah, was the first ruler of Assyria. In the year 2229 B. C., or 1775 years after the creation, he built the city of Nineveh, and surrounded it with walls a hundred feet high. The city was so large that a person would have travelled a hundred miles merely in walking around it.

4. But the city of Babylon, which was built a short time afterward, was superior to Nineveh both in size and beauty. It was situated on the river Euphrates. The walls were so very thick, that six chariots drawn by horses could be driven abreast upon the top, without danger of falling off on either side. In our country we do not surround our cities with walls; but in ancient times walls were necessary to protect the people from their enemies.

5. In this city there were magnificent gardens, belonging to the royal palace. They were constructed in a manner to appear to be hanging in the air without resting on the earth. They contained large trees, and all kinds of fruits and flowers.

6. There was also a splendid temple dedicated to Belus or Baäl, who was the chief idol of the Assyrians. This temple was six hundred and sixty feet high, and it contained a golden image of Belus forty feet in height.

7. Babylon was built by Nimrod, that mighty hunter of whom the Bible tells us. But the person who made all the beautiful gardens and palaces, and who set up the image of Belus, was a woman named Semiramis.

8. She had been the wife of Ninus, king of Assyria, but when king Ninus died, queen Semiramis became sole ruler of the empire. She was an ambitious woman, and was not content to live quietly in Babylon, although she had taken so much pains to make it a beautiful city.

9. She was tormented with a wicked desire to conquer all the nations of the earth. So she collected an immense army, and marched against the rich and powerful king of the Indies, who lived in what we now call Hindostan, a country lying to the south-east of Assyria.

7. Who built Babylon? Who made the hanging gardens? 8. What of Semiramis? Was she contented with Babylon? 9. What desire had she? What did she do? Where did the king of the Indies live?

Queen Semiramis sets forth to conquer the World, but is defeated by the King of the Indies.

1. WHEN the king of the Indies, who was very rich and powerful, heard that queen Semiramis was coming to invade his dominions, he mustered a vast number of men to defend them. Besides his soldiers, he had a great many elephants.

2. Each of these enormous beasts was worth a whole regiment of soldiers. They were taught to rush into battle and toss the enemy about with their trunks, and trample them down with their huge feet.

3. Now queen Semiramis had no elephants, and therefore she was afraid that the king of the Indies would overcome her. She endeavored to prevent this misfortune by a very curious contrivance. In the first place she ordered three thousand brown oxen to be killed.

4. The hides of the dead oxen were stripped off, and sewed together in the shape of elephants. These were placed upon camels, and when the camels were drawn up in battle array, they looked pretty much like a troop of great brown elephants. Doubtless the king of the Indies wondered where queen Semiramis had caught them.

5. When the battle was to be fought, the king of the Indies with his real elephants marched forward on one side, and queen Semiramis with her camels and ox-hides, came boldly against him on the other.

6. But when the Indian army had marched close to the host of the Assyrians, they perceived that there was no such thing as an elephant among them. They therefore laid aside all fear, and rushed furiously upon queen Semiramis and her soldiers.

7. The real elephants put the camels to flight; and then, in a great rage, they ran about, tossing the Assyrians into the air, and trampling them down by hundreds. Thus the Assyrian army was routed, and the king of the Indies gained a complete victory.

8. Queen Semiramis was sorely wounded; but she got into a chariot, and drove away at full speed from the battle-field. She finally escaped to her own kingdom, but in a very sad condition.

9. She then took up her residence in the palace at Babylon. But she did not long enjoy herself in the beautiful gardens which she had suspended in the air. It is said that her own son, whose name was Ninias, put his mother to death, that he might get possession of the throne, and reign over the people.

10. Such was the melancholy end of the mighty queen Semiramis. How foolish and wicked it was for her to spend her life in trying to conquer other nations, instead of making her own people happy! But she had not learned that golden rule, "Do to another as you would have another do to you."

8. What of Semiramis? 9. What became of her? 10. Was the conduct of Semiramis good or wise? Do you think she was happy?

About Ninias.—Reign of Sardanapalus, and Fall of the Assyrian Empire.

1. AFTER Ninias had wickedly murdered his mother, he became king of Assyria. His reign began about the year 2000 B. C., or about three hundred and forty years after the deluge.

2. Ninias was not only a very wicked man, but a very slothful one. He did not set out to conquer kingdoms like his mother, but shut himself up in his palace, and thought of nothing but how to enjoy himself.

3. He knew that his people hated him, and therefore he kept guards in his palace; but he was afraid to trust even his guards. Whether he was murdered at last, or whether he died quietly in his bed, is more than I can tell, for history does not inform us.

4. After the reign of Ninias, there was an interval of eight hundred years, during which it is impossible to say what happened in the kingdom of Assyria. It is probable that most of the kings were like Ninias, that they wasted their time in idle pleasures, and never did any thing worthy of remembrance.

5. Some years afterward, there was a king upon the throne of Assyria, whose name was Sardanapalus. He is said to have been a beautiful young man; but he was slothful, and took no care of his kingdom, and made no attempt to promote the welfare of his people.

6. He never went outside of his palace, but lived all the time among the women. And in order to make himself more fit for their company, he painted his face, and sometimes put on a woman's dress. In this ridiculous guise, the great king Sardanapalus used to sit down with the women, and help them to spin.

7. But while Sardanapalus was feasting, and dancing, and painting his face, and dressing himself like a woman, and helping the women to spin, a terrible destruction was impending over his head.

8. Arbaces, governor of the Medes, made war against this unworthy monarch, and besieged him in the city of Babylon. Sardanapalus saw that he could not escape, and that if he lived any longer, he should probably become a slave.

9. So, rather than be a slave, he resolved to die.

He therefore collected his treasures, and heaped them in one great pile in a splendid hall of his palace, and then set fire to the pile. The palace was speedily in a blaze, and Sardanapalus, with his favorite officers, and a multitude of beautiful women, were burnt to death in the flames. Thus ended the great Assyrian monarchy, the country being conquered by Arbaces.

10. Sardanapalus died about the year 876 B. C. After a time a new kingdom arose, and Nineveh was the capital. This is called the second Assyrian Empire. The kings of this empire made war on the Jews, and are often spoken of in the Bible. Their power was terminated, and Nineveh finally destroyed by the king of the Medes, 606 B. C.

About the Hebrews or Jews.—Origin of the Hebrews.—The Removal of Jacob and his Children to Egypt.

1. THE founder of the Hebrew nation was Abraham, who was born about two hundred years after the deluge. The country of his birth was Chaldea, which formed the southern part of the Assyrian empire.

9. What of the death of Sardanapalus? What was the end of the Assyrian empire? 10. How and when was it terminated?

CHAPTER XII.—1. What of Abraham? When and where was he born?

2. The rest of the inhabitants of Chaldea were idolaters, and worshipped the sun, moon, and stars; but Abraham worshipped the true God whom we worship. In the early part of his life, he was a shepherd on the Chaldean plains. When his father, Terah, was dead, God commanded him to leave his native country, and travel westward to the land of Canaan.

south-easterly from New York. It was a rich and fertile country, and God promised Abraham that his descendants should dwell there.

4. Many years of Abraham's life were spent in wandering to and fro. His wife Sarah went with him, and they were followed by a large number of male and female servants, and by numerous flocks and herds. They dwelt in tents, and had no settled home.

5. Abraham and Sarah had one son, named Isaac. His father loved him fondly; but when God commanded him to sacrifice his child, he prepared to obey. But an angel came down from heaven, and told him not to slay his son.

6. The life of Abraham was full of interesting events, but I have not room to relate them all here. He lived to be a hundred and seventy-five years old, and then died at Hebron, in Canaan. From this ancient patriarch the Jews and Arabians are descended. They have always called him Father Abraham.

7. Isaac, the son of Abraham, left two children, Esau and Jacob. The younger, Jacob, persuaded his brother to sell his birthright for a mess of pottage. He likewise obtained a blessing, which his father intended to bestow on Esau.

8. Jacob, to whom God gave the name of Israel, had twelve sons, whose names were Reuben, Simeon, Levi, Dan, Judah, Naphthali, Gad, Ashur, Issachar, Zebulon, Joseph, and Benjamin. The posterity of each of these twelve afterward became a separate tribe among the Hebrews or Israelites.

9. My young reader must look into the Bible for the beautiful story of Joseph and his brethren. I can merely tell him that Joseph was sold into captivity and carried into the land of Egypt, and that there he was the means of preserving his aged father and all his brothers from death by famine.

10. Jacob and his twelve children removed to Egypt, and took up their residence there. It was in that country that the Hebrews first began to be a nation; so that their history may be said to commence from this period. Jacob died 1689 B. C.

The Bondage in Egypt.—Flight of the Hebrews, and Destruction of Pharaoh and his Host.

1. EGYPT, you know, is in Africa. It has many cities, and a famous river called the Nile runs through the country. But this land is less populous now than in the time of Joseph. It was then full of people, and they were the most learned and civilized of all the nations of the earth. There are many ruins to be seen in Egypt, which show that the palaces and cities of ancient times were very splendid.

2. But I must tell you of the Hebrews. Pharaoh, the good king of Egypt died, and Joseph likewise. Another king then ascended the throne, who hated the Hebrews, and did all in his power to oppress them.

3. The Egyptians treated them like slaves. All the hardest labor was performed by the Hebrews. It is thought by some writers that the immense piles of stone called the Pyramids, were built by them. These vast edifices are still standing on the banks of the Nile.

CHAPTER XIII.—1. What of Egypt? What of Egypt in the time of Joseph? 2. How were the Hebrews treated after the death of Joseph? 3. What of the pyramids? How high is the tallest of the Egyptian pyramids? ANS. About five hundred feet.

4. This cruel king was named Pharaoh, like his predecessor. One of the most wicked injuries that he inflicted on the Hebrews was the following:

5. He commanded that every male child should be thrown into the river Nile the instant he was born. The reason for this horrible cruelty was, that the Hebrews might not become more numerous than the Egyptians, and conquer the whole country.

6. One of the Hebrew women, however, could not make up her mind to throw her son into the Nile. If she had positively disobeyed the king's order, she would have been put to death. She therefore very privately made a little ark or boat of bulrushes, placed the child in it, and laid it among the flags that grew by the river's side.

7. In a little while the king's daughter came down to the river to bathe. Perceiving the ark of bulrushes, she went with her maids to fetch it. When they looked into it, they found a little Hebrew boy there!

8. The heart of the princess was moved with compassion, and she resolved to save his life. She hired his own mother to nurse him. She gave him the name of Moses, and when he grew old enough to be put to school, she caused him to be instructed in all the learning of the Egyptians. At that period they were the most learned people on earth.

9. But though he himself was so well treated, Moses did not forget the sufferings of the other Hebrews. He remembered that they were his brethren, and he resolved to rescue them from their oppressors.

10. He and his brother Aaron received power from God to perform many wonderful things, in order to induce Pharaoh to let the Hebrews depart out of Egypt. Ten great plagues were inflicted on the Egyptians, and these were so terrible that at last Pharaoh gave the Hebrews leave to go.

MOSES.

11. But scarcely were they gone, when the king was sorry he had not kept them in Egypt, that he might oppress them, and compel them to labor for him as before. He therefore mustered his warriors, and rode swiftly after the fugitives.

12. When he came in sight of them, they were crossing the Red Sea, which lies between Egypt and Arabia. The Lord had caused the waters to roll back, and form a wall on each side. Thus there was a path of glistening sand for the Hebrews through the very depths of the sea.

To what did Pharaoh consent? 11. Did he change his mind? 12. What miracle did God perform? How did the Hebrews cross the Red Sea?

13. Pharaoh and his army rode onward, and by the time that the fugitives had reached the opposite shore, the Egyptians were in the midst of this wonderful passage. As the Hebrews fled, they looked behind them. There was the proud array of the Egyptian king, with his chariots and horsemen, and Pharaoh himself riding haughtily in the midst.

14. The affrighted Hebrews looked behind them again, and lo! the two walls of water had rolled together. They were dashing against the chariots, and sweeping the soldiers off their feet. The waves were crested with foam, and came roaring against the wicked king. In a little time, the sea rolled calmly over Pharaoh and his host, and thus they all perished, leaving the Jews to proceed on their journey.

15. This was a terrible event, but Pharaoh had been very cruel; he therefore deserved his fate. This story may teach us, that not only wicked rulers, but those who follow them, have reason to fear the judgments of Heaven.

13, 14. Describe the passage of the Egyptians. 15. What may this story teach us?

About the Wanderings of the Israelites in the Wilderness.

1. It was now two hundred and fifteen years since Jacob had come to settle in Egypt. His descendants had multiplied so rapidly that at the time of their departure, the Hebrew nation are supposed to have amounted to two millions of people. Moses, their leader, was eighty years old, but his step was steady; and though of meek and humble manners, he was a man of great wisdom and firmness of character.

2. The Hebrews intended to go directly from Egypt to the land of Canaan. This latter country is now called Palestine. Before reaching it, the children of Israel were to pass through a part of Arabia.

3. In order that they might not go astray, a vast pillar of mist, or cloud, moved before them all day long; and at night the pillar of cloud was changed to a pillar of fire, which threw a radiance over the regions through which they journeyed.

4. The country was desolate and barren, and often destitute of water, but the Lord fed the people with manna and with quails; and when they were thirsty, Moses smote upon a rock, and the water gushed out abundantly. Besides all this, the Hebrews received divine assistance against the Amalekites, and were enabled to conquer them in battle.

5. But in spite of these various mercies, the Israelites were an ungrateful and rebellious people. They often turned from the worship of the true God, and became idolaters.

6. At the very time when the Lord was revealing himself to Moses from the summit of Mount Sinai, and giving him the Ten Commandments, the people compelled Aaron to make a golden calf. They worshipped this poor image instead of Jehovah, who had brought them out of Egypt.

7. On account of their numerous sins, the Lord often inflicted grievous punishments upon them. Many were slain by pestilence, and some were swallowed up in the earth. The remainder were compelled to wander forty years in the deserts of Arabia, though the whole distance in a direct line from Egypt to Canaan was but two hundred and fifty miles.

7. Before they came to the land of Canaan, most of those who had fled out of Egypt were dead. Their children inherited the promised land, but they themselves were buried in the sands of the desert. Even Moses was permitted merely to gaze at the land of Canaan from the top of Mount Pisgah. Here he died, at the age of one hundred and twenty years.

9. After the death of Moses, Joshua, the son of Nun, became leader of the Israelites. Under his guidance they entered the promised land, and subdued the people who inhabited it. The territory of Canaan was then divided among the twelve tribes of Israel.

The Hebrews overthrow the Midianites.—Samson, Judge of Israel.

1. AFTER their settlement in Canaan, the Israelites lived under the authority of judges. These were their rulers in times of peace, and their generals in war. Some of them were very remarkable personages, and did many things worthy of remembrance.

2. The name of one of the judges was Gideon. While he ruled Israel, an army of Midianites invaded the country, and oppressed the people for seven years. But the Lord instructed Gideon how to rescue the Israelites from their power.

3. Gideon chose three hundred men, and caused each of them to take an earthen pitcher, and put a lamp within it. With this small band he entered the camp of the Midianites by night. There was an immense army of them sleeping in their tents, without apprehending any danger from the conquered Israelites.

4. But their destruction was at hand. Gideon gave a signal, and all his three hundred men broke their pitchers, at the same time blowing a loud blast upon trumpets which they had brought. This terrible clamor startled the Midianites from their sleep.

5. Amid the clangor of the trumpets they heard the Israelites shouting, "The sword of the Lord and of Gideon!" A great panic seized upon the Midianites. Each man mistook his neighbor for an enemy; so that more of the Midianites were slain by their own swords, than by the swords of the men of Israel. Thus God wrought a great deliverance for his people.

6. The most famous of all the judges of Israel was named Samson. He was the strongest man in the world; and it was a wonderful circumstance that his great strength depended upon the hair of his head. While he continued to wear his hair long, and curling down his neck, he had more strength than a hundred men put together. But if his hair were to be cut off, he would be no stronger than any single man.

7. In the days of Samson the Philistines had conquered the Israelites. Samson disliked them on account of the injuries which they inflicted upon his countrymen, and naturally made use of his great strength to do them all the harm in his power.

8. On one occasion he slew a thousand of them, although he had no better weapon than the jawbone of an ass. At another time, when they had shut him up in the city of Gaza, he took the gates of the city upon his shoulders, and carried them to the top of a distant hill.

9. But though Samson hated the Philistines, and was always doing them mischief, there was a woman among them whom he loved. Her name was Delilah. She pretended to love Samson in return ; but her only object was to ruin him.

10. This woman used many persuasions to induce Samson to tell what it was that made him so much stronger than other men. At first Samson deceived her. At length, however, Delilah prevailed upon him to tell her the real cause of his great strength.

11. When she had found out the secret, she cut off the hair of his head while he was sleeping, and then delivered him to her countrymen, the Philistines. The latter put out his eyes, and bound him with fetters of brass, and he was forced to labor like a brute beast in the prison.

8. With what weapon did Samson kill a thousand Philistines? What of the gates of Gaza? 9. What of Delilah? 10. What did she ask Samson? 11. How did Delilah deprive Samson of his strength? What did the Philistines do to Samson?

12. Samson was able to work very hard, for pretty soon his hair began to grow, and so his wonderful vigor returned. Thus he became the strongest man in the world again.

13. One day the Philistines were offering a great sacrifice to their idol, whose name was Dagon. They feasted, and their hearts were merry. When their mirth was at its height, they sent for poor blind Samson, that he might amuse them by showing specimens of his wonderful strength.

14. Samson was accordingly brought from prison, and led into Dagon's temple. His brazen fetters clanked at every step. He was a woful object with his blinded eyes. But his hair had grown again, and was curling upon his brawny shoulders.

15. When Samson had done many wonderful feats of strength, he asked leave to rest himself against the two main pillars of the temple. The floor and galleries were all crowded with Philistines. They gazed upon this man of mighty strength, and they triumphed and rejoiced, because they imagined he could do them no more harm.

16. But while they gazed, the strong man threw his arms round the two pillars of the temple. The edifice trembled as with an earthquake. Then Samson bowed himself with all his might, and down came the temple with a crash like thunder, overwhelming the whole multitude of the Philistines in its ruins.

17. Samson was likewise crushed, but in his death it appears that he triumphed over his enemies, and lay buried beneath the dead bodies of lords and mighty men.

Beginning of the Reign of Saul.

1. MANY other judges ruled over Israel, in the space of about four hundred years from the time that Moses led the Hebrews out of Egypt. But at length they became dissatisfied with this mode of government, and demanded that a king should be placed over them.

2. Samuel was then the judge of Israel. He was an old man, and a wise one; and besides the wisdom that he had collected in the course of a long life, he possessed wisdom from on high.

CHAPTER XVI.—1. For how long a time were the Hebrews governed by judges? 2. What of Samuel?

3. When the people demanded a king, Samuel endeavored to convince them that they were much better off without one. He described the tyrannical acts which kings have always been in the habit of committing, whenever they have had the power to do so. But the Israelites would not hearken to him.

4. Samuel, therefore, consulted the Lord, and was directed to find out a king for the Israelites. The person who was fixed upon was a young man named Saul. He possessed great beauty, and was a head taller than any other man among the Israelites. Samuel anointed his head with oil, and gave him to the Israelites as their king.

5. For a considerable time king Saul behaved like a wise and righteous monarch. But at length he began to disobey the Lord, and seldom took the advice of Samuel, although that good old priest would have been willing to direct him in every action of his life.

6. In the course of Saul's reign, the Israelites were often at war with the neighboring nations. At one time, when the Philistines had invaded the country, there was a great giant in their host, whose name was Goliath, of Gath.

7. He was at least ten or twelve feet high, and was clothed from head to foot in brazen armor. He carried an enormous spear, the iron head of which weighed thirty pounds.

8. Every day did this frightful giant stride forth from the camp of the Philistines, and defy the Israelites to produce a champion who would stand against him in single combat. But, instead of doing this, the whole host of Israel stood aloof from him, as a flock of sheep from a lion.

Combat of David and Goliath.

1. At last, a young shepherd, by the name of David, happened to come to the camp of the Israelites, and heard the terrible voice of Goliath as he thundered forth his challenge.

2. Young as he was, David had already slain a lion and a bear; and with the help of the Lord he thought himself able to slay this gigantic Philistine. He therefore obtained leave of king Saul to accept the challenge.

CHAPTER XVII.—1. Who was David? What did he do? 2. What had David done? What did he think?

3. But, instead of wearing the king's armor, which Saul would willingly have lent him, David went to the battle in his shepherd's garb. He did not even buckle on a sword.

4. When the two combatants came into the field, there was the youthful David on the side of the Israelites, with a staff in one hand, and a sling in the other, carrying five smooth stones in a shepherd's srip or pouch.

5. On the side of the Philistines, forth strode the mighty Goliath. He glistened in his brazen armor, and brandished his great iron-headed spear, till it quivered like a reed. When the giant spoke, his voice growled almost like thunder rolling overhead.

6. He looked scornfully at David, and hardly thought it worth his while to lift up his spear against him. "Come hither," quoth the giant, "and I will feed the fowls with your flesh!"

7. But little David was not at all abashed. He made a bold answer, and told Goliath that he would cut off his head, and give his enormous carcass to the beasts of the field. This threat so enraged the giant, that he put himself in motion to slay David.

8. The young man ran forward to meet Goliath.

and as he ran he took a smooth stone from his scrip, and placed it in his sling. When at a proper distance, he whirled the sling, and discharged the stone. It went whizzing through the air, and hit Goliath right in the centre of the forehead.

DAVID AND GOLIATH.

9. The stone penetrated to the brain; and down the giant fell at full length upon the field, with his brazen armor clanging around him. David then cut off Goliath's head with his own sword. The Philistines were affrighted at their champion's overthrow, and fled.

10. The men of Israel pursued them, and made a prodigious slaughter. David returned from the battle carrying the grim and grisly head of Goliath by the hair. The Hebrew women came forth to meet him, danced around him, and sang triumphant anthems in his praise.

The Reign of David.—Wisdom of Solomon.

1. DAVID had won so much renown by his victory over Goliath that Saul became envious of him, and often endeavored to kill him. But Jonathan, the son of Saul, loved David better than a brother.

2. During the lifetime of Saul, David was forced to live in exile. But after a reign of about twenty-four years, king Saul was slain on the mountains of Gilboa, in a disastrous battle with the Philistines. Jonathan was likewise killed.

3. When David heard of these sad events, he expressed his sorrow by weeping, and rending his garments. Yet he gained a kingdom by the death of Saul and Jonathan, for the men of Judah first elected him to reign over them, and afterward the whole people of Israel chose him for their king.

4. A great part of David's life was spent in war. He gained many victories, and enjoyed high renown as a gallant leader. He conquered many of the surrounding nations, and raised his kingdom to a higher pitch of power than it ever enjoyed before or afterward. But he also won a peaceful kind of fame, which will last while the world endures, and be remembered through eternity.

5. He won it by his heavenly poesy; for king David was the sweet Psalmist of Israel; and in all the ages since he lived his psalms have been sung to the praise of the Lord. It is now about three thousand years since David died, yet to this hour every pious heart loves to commune with God in the beautiful words of this inspired man.

6. When David had reigned forty years, and was grown a very old man, he died in his palace at Jerusalem. The kingdom was inherited by his son Solomon.

Who became king of Israel after the death of Saul? 4. How was a great part of David's life spent? To what condition did he bring the Hebrew nation? 5. This prince was very young when he ascended the throne, but he was wiser in his youth than in his riper years.

7. Not long after he became king, two women came into his presence bringing a little child. Each of the women claimed the child as her own, and they quarrelled violently, as if they would have torn the poor babe asunder. It seemed impossible to find out whose the child really was.

8. "Bring hither a sword," said king Solomon; and immediately one of the attendants brought a sharp sword. "Now," continued Solomon, "that I may not wrong either of these women, the thing in dispute shall be equally divided between them. Cut the child in twain, and let each take half."

9. But when the real mother saw the keen sword glittering over her poor babe, she gave a scream of agony. "Do not slay the child!" she cried. "Give it to this wicked woman. Only let it live, and she may be its mother!"

10. But the other woman showed no pity for the child. "I ask no more than my just rights," she said. "Cut the child in two! I will be content with half." Now Solomon had watched the conduct of the two women, and he knew the true mother by her tenderness for the poor babe. "Give the child alive to her who would not have it slain," he said. "She is its mother."

Building of the Temple.—Visit of the Queen of Sheba.

1. KING David, as I before told you, had increased the power and wealth of the Hebrew nation, so that it had become a great kingdom. Silver and gold were very abundant in the country, and king David had made preparation for the building of a splendid temple in Jerusalem, his capital, to be dedicated to the worship of the true God.

2. The chief event of Solomon's life was the building of this temple. This was done by the special command of the Lord. It was now four hundred and eighty years since the Israelites had come out of Egypt; and in all that time there had been no edifice erected to the worship of God.

CHAPTER XX.—1. What had David done? What of silver and gold among the Hebrews? 2. What was the chief event of Solomon's reign? By whose command was the temple built?

3. Solomon made an agreement with Hiram, king of Tyre, that he would give him a yearly supply of wheat and oil, in exchange for cedar and fir. Tyre was a great commercial city on the coast of the Mediterranean Sea, to the northward of Jerusalem. It belonged to Phoenicia, a country which has the credit of having first engaged in commerce.

4. With the timber which he procured from Tyre, and with a large quantity of hewn stone, Solomon began to build the temple. The front of this building was one hundred and twenty feet long, thirty-five feet broad, and forty-five feet high. It extended around a large square, and with the various buildings attached to it, covered twenty acres of ground.

5. But no pen can describe the richness and splendor of this sacred edifice. The interior was constructed of the most costly kinds of wood; and the walls were carved with figures of cherubim and other beautiful devices. The walls and floors were partly overlaid with gold.

6. Seven years were employed in building this temple. It was finished about three thousand years after the creation, and one thousand years before the birth of Christ. When it was completed, Solomon assembled all the chiefs, and elders, and great men of Israel, in order to dedicate it. The priests brought the ark, containing the two tables of stone which God had given to Moses more than four centuries before.

7. The ark was now placed in the holiest part of the temple. It rested between the broad wings of two cherubim that were overlaid with gold. No sooner was the ark set in its place than a cloud issued forth and filled the temple. This was a token that the Lord was there.

8. After the building of the temple, Solomon became so renowned for his wisdom and magnificence, that the queen of Sheba came from her own dominions to visit him. Her country is supposed to have been in Africa, to the south of Egypt.

9. When she came to Jerusalem, she beheld Solomon seated on a great throne of ivory, overlaid with pure gold. His feet rested on a golden footstool. There were lions of gold about the throne. The king had a majestic look, and the queen of Sheba was astonished at his grandeur; but when they had talked together, she admired his wisdom even more than his magnificence. She acknowledged that the half of his greatness had not been told her.

10. If the queen of Sheba could have seen Solomon a few years afterward, she would have beheld a lamentable change. He turned from the true God, and became an idolater. This wise and righteous king, who had built the sacred temple, now grew so wicked that he built high places for the worship of heathen deities.

11. For this reason God determined to take away the chief part of the kingdom from his descendants. Accordingly, when Solomon was dead, ten of the tribes of Israel revolted against his son Rehoboam.

and Benjamin, these being called the kingdom of Judah. Besides the loss of so large a part of his kingdom, he suffered other misfortunes. Shishak, king of Egypt, made war against him, and took Jerusalem. He carried away the treasures of the temple and of the palace.

2. The other ten tribes of Israel, which had revolted from Rehoboam, were thenceforward governed by kings of their own, the country being called the kingdom of Israel. Most of these kings were wicked men and idolaters. Their palace and seat of government was in the city of Samaria.

3. When the kingdom of Israel had been separated from that of Judah about two hundred and fifty years, it was conquered by Salmaneser, king of Assyria. He made slaves of the Israelites, and carried them to his own country, and few of them ever returned to the land of Canaan.

4. The people of the two tribes of Judah and Benjamin continued to reside in Canaan. They were now called Jews. The royal palace and seat of government were at Jerusalem. Some of the Jewish kings were pious men, but most of them offended God by their sinfulness and idolatry.

5. The whole nation of the Jews were perverse, and underwent many severe inflictions from the wrath of God. In the year 606 B. C., Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, took Jerusalem. He destroyed the temple, and carried the principal people captive to Babylon.

6. Afterward, when Zedekiah was king, Jerusalem was again besieged and taken by Nebuzaradan, a general under Nebuchadnezzar. He broke down the walls of the city, and left nothing standing that could be destroyed. The Jews remained captive in Babylon seventy years.

7. When Babylon was taken by Cyrus, king of Persia, the Jews were permitted to return to their own country. They rebuilt the temple, and resumed their ancient manner of worship. Till the time of Alexander the Great, about 330 B. C., the nation was dependent on the kings of Persia.

8. It is said that Alexander the Great intended to take Jerusalem. But as he advanced with his army, the high priest came forth to meet him, in his robes of office, at the head of a long train of Levites and people. Alexander was so struck with their appearance, that he agreed to spare the city.

9. In the course of the next two centuries, the Egyptians invaded the Jewish kingdom, and afterward the Syrians reduced the inhabitants to bondage. They suffered great calamities from the tyranny of these conquerors.

10. But in the year 166 before the Christian era, Judas Maccabæus, a valiant Jewish leader, drove the Syrians out of the country. When the king of Syria heard of it, he took an oath that he would destroy the whole Jewish nation. But as he was hastening to Jerusalem, he was killed by a fall from his chariot.

11. The descendants of Judas Maccabæus afterward assumed royal authority, and became kings of the Jews. In less than a century, however, the country was subdued by Pompey, a celebrated Roman general. He conferred the government on Antipater, a native of Edom.

12. In the year 37 before the Christian era, the Roman senate decreed that Herod, the son of Antipa-

The Hebrew Prophets.

1. I MUST now glance backward, and say a few words respecting a class of men who had appeared at various times among the Hebrews. These men were called prophets. They held intercourse with God, and he gave them the knowledge of things that were to happen in future years.

2. One of the most remarkable of these prophets was named Elijah. Many wonderful things are told of him. While he was dwelling in a solitary place, the ravens brought him food. He restored the son of a poor widow from death to life.

3. He called down God's vengeance upon the wicked king Ahab, and foretold that the dogs should eat the painted Jezebel, his queen. And all this was so. He caused fire to come down from heaven, and consume three captains, with their soldiers. He divided the river Jordan, by smiting it with his mantle, and passed over on dry ground.

4. At last, when his mission on earth was ended, there came a chariot and horses of fire, and Elijah was borne by a whirlwind up to heaven.

5. Elijah's mantle fell from the fiery chariot. It was caught up by a person named Elisha, and he likewise became a very celebrated prophet. He cursed some little children because they laughed at his bald head; and soon afterward two she-bears tore forty and two of them in pieces.

6. When Elisha was dead, and had lain many months in his sepulchre, another dead man happened to be let down into the same darksome place. But when the corpse touched the hallowed bones of the prophet Elisha, it immediately revived, and became a living man again.

7. Jonah was another prophet. A whale swallowed him, and kept him three days in the depths of the ocean, and then vomited him safely on dry land. Isaiah was also a prophet. He foretold many terrible calamities that were to befall Israel and Judah, and the surrounding nations. Jeremiah bewailed in plaintive accents the future sins and misfortunes of God's people.

8. The prophet Daniel foretold the downfall of Belshazzar, king of Babylon. He was afterward cast into a den of lions in Babylon, at the command of king Darius. The next morning the king looked down into the den, and there was Daniel, alive and well.

9. King Darius then ordered Daniel to be drawn out of the den, and his false accusers to be thrown into it. The moment that these wicked persons touched the bottom, the lions sprang forward and tore them limb from limb.

10. Numerous other prophets appeared at various times, and most of them performed such wonderful works that there could be no doubt of their possessing power from on high. Now it was remarked that all these prophets, or nearly all, spoke of a King, or Ruler, or other illustrious Personage, who was to appear among the Jews.

11. Although they foretold the most dreadful calamities to the people, still there was this one thing to comfort them. A descendant of king David was to renew the glory of the Jewish race, and establish his sway over the whole world.

12. This great event was expected to happen in about fifteen hundred years after Moses led the Israelites out of Egypt. And it did then happen. When the appointed period had elapsed, there appeared a star in a certain quarter of the heavens.

13. Three wise men from the east beheld the star, and were guided by it to a stable in the little village of Bethlehem. It was about five miles from Jerusalem. There, in a manger, lay the infant Jesus!

12. About how long after Moses did Christ appear? What of a star in the east? 13. What of Bethlehem? Whom did the wise men find in a manger?

THE CRUCIFIXION.

Crucifixion of the Saviour.—Destruction of Jerusalem.

1. THE greatest event, not only in the history of the Jews, but in the history of the world, had now taken place. This was the coming of the Saviour. But my readers must not expect me to relate the whole story of this Divine Personage in the little book which I am now writing.

CHAPTER XXII.—1. What is the greatest event that has occurred on the globe? How long since Christ was born? How long after the creation did Christ appear? ANS. Four thousand and four years.

2. The Jews rejected him. They had been looking for an earthly potentate; and when they beheld the meek and lowly Jesus, they despised and hated him. From the time that he proclaimed himself the Messiah, they sought to take his life.

3. They brought him before the judgment-seat of Pontius Pilate, who was then the Roman governor of Judea. Pilate sentenced him to death, and the Saviour of the world was crucified between two thieves. He however rose from the dead, after being buried three days, and ascended into heaven!

4. Such is the brief story of Jesus Christ. After his death, his apostles proceeded to preach his gospel throughout the land of Canaan and other countries. Of all the apostles, Paul was the most active and successful.

5. He visited various parts of Palestine, Syria, Asia Minor, and Greece. At length he was sent as a prisoner to Rome, to be tried by the emperor. He went with other prisoners in a small vessel nearly the whole length of the Mediterranean Sea.

6. In the course of the voyage, the vessel was wrecked upon the island of Malta during a terrible gale. Soon after this Paul proceeded on his voyage, and reached Rome sixty-one years after Christ. Here he remained in prison a long time; but many persons came to visit him, and he preached to them all the doctrines of Christianity. Paul was at length released, but it is believed that he was beheaded by order of the emperor Nero.

7. The apostle had now sown the seeds of the gospel in many countries, and the fruits began to appear. Nearly all the civilized world were worshippers of the Roman gods; but this heathen faith gradually gave way before the gospel, and in process of time, Christianity was diffused over nearly the whole of Europe.

8. Long before the crucifixion of Christ, the Jews had become completely subject to the Roman power. But about forty years after his death, they rebelled against their masters.

9. Titus, the Roman general, immediately marched to besiege Jerusalem. A most dreadful war ensued. The inhabitants were shut up in the city, and soon were greatly in want of food. Hunger compelled one of the Jewish women to devour her own child. When

Titus heard of it, he was so shocked that he vowed the destruction of the whole Jewish race, and more than a hundred thousand persons perished during this frightful siege!

10. At length the city was taken in the night-time and set on fire. The flames caught the temple. The hills on which Jerusalem is situated were all blazing like so many volcanoes. The blood of the slaughtered inhabitants hissed upon the burning brands.

11. Ninety-seven thousand Jews were taken prisoners. Some were sold as slaves. The conquerors exposed others to be torn in pieces by wild beasts. A few people remained in Jerusalem, and partly rebuilt the city. But it was again destroyed by a Roman emperor named Adrian. He levelled the walls and houses with the earth, and sowed the ground with salt.

12. The Jews were scattered all over the world. This catastrophe had long been prophesied. There are now between three and four millions of them in different parts of the earth. They still keep their religion, and many of their old customs. Jerusalem has been partially restored, but it is now very different from what it was in the time of our Saviour.

Cyrus conquers Babylon.—His Death.

1. IN a former part of this book I have told the story of Assyria, the first great empire of ancient times. It was situated, as you remember, on the borders of the rivers Tigris and Euphrates. In this region the climate is warm, and the soil exceedingly fruitful. Here the human race seemed to multiply in the most wonderful manner.

2. Thus many nations soon sprang up and increased, till the whole surrounding country was filled with multitudes of people. Assyria at one time extended its dominion over most of these nations; but at length Persia became a powerful monarchy, and not only Assyria, but a great many other nations became subject to it.

3. The first inhabitants of Persia were descended from Elam, the eldest son of Shem. They were therefore called Elamites. Very little is known of their history till about eighteen centuries after the deluge. Cyrus, a great conqueror, then ascended the throne of Persia. Some historians have spoken of Cyrus as a wise and excellent monarch, but it appears probable that he was no better than most other conquerors.

4. Cyrus continued to extend his empire in all directions. Media, Parthia, Mesopotamia, Armenia, Syria, Canaan, and parts of Arabia, were subdued, and made portions of his kingdom. One of his chief exploits was the taking of the city of Babylon, the capital of Babylonia. The walls of this great city were so thick and high, that it would have been impossible for an enemy either to break them down, or to climb over them. It was therefore a very difficult matter to take this strong place.

5. Now the channel of the river Euphrates ran directly through the centre of Babylon. Cyrus caused deep ditches to be dug around the city, so that he could draw off all the water of the river, and leave the channel dry. When the ditches were completed, he waited for a proper time to draw off the river.

6. On a certain night, Belshazzar, king of Babylon, gave a great festival. His guards, and all the inhabitants, were eating and drinking, thoughtless of the enemy on the outside of their walls. The Persians seized this opportunity to throw open the dams of the ditches.

7. The whole water of the Euphrates immediately flowed into them. Cyrus put himself at the head of the Persian army; and where the mighty river had so lately rushed along, there were now the trampling footsteps of an innumerable host. Thus the Persian troops entered the city.

8. The guards of the royal palace were surprised and slain. Belshazzar heard the clash of arms, and the shrieks of dying men, as he sat with his nobles in the banquet-hall. But it was too late to escape. They were all slaughtered, and their blood was mingled with the wine of the festival. Thus Babylon was taken, and Babylonia became a part of Persia.

9. Cyrus afterward marched against the Scythians, a brave nation who dwelt to the north-east of the Caspian Sea. But Tomyris, their queen, collected an army, and fought a bloody battle with the Persians. Cyrus was defeated and taken prisoner. The son of the Scythian queen had been killed in the battle, and she resolved to avenge his death. She ordered her attendants to kill Cyrus, which was done in a horrible manner.

Reign of Cambyses.

1. CAMBYSES, the son of Cyrus, seems to have been a worse man than his father. He was addicted to drinking wine; and Prexaspes, a favorite courtier, hinted to him that he injured his health and faculties by this practice. When Prexaspes had done speaking, Cambyses called for wine, and drank off several large goblets. "Now we shall see," said he, "whether the wine has dimmed my sight, or rendered my hand unsteady!"

2. He then called for a bow and arrow, and ordered the son of Prexaspes to stand at the farther end of the hall. The boy did so; and while his father looked on, the cruel Cambyses took deliberate aim at the poor child, and shot an arrow directly through his heart.

3. I am very sorry, my dear young reader, to tell you such horrible stories as these. I would not tell them but that they are true, and they may teach us good and useful lessons. They may show us how wicked and miserable even kings may be.

4. But I must go on with my story. Cambyses made war against the Egyptians. At the siege of one of their cities, he contrived a very cunning method to take the place. The Egyptians believed that cats and dogs were sacred, and they worshipped them as gods. This foolish superstition induced Cambyses to collect all the cats and dogs in the country, and place them in front of his army.

5. The Egyptians were afraid to discharge their arrows, lest they should kill some of these divine animals. The Persians therefore marched onward, with the dogs barking and the cats mewling before them, and the city was taken without the slightest resistance.

6. The chief deity of the Egyptians was a great bull, to whom they had given the name of Apis. Cambyses killed this holy bull, and bestowed the flesh on some of his soldiers for dinner. Soon afterward, to the great joy of the Egyptians, he killed himself accidentally with his own sword.

3. What lessons may we learn from these painful tales of ancient kings? 4, 5. How did Cambyses capture an Egyptian city? 6. What of the Egyptian god Apis? How was Cambyses slain?

Expedition of Xerxes into Greece.

1. ANOTHER king of the Persians was named Darius. He was likewise a cruel tyrant. When he was going on an expedition against the Scythians, he compelled an old man's three sons to join his army. These were all the children the old man had. He came into the king's presence, and earnestly entreated that one of his sons might be left at home.

2. "I am very poor and infirm," said the old man. "I am unable to work. If you take away all my three children, I shall starve to death." "Indeed," answered king Darius in a very compassionate tone, "then they shall all three remain with you!" Immediately he ordered the three young men to be slain, and gave their dead bodies to their poor old father.

3. While Darius was preparing to make war on Greece, he fell sick and died. His successor was his son Xerxes. This monarch invaded Greece with nearly two millions of men on land. and more than half a million on board his fleet.

4. You may well believe that a king who could collect so large an army had great wealth and power. At this time the Persian empire was of vast extent, but still Xerxes wished to conquer other nations. His capital was Persepolis, one of the most splendid cities that ever existed.

5. When Xerxes arrived in Greece, it so happened that a great mountain, called Mount Athos, stood directly in the way he wished his ships to sail. He therefore wrote a letter to the mountain, commanding it to get out of his way; but Mount Athos would not stir one step.

6. In order to bring his land forces from Asia into Greece, Xerxes built a bridge of boats across a part of the sea called the Hellespont. But the waves broke the bridge in pieces, and Xerxes commanded the sea to be whipped for its disrespectful conduct.

7. The greater part of the cities of Greece submitted to Xerxes; but Sparta and Athens made a stubborn resistance. Though they could muster but few soldiers, these were far more valiant than the Persians.

3. Who was the successor of Darius? How large was the army of Xerxes when he invaded Greece? Where is Greece? ANS. In Europe. How far from Persia? ANS. About fifteen hundred miles. In which direction from Persia? ANS. North-west. 4. What of the Persian empire in the time of Xerxes? What of Persepolis? 5. What of Mount Athos? 6. What of the Hellespont? 7. What of Greece?

8. At Thermopylæ, Xerxes wished to lead his army through a narrow passage between a mountain and the sea. Leonidas, king of Sparta, opposed him with six thousand men. Seventy thousand Persians were slain in the attempt to break through the pass.

9. At last Leonidas found that the Persians would not be kept back any longer. He therefore sent away all but three hundred men, and with these he remained at the pass of Thermopylæ. The immense host of the Persians came onward like a flood; and only one soldier of the three hundred escaped to Sparta to tell that the rest were slain.

10. But Xerxes did not long continue to triumph in Greece. His fleet was defeated at Salamis, and his army at Plataea. In escaping, he was forced to cross the Hellespont in a little fishing-vessel; for the sea, in spite of being whipped, had again broken his bridge of boats.

11. Not long after his return to Persia, the proud Xerxes was murdered in his bed. This event happened about the year 465 before Christ. His son, Artaxerxes, made peace with the Greeks.

12. The story of Xerxes may teach us the folly of ambition. Had he been content with staying at home and governing his people so as to make them happy, he might have been happy himself. But having too much, he still strove to acquire more, and thus brought misery upon himself and millions of his fellow men.

Affairs of Persia till the Saracen Conquest.

1. BETWEEN one and two centuries after the death of Xerxes, that is, about 330 years before Christ, Persia was invaded by Alexander the Great, king of Macedon. Darius the Third was then king of Persia. Being defeated by Alexander, two of his own subjects bound him with golden chains and put him in a covered cart.

2. They intended to murder Darius, and get possession of the kingdom. But Alexander came suddenly on the conspirators, and forced them to take flight. As they rode away, they discharged their darts at Darius, and slew him.

12. What may the story of Xerxes teach us? How might he have been happy?

CHAPTER XXVI.—1. When was Persia invaded by Alexander the Great? Who was then king of Persia? What happened to Darius? 2. How was he killed?

3. After this time Persia became subject to the Parthians, whose country had formerly been a province of the Persian empire. It continued under the government of the Parthian kings nearly five hundred years. About the year 230 after the Christian era, a Persian, named Artaxares, excited a rebellion and made himself king.

4. His descendants occupied the throne for many generations. One of the most distinguished was Chosroes the Great, who lived about six hundred years after Christ. He made war against the Romans, and ravaged their provinces in Asia.

5. One of his successors was likewise named Chosroes. This hateful monster caused his own father to be beaten to death. But Heaven punished him by the wickedness of his eldest son, whose name was Siroes. He dethroned his father, and murdered all his brothers in his presence.

6. Siroes then ordered his father to be thrown into a dungeon. Here, instead of killing the old king at once, he tormented him for a long time by pricking him with the points of arrows ! Chosroes died at last, in great agony.

7. These things may seem too shocking to tell, but it is perhaps necessary that my young readers should know how very cruel men may become when given up to the influence of passion. Let us be thankful that the religion of Christ has taught us to look upon such crimes as were often practised by Persian kings, with horror and disgust.

8. Isdigertes, who ascended the throne in the year 630 of the Christian era, was the last of this dynasty of Persian kings. During his reign, the Saracens, a warlike people of Arabia, invaded Persia, and conquered it. Isdigertes was killed in battle.

9. Persia then became a part of the Saracen empire. It was ruled by the caliphs who resided at Bagdad, a splendid city which they built on the river Tigris.

10. This celebrated place was founded in 672, and once contained two millions of inhabitants. It was then filled with costly buildings, but it is now in ruins. The modern city is poorly built, and comparatively insignificant.

7. How may men become very cruel ? For what should we be thankful ? 8. When did Isdigertes ascend the throne ? What of him ? What did the Saracens do during his reign ? 9. CHAPTER XXVII.—ASIA CONTINUED.

Modern History of Persia.

1. IN the year 1258 of the Christian era, the empire of the Saracens was subverted by the Tartars. Persia was governed by them for a considerable time. It was afterward ruled by monarchs called Sophis, or Shahs. The first of these was named Ismael, a man of Saracen descent. He took possession of the throne by violence, and reigned twenty-three years.

2. The greatest of these monarchs was named Shah Abbas. He ascended the throne in 1589. Abbas fought against the Turks, and gained many splendid victories. He also deprived the Portuguese of their possessions in the East.

3. But the best of all the kings of this family was Shah Husseyn; and he was also the last, and the most unfortunate. He began to reign in the year 1694. Husseyn and his subjects met with many disasters, and he was at length compelled to surrender his throne to a rival.

CHAPTER XXVII.—1. What of the empire of the Saracens in the year 1258? How was Persia governed? What of Ismael? 2. Who was Shah Abbas? When did he ascend the throne? What did he do? 3. What of Shah Husseyn?

4. But before he took off the crown from his head, Husseyn went on foot through the principal streets of Ispahan, which was then the capital. The people thronged around him with tears and lamentations. The excellent and kind-hearted monarch endeavored to comfort them.

5. He told them that the new king, whose name was Mahmoud, would not love them better than he himself had, but that he would know better how to govern them, and how to conquer their enemies. So the good Husseyn took off his crown, which had been only a trouble to him, and bade his people farewell.

6. In 1730, Kouli Khan took possession of the throne of Persia. He called himself Nadir Shah. He was a famous conqueror and tyrant, and was assassinated in his tent after a reign of about seventeen years.

7. Since his death there has been much bloodshed in Persia. Ambitious men have often aspired to the throne, and involved the country in civil war. The present ruler is said to be a better man than many of his predecessors.

4, 5. Describe the manner in which he surrendered his crown. 6. When did Kouli Khan come to the throne? What other name had he? What of him? 7 What of Persia since the death of Kouli Khan? What is said of the present ruler?

8. The king generally resides in the city of Teheran. But he has a beautiful palace at Ispahan, called the Palace of Forty Pillars. Each of the forty pillars is supported by four lions of white marble. The whole edifice looks as if it were built of pearl, and silver and gold, and precious stones.

9. I have now done with the story of Persia. Like that of most other eastern countries, it abounds in tales of cruelty, battle, and bloodshed. In ancient times the people worshipped the sun, and bowed down to idols. But for more than a thousand years, they have been believers in a false prophet, called Mahomet.

10. The climate of Persia is mild, and the country abounds in beautiful and fragrant trees, shrubs, and flowers. The people are less warlike than in former times. The rich live in splendid palaces, and the poor in mud huts. The kingdom is small, compared with the vast empire of Xerxes. Persepolis, the ancient capital, is now a heap of ruins. Teheran and Ispahan, the two principal cities, are of comparatively modern date.

the Persian character; yet it is not altogether bad. The people are very fond of reading, and telling instructive stories; many of these were written ages since, and are exceedingly beautiful. Early History of China.

1. THE territory of the Chinese empire is nearly the same at the present day as it has been from the earliest records. It is bounded on the north by Asiatic Russia, on the east by the Pacific Ocean, and on the south by the Chinese Sea and Farther India. On the west, there are mountains and sandy deserts, which divide it from Thibet and Tartary.

2. This empire is very ancient, and has continued longer than any other that has ever existed. Its history goes back four thousand years from the present time. The name of its founder was Fohi, whom some writers suppose to have been the same as Noah.

3. There have been twenty-two dynasties, or separate families of emperors, who have successively ruled over China. If their history were to be minutely related, it would fill at least twenty-two great books. Yet few of the emperors did any thing that was worthy of remembrance.

CHAPTER XXVIII.—1. What of the Chinese empire? Its boundaries? What divides it from Thibet and Tartary? 2. What of the antiquity and duration of the Chinese empire? Who was its founder? What do some writers suppose? 3. What of the dynasties or families that have ruled over China?

4. We find nothing very remarkable about them till the reign of Chaus, who lived about a thousand years before the Christian era. He was extremely fond of hunting, and used to gallop into the midst of the rice-fields in pursuit of game. In this manner he did so much mischief, that his subjects resolved to destroy him.

5. There was a large river, which the emperor was often in the habit of crossing. On the shore of this river, the people placed a boat, as if for the accommodation of Chaus. The next time that the emperor returned from hunting, he and his attendants got on board the boat, and set sail for the opposite shore.

6. But the boat had been contrived on purpose for his destruction. In the middle of the river it fell to pieces, and all on board were drowned. Thus, to the great joy of his subjects, the emperor Chaus went down among the fishes, and never again came hunting in their rice-fields.

7. The emperor Ching, who reigned about two thousand years ago, built a great wall, in order to protect his dominions against the Tartars. It was forty-five feet high, and eighteen feet thick, and it extended over mountains and valleys, a distance of fifteen hundred miles. This wall still remains.

8. When Ching had completed the wall, he thought himself so very great an emperor, that none of his predecessors were worth remembering. He therefore ordered all the historical writings and public records to be burnt. He also caused four hundred learned men, who were addicted to writing histories, to be buried alive.

9. If the emperor Ching could have caught poor old Peter Parley, he certainly would have buried him likewise, with his four hundred learned brethren; and so the world would have lost this Universal History!

Anecdotes of the Chinese Emperors—Confucius.—Modern History of China.

1. THE emperor Vati lived about the time of the Christian era. This emperor was desirous of reigning till the world should come to an end, and perhaps longer. He therefore spent his time in endeavoring to brew a liquor that would make him immortal. But unfortunately, before the liquor was fit to drink, the emperor died.

2. Another emperor, instead of attending to the affairs of the nation, applied himself wholly to study. His prime minister took advantage of his negligence, and raised a rebellion against him. When the emperor heard the shouts of the rebels, he shut his book, and put on his armor. But on ascending the ramparts of the city, he saw that it was too late to resist. He then returned to his library, which contained one hundred and forty thousand volumes.

3. The emperor knew that these books had been the means of his losing the vast empire of China, by withdrawing his attention from the government. He therefore set fire to them with his own hands, and the whole library was consumed. The rebels afterward put him to death.

4. The emperor Si-given began to reign in the year 617 after the Christian era. He dwelt in a magnificent palace. After his death, his son came to the palace, and was astonished at its splendor and beauty. "Such a residence is good for nothing but to corrupt a monarch, and render him proud," exclaimed he. Accordingly he commanded this great and costly palace to be burned to the ground.

5. Chwang-tsong, who had been a brave soldier, was made emperor about eight hundred years ago. He was a person of very frugal habits. It was one of his singularities, that he never slept in a bed, but always on the bare ground, with a bell fastened to his neck. If he turned over in his sleep, the ringing of the bell would awaken him; and he then considered it time to get up.

6. In the year 1209, Genghis Khan invaded China with an immense army of Tartars. He and his descendants conquered the whole empire, and governed it during many years.

7. The emperor Ching-tsa ascended the throne three or four centuries ago. A mine was discovered during his reign, and precious stones of great value were dug out of it. Some of them were brought to the emperor, but he looked scornfully at them.

8. "Do you call these precious stones?" cried he. "What are they good for? They can neither clothe the people, nor satisfy their hunger." So saying, he or-

9. About a hundred years ago, in the reign of Yong-tching, there was the most terrible earthquake that had ever been known. It shook down nearly all the houses in the city of Pekin, and buried one hundred thousand people. A still greater number perished in the surrounding country.

10. Confucius, the most famous man that China has ever produced, lived about five hundred years before Christ. He was a very learned man, and wrote many books. He delivered lectures, and he had many disciples or scholars, who followed him about in all his travels.

11. In 1840, a war broke out between China and Great Britain. The English sent a fleet against the Chinese, which took Canton and several other places. Peace was made two years afterward, and somewhat later the Chinese made a treaty of commerce with the United States.

Cities of China.—Manners of the Chinese.

1. I MUST now give you a short account of the cities and people of China as they are at this day. Nankin was formerly the capital of China. Pekin, which contains two millions of inhabitants, is now the capital. The emperor's palace stands in a part of Pekin called the Tartar city.

2. The walls of Pekin are built of brick, and are nearly one hundred feet high, so that they hide the whole city. They are so thick that sentinels on horse-back ride round the city on the top of the wall. There are nine gates, which have marble arches, and are prodigiously high.

3. The people of China have an olive complexion, with black hair, and small black eyes. The chief part of their dress is a long loose robe, which is fastened round the body with a silken girdle. In this girdle they carry a knife, and two sticks for eating instead of a knife and fork.

4. The Chinese are great fibbers, and are very much addicted to cheating. There are some horrible customs among them. For instance, if parents have a greater number of children than they can conveniently support, they are permitted to throw them into a river!

5. The people are not nice about what they eat. Dead puppy-dogs are publicly sold in the streets for food. Rats and mice are frequently eaten. There is a sort of bird's nest which is made into a jelly, and is considered a great delicacy.

6. The Chinese ladies are chiefly remarkable for their little feet. A grown woman in China is able to wear smaller shoes than a young child in America. But their feet are kept merely for show, and are almost good for nothing to walk with.

7. Religion among the Chinese is in a very sad condition. The people are given up to idolatry. Almost all religions are tolerated, although but little reverence is paid to any. There are more temples than can be easily numbered.

8. In China there are some very singular punishments. Sometimes a wooden frame weighing two hundred pounds is put round a man's neck. He is compelled to carry it about with him wherever he goes; and so long as he wears it, he can neither feed himself, nor lie down.

9. One of the most curious customs of China was that of excluding, until lately, all foreigners from the country. A few American and European merchants were permitted to reside at Canton, but they were obliged to leave their wives at Macao. No other strangers were permitted in the kingdom. The people think that their manners and customs are the best in the world, and they do not wish foreigners to come and introduce new notions. The treaty of peace with England, in 1842, however, opened five ports to foreign nations.

10. China has a great many large cities, and these are filled with countless numbers of inhabitants. They have many ingenious arts and manufactures, they till the earth with great skill, and their gardens are managed with special care.

11. Tea is brought to us from this country, with a great variety of other articles. You will not be surprised that we get so many things from China, when you know that the country contains three hundred and ninety millions of inhabitants, that is, six times as many as in all America.

History of Japan.

1. JAPAN is an extensive empire, containing twenty-six millions of inhabitants. These live to the east of China, upon several islands, of which Nippon is the largest. The people live crowded together in large and well-kept cities, and resemble the Chinese in their religion, manners, and customs, and the American Indians in their personal appearance.

2. It is uncertain whether the ancient nations knew any thing of this empire, and its early history is quite unknown. It is probable that it has remained with little change for thousands of years. Its existence was first ascertained by the Europeans about the year 1400, but as strangers are not permitted to travel in the country, very little has been found out concerning it. The people are idolaters.

3. Up to the year 1853, the Japanese had excluded all ships from their ports, except those of the Dutch. In this year, however, a fleet of seven American vessels, the majority of them steam-ships, commanded by Commodore Perry, and sent out by the government of the United States, arrived in the bay of Jeddo. The ships anchored in waters never visited by a foreign craft before.

4. After some delay, Commodore Perry succeeded in laying before the emperor of Japan, the desire of the American government to open a trade with his people, and their wish to enter into a treaty with him.

5. Though the Japanese have for centuries lived in isolation, and do not yet seem altogether willing to enter into intimate relations with other countries, yet this desire was acceded to, and a treaty of peace and commerce was made. By this, American merchants are allowed to visit and to trade at two ports in Japan.

6. The emperor, or Tycoon of Japan, sent an embassy—the first ever accredited to a foreign nation—to Washington in 1860, to exchange ratifications of the treaty. This embassy, consisting of several princes, officers, and interpreters, were brought to America in the steam-frigate Powhatan, and sent home in the Niagara.

7. They remained about two months, during which their expenses were paid by the American government. They went away apparently well pleased, and satisfied that they had accomplished the object of their visit.

8. In 1862, a similar embassy was sent by the Japanese to Europe. Since then, large numbers of their young men have been educated both there and in America. Immense quantities of books, machinery, cutlery and valuable instruments are bought by them in New York, and sent home over the new Pacific Railroad.

9. The Japanese seem to wish, too, to know something of the history of the nations from which they have so long lived apart. For every now and then, the publishers of this little book which you are now studying, receive an order from far off Japan for two, four, six hundred copies of Parley's Universal History.

PILGRIMS OF ARABIA GOING TO THE TOMB OF MAHOMET.

Origin of the Arabs—Rise of Mahomet.

1. THE Arabs are descended from Ishmael, a son of Abraham. It was foretold of him, that “his hand should be against every man, and every man’s hand against him.” In all ages this prophecy has been fulfilled among his posterity; for they appear to have been enemies to the rest of mankind, and mankind enemies to them.

CHAPTER XXXII.—1. From whom are the Arabs descended? What was prophesied of Ishmael? Has the prophecy been fulfilled?

2. Arabia consists of several separate states, or nations. The whole country is bounded on the north by Palestine, Mesopotamia, &c.; on the east by the Persian Gulf and the Gulf of Ormuz, on the south by the Indian Ocean, and west by the Red Sea.

3. The Arabs have always been wandering tribes, and have dwelt in tents among the trackless deserts which cover a large portion of their country. Their early history is very imperfectly known. The first event that is worth recording, was the birth of Mahomet. This took place at Mecca, a city on the borders of the Red Sea, in the year 570 of the Christian era.

4. Till the age of twenty-five, Mahomet was a camel-driver in the desert. He afterward spent much of his time in solitude. His dwelling was a lonesome cave, where he pretended to be employed in prayer and meditation. When he was forty years old, he set up for a prophet.

5. He publicly proclaimed that God had sent him to convert the world to a new religion. The people of Mecca would not at first believe Mahomet. He was born among them, and they knew that he had been a camel-driver, and was no holier than themselves. Besides, he pretended that he had ridden up to heaven on an ass, in company with the angel Gabriel; and many of his stories were as ridiculous as this.

6. So the men of Mecca threatened to slay Mahomet, and he was therefore forced to flee to Medina, another city of Arabia. There, in the course of two or three years, he made a great number of converts. He told his disciples that they must compel others to adopt his religion by force, if they refused to do so by fair means.

7. This conduct brought on a war between the disciples of Mahomet and all the other Arabians. Mahomet won many victories, and soon made himself master of the whole country, and of Syria besides.

8. Mahomet was now not only a pretended prophet, but a real king. He was a very terrible man, even to his own followers; for whenever he was angry, a vein between his eyebrows used to swell and turn black. This gave him a grim and frightful aspect.

9. His power continued to increase; but he died suddenly, at the age of sixty-three. His religion was diffused over nearly all Asia and Africa, and is still believed by many millions of people. Its precepts are contained in a book called the Koran. Mahomet affirmed that the angel Gabriel brought him the doctrines contained in this book from heaven.

Sequel of the History of the Arabs or Saracens.

1. THOSE of the Arabians who followed Mahomet were called Saracens. After their leader's death, they conquered the whole of Turkey in Asia, and many other countries. The capital of their empire was the city of Bagdad, on the river Tigris, which I have already mentioned.

2. One of the successors of Mahomet was Ali, his son-in-law. He was opposed by Ayesha, Mahomet's widow. This woman was suspected of having murdered her husband.

3. She raised an army, and led them to battle against Ali. During the conflict, Ayesha sat in a sort of cage or litter, on the back of a camel. The camel's rein was held by one of her soldiers; and it is said that seventy soldiers were killed, one after another, while holding the rein. Finally, Ali was victorious, and confirmed his sway over all the disciples of Mahomet, and over the countries which they had won.

4. The Saracen empire was thus established. The kings were called caliphs. They reigned at Bagdad for the space of six hundred and twenty years. One of the most distinguished of them was Mahmud Gazui. He was a great conqueror, and added a part of India to his dominions.

5. A poor man once complained to Mahmud Gazui that a soldier had turned him and his family out of doors, and had kept possession of his house all night. When the caliph heard this, he suspected that the soldier was his own son. "If he ill-treats you again, let me know," said he.

6. Accordingly, a few nights afterward, the poor man told the caliph that the same soldier had turned him out of his house again. The caliph took his cimeter and went to the house; but before entering, he caused all the lights to be extinguished, so that his heart might not be softened by the sight of the offender.

7. When all was darkness, he entered the house, and struck the soldier dead with his cimeter. "Now bring a light," cried the caliph. His attendants did so. Mahmoud Gazui held a torch over the bloody corpse of the soldier, and found that his suspicions were correct. He had killed his own son!

8. The last of the caliphs was named Mostasem. He was so proud and vainglorious that he considered his subjects unworthy to behold his face. He therefore never appeared in public without wearing a veil of golden tissue. Whenever he rode through the streets, thousands would flock to get a glimpse of his golden veil.

9. But at length Hulaki, chief of the Tartars, took the city of Bagdad. He stripped off the golden veil of the caliph Mostasem, and put him alive into a leathern bag. The bag, with the poor caliph in it, was dragged by Moses through the same streets where he had formerly ridden in triumph.

10. Thus perished the caliph Mostasem, being bruised to death on the pavements. With him ended the empire of the Saracens, in the year 1258 of the Christian era. But the termination of this empire did not put an end to the religion of Mahomet.

About Syria, Phœnicia, and Asia Minor.

1. I WILL now give you a short account of Syria which lay to the north of Palestine. It was bounded north by Asia Minor, on the east by the river Euphrates and Arabia, on the south by Palestine and a part of Arabia, and west by the Mediterranean Sea.

2. Syria is frequently mentioned in the Bible. The people were engaged in almost constant wars with the Jews, from the time of David nearly to the time of Christ, when it became a Roman province.

3. At this period its capital was Antioch, which was one of the most splendid cities in the world. This was the native place of St. Luke, and here both St. Peter and St. Paul lived for some time. Here, too, the followers of Christ were first called Christians.

4. Damascus, another city of Syria, one hundred and thirty-six miles to the north of Jerusalem, appears to have been known ever since the time of Abraham. It is frequently mentioned in the Bible, and here St. Paul was miraculously converted to the Christian faith.

5. This city was famous in later times for making the best swords, sabres, and other cutlery; but the art which the people once possessed is now lost. The inhabitants of this city were also celebrated for manufacturing beautiful silks, to which the name of damask was given, from the place where they were made.

6. Another place in Syria mentioned in the Bible was Tadmor, sometimes called "Tadmor in the desert;" this was built by Solomon for the convenience of his traders; it was ten miles in extent, but it is now in ruins. The splendid remains of this place, consisting of columns and other things beautifully sculptured in stone, show that it must have been a rich and powerful city. In modern times it is called Palmyra.

7. At the distance of thirty-seven miles north-west of Damascus, are the remains of Balbec, a very splendid city in the time of the apostles, and then called Heliopolis. It is now in ruins, and contains scarcely more than a thousand inhabitants.

8. I must not forget to mention Phœnicia, which lay along the border of the Mediterranean Sea; it contained the cities of Tyre, Sidon, Ptolemais, and other celebrated places. In very early times, the Phœnicians were famous for taking the lead in commerce, navigation, and other arts. They were then an independent nation, but in after-times their country became a province of Syria.

9. Syria is at the present day governed by the Turks, and like every other country under their sway, is stamped with an aspect of desolation and decay. The term Syria is now applied, not only to what anciently bore that name, but to Palestine also.

10. Asia Minor, or Natolia, as it is now called, lies at the north-eastern corner of the Mediterranean Sea, it is a kind of peninsula, bounded on the north by the Euxine or Black Sea; on the west by the Ægean Sea; and on the east by Syria, Mesopotamia and Armenia.

11. It is about six hundred miles in length, from east to west, and four hundred in breadth. It is at present under the government of Turkey, and its inhabitants are mostly believers in Mahomet. The chief city now is Smyrna, to which many vessels go from this country, and bring back figs, dates, and other fruits.

12. Asia Minor appears to have been settled in very early times. Several kingdoms have arisen and flourished here at different periods, but it has never been the seat of any great empire. The kingdom of Lydia, in Asia Minor, existed as early as eight hundred years before Christ.

9. What of Syria? To what is this name now applied? 10. Situation and boundaries of Asia Minor? 11. Its extent? Government? Inhabitants? What of Smyrna? 12. What of Asia Minor? What of Lydia?

13. The last king of Lydia was Croesus, who was so famous for his great riches, that to this day we say, "As rich as Croesus." But in spite of his wealth, he was conquered by Cyrus, king of Persia, 548 B. C.

14. From this period, Lydia, with a great part of Asia Minor, continued subject to the Persian empire till the time of Alexander, about 330 B. C., when it was conquered by that famous leader.

15. Three hundred years before Christ, Pontus, which had once been a part of Lydia, became an independent country. It continued to flourish for many years, and Mithridates VII. successfully maintained a war with the Romans for a long time.

16. By his skill and courage, he baffled the best generals of the empire. But at length, in the year 64 B. C., he was conquered, and his kingdom, with the rest of Asia Minor, was subjected to the Roman dominion.

17. Notwithstanding the wars in Asia Minor, the country became filled with people, and superb cities rose up in various parts of it. Ephesus, situated in Lydia, was a splendid place, and it had a temple so magnificent that it was called one of the seven wonders of the world.

13. What can you say of Croesus? 14. What of Lydia? By whom was it conquered? 15. What of Pontus? Mithridates VII.? 16. By whom was Mithridates conquered? 17. What of Ephesus?

18. This temple was one hundred and twenty years in building; but a man named Erostratus, wishing to make himself remembered, set it on fire, and it was burned to the ground.

19. There were also many other fine cities in Asia Minor, several of which are mentioned in the New Testament. Among these was Tarsus, the birthplace of Paul; also, Pergamos, Thyatira, Sardis, Philadelphia, and Laodicea, which are spoken of in the book of Revelations.

20. Through the labors of Paul, Barnabas, Silas, Timothy, Luke, and perhaps others, Christianity was planted at an early date in nearly all the divisions of Asia Minor.

A brief Review of several Nations.

1. I HAVE now related the history of the most celebrated countries in Asia. But there are several other territories, and some of them very extensive, of which I can only say a few words in this little book.

18. Temple of Diana? How was it destroyed? 19. What other cities were there in Asia Minor? 20. Who planted Christianity in Asia Minor?

2. In ancient times, the Scythians inhabited the northern parts of Asia. They were a warlike and a savage people, and very expert with the bow and arrow. Many of the Asiatic and European kings endeavored to subdue them, but were generally defeated.

3. At different times, vast numbers of the Scythians used to overrun the more civilized countries that lay to the south of them. A tribe of Scythians founded the powerful empire of Parthia, which afterward extended its sway over Persia and other countries. This empire began in the year 250 B. C., and continued five hundred years.

4. In more modern times, the regions inhabited by the Scythians have been called Tartary. The people are not much more civilized than they formerly were. More than one celebrated conqueror has arisen among the Tartars.

5. India, which we call the East Indies, was very little known to the people who lived to the westward in ancient times. Semiramis invaded it, and likewise Alexander the Great, and several other conquerors.

CHAPTER XXXV.—2. What of the Scythians? Where did they live? 3. What of Parthia? 4. What is the name given to the countries formerly inhabited by the Scythians, Parthians, &c.? Do the Tartars remain nearly the same as the ancient Scythians, Parthians, &c.? 5. What of India or Hindostan? Who invaded it?

The Hindoos of the present day are an interesting people, but addicted to idolatry.

6. India consists of Hindostan, and of an extensive region to the eastward of it. Within the last hundred years, the English have gained great power in this part of the world. They made war against the native rulers, and reduced them to subjection. The Indians revolted in 1857, under Nena Sahib, but after great slaughter on both sides, were again reduced to submission.

7. The Turks, or Ottomans, are a people who had their origin in Asia. But as they have been settled in Europe during several centuries, it will be more proper and convenient to speak of them in the history of that quarter of the globe.

8. There are several other kingdoms of Asia, of which the history is little known, or quite uninteresting. Among these are Siam, Cochin China, the Birman Empire, Cabul, Beloochistan, and some others. Besides these, the northern portions of Asia are occupied by various tribes of Tartars, who appear to have wandered over these regions for ages, leaving no story behind them. The emperor of Russia rules over these vast dominions.

6. What of the English in Hindostan? What of the Turks or Ottomans? 8. What other nations of Asia are there of which the history is little known? What of the northern portions of Asia?

ADAM AND EVE DRIVEN FROM EDEN.

Review of the History of Asia.

1. LET us now go back and review the history of Asia. In this quarter of the globe the most wonderful events in the history of mankind have happened. Here Adam and Eve were created ; here they sinned, and here they were driven from the garden of Eden; and on the banks of the Euphrates all the people dwelt who lived before the flood.

2. It was in Asia that the ark of Noah rested ; and here again the people began to build cities, and establish nations. Here the first great empire arose. Here the Jewish nation had its origin; and nearly all the events related in the Old Testament took place here.

3. It was in Asia that the religion which teaches us that there is only one living and true God had its origin; and here Jesus Christ appeared to establish this religion, and seal the truth of revelation with his blood.

4. It was in Asia that Mahomet commenced and established his religion, which is now believed by more than half the human race. Several other religions had their origin in Asia.

5. In Asia, some of the greatest empires have existed of which history gives us any account. The Assyrian empire, as I have before said, is the first on record. This was followed by the Persian empire, which seemed to swallow up all the surrounding nations. China, the most populous empire on the globe, has endured longer than any other.

6. The Saracens, who extended their dominion over many countries, had their origin in Asia. The Turks, who have reigned over Palestine, Mesopotamia, Syria, Asia Minor, a part of Europe, and a part of Africa, for nearly eight hundred years, had their origin in Asia.

5. What is the first empire recorded in history? What of the Persian empire? What of China? 6. What of the Saracens? What of the Turks?

7. There is one portion of Asia which is, perhaps, more full of historical interest than any other on the face of the globe. It is that which lies between the Mediterranean on the west, Armenia on the north, Persia on the east, and Arabia on the south. Here is the spot on which the first inhabitants dwelt; here was the place where the first nations were formed; here the miracles recorded in the Bible took place; here the prophets dwelt; here Jesus Christ lived, preached and died.

8. The most remarkable feature in the history of Asia is, that while the country has seen many revolutions and changes, the condition of the people remains nearly the same. In our country and in Europe, there is a constant improvement. Every year brings some new art, invention, or institution, for the benefit of society.

9. But in Asia it is not so. Whoever is king, the people are but slaves. Education makes no progress, liberty is unknown, truth is little valued, virtue is not

7. What portion of Asia is the most interesting on the globe? Why is this portion of the country thus interesting? 8. What is remarkable in the history of Asia? What is said of this country and of Europe? 9. How does Asia differ from Europe and America?

prized, and that thing which we call comfort, and which makes our homes so dear to us, is not to be found in this vast country, so favored by Providence, and so richly endowed by nature.

10. It would seem that the real difficulty in Asia is, that while they are destitute of the knowledge of the gospel, they have many false religions. Mahometanism prevails over a great part of this portion of the globe; and it is remarkable that no country, the people of which believe in this false religion, have ever been happy or well governed.

11. The Hindoos believe in Brahminism, which teaches them that there is one principal deity, called Brahma, and several other inferior deities, called Vishnu, Siva, &c. They make strange images of these, and worship them. The priests are called Brahmins, and instruct the people in many idle ceremonies and cruel superstitions.

12. Besides these religions, there is the worship of the Grand Lama, to whom a temple is erected in Tartary. The Chinese believe in Boodh, and other nations believe in other deities.

10. What is the condition of Asia? What of Mahometanism? What is a remarkable fact? 11. In what religion do the Hindoos believe? What does Brahminism teach? What of the Brahmins? 12. Where is the temple of the Grand Lama? In what deity do the Chinese believe? What of other nations?

BRAHMA.

VISHNU.

13. Thus nearly the whole of Asia is involved in darkness as to the character of God, and the destiny of man; and thus we see that the conduct of mankind is such as might be expected where such ignorance and such error prevail.

13. In what error is nearly the whole of Asia involved? What do we see as respects the condition of mankind?

CHAPTER XXXVII.—ASIA CONTINUED.

Chronology of Asia.

1. CHRONOLOGY is a record of the dates when historical events happened. By studying chronology, you therefore learn the time at which the creation took place, when Abraham went from Chaldea to Canaan, when Christ was born, and other things.

2. Now in order to have a clear view of the progress of history, it is very important to place before us a table of chronology; and if we wish to remember history for a long time, it is well to fix this table in the memory.

3. I will now give you a brief view of the chronology of Asia. By this you will notice some curious things. You will see that Solomon and Chaus of China lived at the same time; that Solomon began the temple exactly three thousand years after the creation, &c.

STUDYING THE MAP OF AFRICA.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.—AFRICA.

About the Geography of Africa.—The Inhabitants.

1. AFRICA is one of the four quarters of the earth. It is an immense extent of country, and includes nearly one-fourth of all the land on the globe. It is separated from America by the Atlantic Ocean; the nearest part is about three thousand miles from New York or Boston.

2. It is divided from Europe by the Mediterranean

CHAPTER XXXVIII.—1. What of Africa? How is it separated from America? How far is the nearest point from New York or Boston? 2. How is it divided from Europe?

Sea, and from Asia by the Red Sea. It is, however, attached to Asia by a narrow neck of land, called the isthmus of Suez.

3. Africa is less known than any other portion of the globe. Many parts of the interior have never been visited by Europeans, for the greater part of the inhabitants are negroes, of which there are many tribes. Some of these are intelligent, and live tolerably well, but the greater part are in a savage or a barbarous state.

4. The climate being warm, they need little shelter or clothing. Their houses are therefore poor mud huts, or slight tenements made of leaves or branches of trees. Their dress is often but a single piece of cloth tied around the waist. They are, however, a cheerful race, and spend much of their time in various amusements.

5. Besides the negroes, there are several other races of Africans. The inhabitants from Egypt to Abyssinia appear to consist of the original Egyptian people, mixed with Turks, Arabs and others. The people of the Barbary states are the descendants of the ancient Carthaginians, mingled with the Saracens who conquered the country, together with Turks and Arabs.

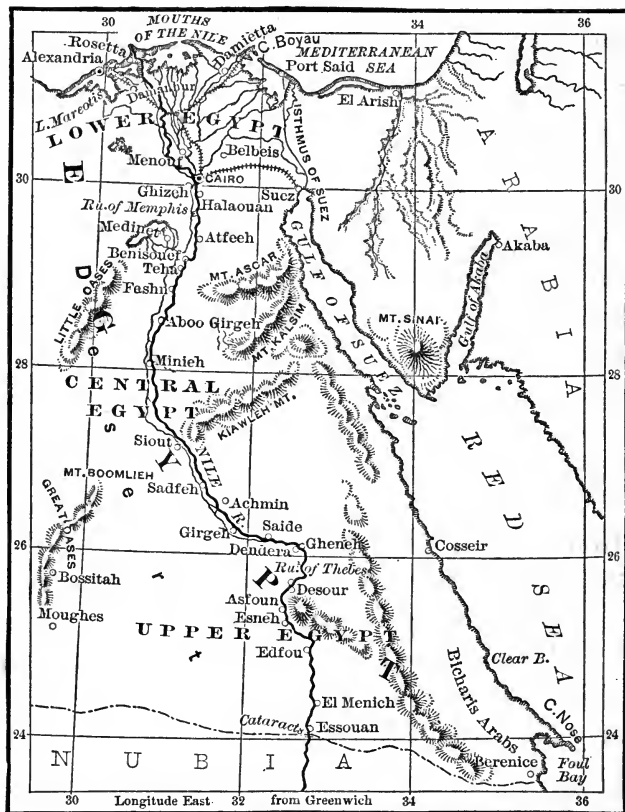

From Asia? What neck of land joins it to Asia? 3. Is Africa well known? What of the inhabitants? 4. What of the climate? Houses? Dress? What of the negroes? 5. What of other races? Describe them.

6. The immense desert of Sahara, with all the adjacent regions, appears to be occupied by wandering tribes of Arabs, who move from place to place with their horses and camels, like the people of Arabia, for pasturage or plunder.

7. Africa may be considered as, on the whole, the least civilized portion of the earth. The people are mostly Mahometans, and one-half of them are nearly in a savage state. The rest are in a barbarous condition.

8. The central parts of Africa abound in wild animals, such as lions, panthers, leopards, elephants, rhinoceroses, zebras, and quaggas. The woods are filled with chattering monkeys, the thickets are infested with monstrous serpents, ostriches roam over the deserts, various kinds of antelopes and deer in vast herds graze upon the plains, hippopotami are seen in the lakes and rivers, and crocodiles abound in the stagnant waters. Wild birds of every hue meet the eye of the traveller in nearly all parts of the country.

6. What of the desert of Sahara? 7. What may Africa be considered? State of the people? 8. What of animals in Central Africa?

QUESTIONS ON THE MAP.—How is Egypt bounded? Which way does the Nile flow? Where does it empty? Where is Dendera? Medinet? Alexandria? Cairo? Damietta? What isthmus joins Egypt to Arabia? What two great seas are near Egypt? Where are the ruins of Thebes? Of Memphis? Where is Mt. Kalsim? Lake Mareotis? Mt. Boomlieh?

Early Sovereigns of Egypt.

1. THE natives of Africa are supposed to be descended from Noah's son Ham, who went thither and settled in Egypt after the building of the tower of Babel, this country being near the land of Shinar. The kingdom of Egypt is very ancient, and was founded by Menes, one of the children of Ham, 2188 B. C. In the Bible, he is called Misraim.

2. Egypt is bounded north by the Mediterranean Sea, east by the Red Sea, south by Nubia, and west by the desert. The Nile runs through the midst of Egypt, from the south to the north. This river overflows once a year, and thus fertilizes the country, for it very seldom rains in Egypt.

3. Menes, or Misraim, the first king of Egypt, turned aside the Nile from its original channel, and built the city of Memphis where the river had formerly flowed. He was so great a monarch that the people worshipped him as a god after his death.

CHAPTER XXXIX.—1. From whom are the natives of Africa descended? By whom and when was Egypt founded? What of Menes? 2. How is Egypt bounded? What of the Nile? Does it often rain in Egypt? 3. Where and by whom was Memphis built? What was thought of Menes?

4. The history of Egypt is very obscure during a considerable time after the reign of Menes. From the year 2084 to the year 1825 before the Christian era, it was governed by rulers who led the lives of shepherds, and were therefore called shepherd kings. These kings were afterward driven from Egypt. An Ethiopian woman, named Nitocris, became queen of the country, in the year 1678 before the Christian era. Her brother had been murdered by the Egyptians, and she resolved to avenge him.

5. For this purpose queen Nitocris built a palace under ground, and invited the murderers of her brother to a banquet. The subterranean hall where the banquet was prepared was brilliantly illuminated with torches. The guests were the principal men in the kingdom.

6. The scene was magnificent, as they sat feasting along the table. But suddenly a rushing and roaring sound was heard overhead, and a deluge of water burst into the hall. Queen Nitocris had caused a river to flow through a secret passage, and it extinguished the torches, and drowned all the company at the banquet.

4. What of the history of Egypt? What of the shepherd kings? What of Nitocris? 5, 6. How did she revenge her brother's death?

7. The most renowned monarch that ever reigned over Egypt was Sesostris. This king formed the design of conquering the world, and set out from Egypt with more than half a million of foot soldiers, twenty-four thousand horsemen, and twenty-seven thousand armed chariots.

8. His ambitious projects were partially successful. He made great conquests, and wherever he went he caused marble pillars to be erected, and inscriptions to be engraved on them, so that future ages might not forget his renown.

9. The following was the inscription on most of the pillars:—"SESOSTRIS, KING OF KINGS, HAS CONQUERED THIS TERRITORY BY HIS ARMS." But the marble pillars have long ago crumbled into dust, or been buried under the earth; and the history of Sesostris is so obscure, that some writers have even doubted whether he ever made any conquests at all.

10. But other writers assure us that he returned to Egypt after his wars, bringing with him a multitude of captives, and long trains of camels laden with treasure, and that he then built magnificent temples, and constructed canals and causeways.

7. What of Sesostris? His army? 8. What of his conquests? 9. What inscription was engraved on the marble pillars raised by Sesostris? Are the pillars still standing? What do some writers doubt? 10. What do others say?

11. When Sesostris went to worship in the temple, he rode in a chariot which was drawn by captive kings. They were harnessed like horses, four abreast; and their royal robes trailed in the dust as they tugged the heavy chariot along. But at length the proud Sesostris grew old and blind. He could no longer look round him, and see captive kings drawing his chariot, or kneeling at his footstool. He then became utterly miserable, and committed suicide.

11. How was the chariot of Sesostris drawn? What was the fate of this despotic king?

SPHYNX, PYRAMIDS, AND RUINS OF EGYPT.

Egyptian Architecture and Sculpture.

1. THE ancient history of Egypt is so obscure, and yet so full of wonderful tales, that we might doubt it altogether, and believe it but the marvellous invention of fanciful story-tellers, were it not for the vast ruins and stupendous monuments still to be found in different parts of the country. These show that many ages since, between three and four thousand years ago, this country was filled with millions of people, and that there were cities here of the most wonderful magnificence.

CHAPTER XL.—1. What of the ancient history of Egypt? What of ruins and monuments? What do they prove?

2. Thebes appears to have been more magnificent than any other city, either in ancient or modern times. It was called the city of a hundred gates; and such was the immense population, that through each of these gates, in time of war, marched two hundred armed chariots, and two thousand soldiers.

3. Thebes was ruined in the time of Cambyzes, king of Persia, who lived about twenty-four hundred years ago. Yet the remains of the city are still visible, scattered over a space of twenty-seven miles on each side of the Nile. Some of the pillars of the temples are eleven feet in diameter.

4. One of the Egyptian kings caused his subjects to dig a great lake, forty-five miles in circumference, and almost as deep as the ocean. Another king constructed a labyrinth of marble, containing three thousand chambers, fifteen hundred of which were under ground.

5. In the upper chambers of this labyrinth were kept the sacred crocodiles, and all the other animals which the Egyptians worshipped. In the subterranean chambers lay the dead kings of Egypt.

2. What of Thebes? Its population? 3. Who destroyed Thebes? Remains? Pillars? 4. Describe the works of some of the kings. What of the labyrinth? 5. What were kept in the labyrinth?

6. The catacombs are likewise very wonderful. They are galleries hewn out of the rock, and extend a great way beneath the ground. The dead bodies of persons who died thousands of years ago are found in these catacombs, and they are nearly as well preserved now as when they were first buried. These are called mummies; and some, supposed to be three thousand years old, have been brought to this country.

7. Every body has heard of the pyramids of Egypt. These immense edifices are still standing on the banks of the Nile. The largest is five hundred feet high, and covers eleven acres of ground.

8. The pyramids are so old that it is impossible to tell when they were erected, or by whom. It is generally supposed that the ancient kings of Egypt intended them as their sepulchres, thinking that thus they should be famous forever. But though the pyramids have not decayed, the names of those kings are forgotten.

9. The sphynx is one of the most curious among the Egyptian antiquities. It was originally the gigantic head of a woman, on the body of a lion; but the lower part is now buried in the sand. The part which re mains above ground is the head and neck. These are twenty-seven feet high, and are made of solid rock. At a distance, it looks as if a great flat-nosed woman were rising out of the sand.

10. The ruins of Luxor, near ancient Thebes, are so grand as to strike the beholder with awe. The remains of one of the temples are perhaps the most remarkable relics of antiquity.

superior knowledge caused them to be looked upon as magicians by the people of other countries.

12. Still, the Egyptians had many absurd superstitions. Their chief god was Isis, and another was Osiris. Of these they made strange images, and worshipped them. Isis was greatly revered, and the people dedicated many splendid temples to its worship.

The Ptolemies and Queen Cleopatra.

1. IN the history of the Jews I have told of their bondage in Egypt, and of their miraculous escape. A long while afterward, an Egyptian king named Shishak took Jerusalem, and robbed Solomon's temple of its treasures.

2. A very famous king of Egypt was named Amenophis. He is supposed to be the same as Memnon, in honor of whom a temple with a gigantic statue was erected, of which some remains are still to be seen at Thebes. This statue was said to utter a joyful sound at sunrise, and a mournful sound when the sun set. Some modern travellers imagine that they have heard it. This, however, is absurd.

3. In the year 525 before the Christian era, Egypt was conquered by Cambyzes, king of Persia. He compelled Psammenitus, who was then king of Egypt, to drink bull's blood. It operated as a poison, and caused his death.

4. Three hundred and thirty-two years before the Christian era, Egypt was conquered by Alexander the Great, king of Macedon. Here he built a famous city, called Alexandria, which was for many centuries one of the most splendid places in the world. But the ancient city is in ruins, and modern Alexandria is far inferior to it.

5. Alexander was buried at Alexandria, in a tomb cut out of one vast stone; this has been carried to London within a few years, and may now be seen there.

6. He appointed Ptolemy, one of his generals, to be ruler of the country. From Ptolemy were descended a race of kings, all of whom were likewise called Ptolemy. They reigned over Egypt two hundred and ninety-four years. The last of these kings was Ptolemy Dionysius, whose own wife made war against him. A battle was fought, in which Ptolemy Dionysius was defeated. He attempted to escape, but was drowned in the Nile. His wife, whose name was Cleopatra, then became sole ruler of Egypt.

7. She was one of the most beautiful women that ever lived, and her talents and accomplishments were equal to her personal beauty. But she was very wicked. Among other horrid crimes, Cleopatra poisoned her brother, who was only eleven years old. Yet, though all the world knew what an abandoned wretch she was, the greatest heroes could not or would not resist the enticements of her beauty.

8. When Mark Antony, a Roman General, had defeated Brutus and Cassius at Philippi, in Greece, he summoned Cleopatra to come to Cilicia, on the north-eastern coast of the Mediterranean. He intended to punish her for having assisted Brutus.

9. As soon as Cleopatra received the summons, she hastened to obey. She went on board a splendid vessel, which was richly adorned with gold. The sails were made of the costliest silk. Instead of rough sun-burnt sailors, the crew consisted of lovely girls, who rowed with silver oars; and their strokes kept time to melodious music.

10. Queen Cleopatra reclined on the deck, beneath a silken awning. In this manner she went sailing along the river Cydnus. Her vessel was so magnificent, and she herself so lovely, that the whole spectacle appeared like a vision.

CLEOPATRA IN HER BARGE.

11. Mark Antony was first warned of her approach by the smell of delicious perfumes, which the wind wafted from the silken sails of the vessel. He next heard the distant strains of music, and saw the gleaming of the silver oars.

12. But when he beheld the beauty of the Egyptian queen, he thought of nothing else. Till Mark Antony met Cleopatra, he had been an ambitious man and a valiant warrior. But from that day forward, he was nothing but her slave.

13. Owing to Cleopatra's misconduct and his own, Antony was defeated by Octavius, another Roman general, at Actium, in Greece. He then killed himself, by falling on his sword. Cleopatra knew that if Octavius took her alive, he would carry her to Rome, and expose her to the derision of the populace.

14. She resolved not to endure this ignominy. Now in Egypt there is a venomous reptile, called an asp, the bite of which is mortal, but not painful. Cleopatra applied one of these reptiles to her bosom. In a little while her body was benumbed, and her heart ceased to beat; and thus died the beautiful and wicked queen of Egypt. This event occurred thirty years before Christ.

15. The story of queen Cleopatra is very instructive.

12. What was the character of Antony till he met Cleopatra? 13. Where was Antony defeated? Who was Octavius? Fate of Antony? Why did Cleopatra determine to kill herself? 14. What caused her death? How long was this before Christ?

It shows that a person on whom heaven has bestowed the richest gifts may use them to cause mischief and misery to all around.

Sequel of the Egyptian History.

1. AFTER the death of Cleopatra, Egypt became a province of the Roman empire; and it continued to belong to that empire, and to the portion of it called the Eastern empire, till the year 640 after the Christian era. It was then conquered by the Saracens. It remained under their government upward of six centuries.

2. The Saracen sovereigns were dethroned by the Mamelukes, whom they had trained up to be their guards. The Mamelukes ruled Egypt till the year 1517, when they were conquered by the Turks. They kept possession of Egypt till the year 1798. It was then invaded by Napoleon Bonaparte, with an army of forty thousand Frenchmen.

CHAPTER XLII.—1. What was the state of Egypt from Cleopatra's death to its subjugation by the Saracens? How long did they govern Egypt? 2. What of the Mamelukes? When and how long did the Turks govern Egypt? What happened in 1798?

3. The Turks, ever since their conquest of Egypt, had kept a body of Mamelukes in their service; these made a desperate resistance. A battle was fought near the pyramids, in which many of them were slain, and others were drowned in the Nile. Not long after this victory, Bonaparte went back to France, and left General Kleber in command of the French army.

4. General Kleber was a brave man, but a severe one, and his severity cost him his life. He had ordered an old Mussulman, named the Sheik Sada, to be bastinadoed on the soles of his feet. Shortly afterward, when the general was in a mosque, a fierce Arab rushed upon him, and killed him with a dagger.

5. In 1801, the English sent Sir Ralph Abercrombie with an army to drive the French out of Egypt. General Menou was then the French commander. Sir Ralph Abercrombie beat him at the battle of Aboukir, but was himself mortally wounded.

6. In the course of the same year, the French army sailed from Egypt back to France. The inhabitants lamented their departure, for the French generals had ruled them with more justice and moderation than their old masters, the Turks. Egypt is now governed by a sovereign, who bears the name of pacha, and the country is no longer a part of the Turkish empire.

7. The present capital of Egypt is Grand Cairo. It is much inferior to what it was in former times, but still contains about three hundred thousand inhabitants. Alexandria, built by Alexander the Great, as I have before said, is now much reduced, but the ruins around it show that it was once a splendid city. There is no part of the world that seems more gloomy to the traveller than Egypt. The present aspect of the towns and cities is that of poverty in the midst of ruins, which speak of wealth and splendor that have long since departed.

Abyssinia. This region lies south of Egypt, and extends along the shore of the Red Sea. The first inhabitants of Ethiopia are supposed to have emigrated from Arabia the Happy, a part of Arabia. Their earlier history is almost unknown.

2. Ethiopia, or at least a portion of it, was formerly called Sheba, and from thence it is supposed that the queen of Sheba went to visit Solomon. About thirty years ago it is said that one of her descendants was king of Abyssinia.

3. It used to be the custom to confine the Ethiopian princes on a high mountain, which was named Geshen. It was very high and steep, and looked like an enormous castle of stone. No person could ascend this mountain, or come down from it, unless he were raised or lowered by means of ropes.

4. The princes lived on the summit of the mountain, in miserable huts. The greater part of them never came down till their dying day. But whenever the king died, one of the princes was summoned to the throne. Perhaps, however, he found himself no happier in the royal palace, than in his hut on the summit of Mount Geshen.

5. The Ethiopians were believers in the Jewish religion till the middle of the fourth century after the Christian era. Candace, the queen of the country, was then converted to Christianity, and her subjects followed her example.

6. The inhabitants of Ethiopia, or Abyssinia, are still called Christians, but their mode of worship is mixed up with many Jewish practices. They also worship the virgin Mary and the saints, like the Roman Catholics.

7. The people of this part of Africa are not generally negroes. They are of an olive complexion, and have long hair and agreeable features. But in the north-eastern part of Abyssinia, there is a race of negroes called Shangallas.

8. These negroes have been described as having faces resembling apes, and as being little more intelligent than the monkey tribe. They have no houses, but sleep under the trees, and sometimes burrow in caves. The Abyssinians hunt them as they would wild beasts.

Origin of the Barbary States and their Piracies on the Christians.

1. THE Barbary states are Morocco, Algiers, Tunis and Tripoli. They are bounded north by the Mediterranean Sea, east and south by the desert, and west by the Atlantic Ocean. These countries were inhabited in the time of the Romans. Morocco was called Mauritania; and Algiers, Numidia. These regions were first settled by colonies from Phœnicia, Greece, and other countries.

CHAPTER XLIV.—1. What are the Barbary states? How are they bounded?

2. In this region stood the celebrated city of Carthage in ancient times. Its site was about ten miles north-east of the city of Tunis. It was founded by some Phœnicians, eight hundred and sixty-nine years before the Christian era. The Phœnicians, as I have told you, were the first people who engaged in commerce, and founded colonies for the purpose of carrying on trade.

3. In the history of Rome I shall tell you how Carthage was destroyed. The Romans erected a new city where it had formerly stood. This was conquered and destroyed by the Saracens, who then built the city of Tunis. In the year 1574, Tunis was seized by the Turks.

4. The city of Algiers was built by the Saracens, in the year 944. The government, called the regency of Algiers, was founded in 1518, by two Turks, named Horuc and Hagradin. They were brothers, and both bore the name of Barbarossa, or Red-Beard.

5. The country now called Morocco was conquered by the Saracens, about the same time with the other Barbary states. So also was Tripoli. All these states, except Morocco, afterward fell into the hands of the Turks.

6. During a long period, the Barbary states were in the habit of fitting out vessels to cruise against the ships of every nation. Their prisoners were sold as slaves, and never returned to their own country, unless a high ransom were paid for them.

7. The Americans were the first who made any considerable resistance to these outrages. In the year 1803, Commodore Preble sailed to the Mediterranean sea with a small American fleet. He intended to attack Tripoli; but one of his frigates, the Philadelphia, got aground in the harbor.

8. The Turks took possession of the Philadelphia. But one night Lieutenant Decatur entered the harbor of Tripoli, and rowed toward the captured vessel, with only twenty men. He leaped on board, followed by his crew, and killed all the Turks, or drove them overboard. The Philadelphia was then set on fire.

9. After this exploit, Commodore Preble obtained some gun-boats from the king of Naples, and with these and the American vessels he made an attack on the fortifications of Tripoli. The bashaw of Tripoli was forced to give up his prisoners.

10. In the year 1815, Commodore Decatur (the same who had burnt the Philadelphia) was sent with a fleet against Algiers. He captured their largest vessels, and compelled the Algerines, and the Tripolitans also, to agree never more to make slaves of Americans.

11. In 1816, Algiers was battered by an English fleet under the command of Lord Exmouth. This was the severest chastisement that the Algerines had ever received at that period. But in 1830, the French sent a large naval and military force against Algiers, commanded by Marshal Beaumont. The fortifications were battered down, and the city was taken. Algeria is now a province of France.

no written records, and cannot tell what events happened to their forefathers.

2. The ancients had very curious notions about Africa; for they had visited only the northern parts, and contented themselves with telling incredible stories about the remainder. They supposed that toward the eastern shore of the continent there were people without noses, and others who had three or four eyes apiece.

3. In other parts of Africa there were said to be men without heads, but who had eyes in their breasts. Old writers speak also of a nation whose king had a head like a dog. There was likewise said to be a race of giants, twice as tall as common men and women.

4. But the prettiest of all these fables is the story of the Pigmies. These little people were said to be about a foot high, and were believed to dwell near the source of the river Nile. Their houses were built something like birds' nests, and their building materials were clay, feathers, and egg shells.

5. These Pigmies used to wage terrible wars with the cranes. An immense army of them would set out on an expedition, some mounted on rams and goats, and others on foot.

2. What were the ideas of the ancients concerning Africa? 4-7. What is the prettiest of all these fabulous stories? Give some account of the Pigmies

6. When an army of the Pigmies encountered an army of the cranes, great valor was displayed on both sides. The cranes would rush forward to the charge, flapping their wings, and sometimes one of them would snatch up a Pigmy in his beak, and carry him away captive.

7. But the Pigmies brandished their little swords and spears, and generally succeeded in putting the enemy to flight. Whenever they had a chance, they would break the eggs of the cranes, and kill the unfledged young ones without mercy.

8. Until within a few years, the moderns have not known much more about the interior of Africa than the ancients did. They have now acquired considerable knowledge respecting it; but the subject belongs rather to geography than history. Nearly the whole of the central part of Africa, through which the river Niger flows, is called Nigritia, or Negro-land. It is inhabited by several different nations.

9. The principal city in Nigritia is called Timbuctoo. No white people have ever visited it, except one American, one Englishman, and one Frenchman. The name of the latter was M. Caillié. He was there in 1827, and describes the city as built in the shape of a triangle and situated eight miles from the Niger.

10. Dr. Livingston, an English explorer, spent many years of his life in the wilds and deserts of Africa, making very valuable discoveries. He was several times given up for lost. He died there in 1873, and his body was removed to England and buried in Westminster Abbey.

11. There are English and French settlements on the western coast of Africa. There was formerly a Dutch settlement at the southern extremity of the continent, but the English have had possession of it since the year 1806. This is called Cape Town, and is situated at the Cape of Good Hope. The republic of Liberia was founded in 1821, by the American Colonization Society, and its population is already 275,000. Several of the European powers have acknowledged its independence. Monrovia is the capital.

History of the Slave Trade.

1. The most painful part of the history of Africa is that which belongs to the slave trade. From the earliest ages, when human society was yet in a rude state, it was the custom to make slaves of those who were taken in war. This practice was continued in after times, and thus, for thousands of years, slavery was established in nearly all the nations of the earth.

2. But in those countries where the Christian religion prevailed, slavery came into general disuse. In 1482, however, the Portuguese began the horrid traffic of the slave trade, and the English followed in 1563. From that time, it has continued to the present day, though most nations have made laws against it, and it has now nearly ceased.

3. For at least two hundred years, this traffic was carried on to a great extent. The custom was for vessels to go to the western coast of Africa, and purchase of the African princes such prisoners as they had for sale. Sometimes, however, the captains of the vessels would rob the people of their children, or they would go on shore with a body of armed men, and carry away the inhabitants of a whole village.

4. The poor negroes thus taken from their homes, and separated forever from all they held dear, were crowded into the vessels, where they were often half starved, and where they sometimes suffered from disease, or unkind treatment. Such was frequently their distress, that they would jump into the sea, or beat out their own brains in despair.

5. Millions of these poor negroes have been taken from their homes; and probably more than half of those who entered the ships, from the beginning of the trade to this day, have perished before they reached the countries to which they were bound. America was the first nation to make laws against the slave-trade, and to declare it piracy.

STUDYING THE MAP OF EUROPE.

CHAPTER XLVIII.—EUROPE.

Introductory Remarks on its Geography and other matters.

1. EUROPE is considered the third quarter of the globe. It is the smallest in extent, being about one-quarter as large as Asia, one-third as large as Africa, and about one-third larger than the whole United States. It is a part of the eastern continent, and is only separated from Asia by the Ural Mountains. It is separated from Africa by the Mediterranean sea.

CHAPTER XLVIII.—1. Which is the third quarter of the globe? The smallest? How large is Europe compared with Asia? Africa? The United States? How is it separated from Asia? From Africa?

At the straits of Gibraltar, the distance from Europe to Africa is but twenty-one miles.

2. But although Europe is the smallest of the four quarters of the globe, it has nearly three hundred millions of inhabitants, and is much superior to Asia, Africa, and most parts of America, in civilization. It abounds in fine cities, fine roads, good houses, useful manufactures, and most other things that are necessary to the comfort and happiness of mankind.

3. In all parts of Europe except Turkey, the religion of Jesus Christ prevails. If you were to travel in Asia or Africa, you would meet with no churches, or only now and then one, where the true God is worshipped. But you would see a great many mosques dedicated to the false religion of Mahomet, and a great many temples where the people bow down to idols of wood, stone, or metal.

4. But in Europe, the traveller everywhere meets with churches, and these show that the people are Christians. In Europe, also, there are many colleges, academies, and schools, which prove that the people set a high value upon education. It is a fact which I wish you to remember, that in all parts of the world where you find churches, you find that the people are more or less advanced in civilization and the arts which render mankind happy.

5. As Europe is the smallest of the four quarters of the earth, so it was behind Asia and Africa in being settled and civilized. Long after the Assyrian empire had risen to great power and splendor, long after Babylon and Nineveh had flourished on the banks of the Euphrates, long after Egypt had become a mighty kingdom, long after Thebes, Memphis, and other magnificent cities had risen upon the borders of the Nile, Europe continued to be inhabited only by wandering tribes of savages.

6. Greece was the first portion of Europe that was settled. About the time that Moses led the Israelites out of Egypt, the Greeks began to build houses, found cities, and emerge from the savage into a more civilized state. By degrees they advanced in knowledge and refinement, and at length became the most polished people in the world.

7. Afterward Rome, situated in Italy, became a mighty city, and the Roman people extended their empire over the greater part of Europe, and the most civilized portions of Asia and Africa. Carthage, Egypt, Greece, Asia Minor, Palestine, Syria, and other Asiatic countries, bowed to the Roman yoke.

8. Rome was the most splendid empire that the world has ever seen. But as it crushed other kingdoms beneath its foot, so, in turn, imperial Rome was itself trampled down by the northern nations of Europe. Great ignorance followed this event, and the different nations and tribes of Europe seemed like broken and crushed limbs and members of the great empire, almost without life.

9. But these separate fragments of the human family grew up in due time to be separate nations, and these advanced in knowledge until they reached the condition in which we now find them.

10. Europe may be divided into two parts—the northern and southern. In the former, the climate is about as cold as it is in our middle and eastern states. In the latter, it is about as warm as in the southern states. The principal kingdoms in the northern section of Europe are Russia, Norway, Sweden, Prussia, Austria, the several states of Germany, Denmark, Holland, Belgium, Switzerland, France, and Great Britain.

11. Among the southern kingdoms of Europe are Portugal, Spain, Italy, Greece, and Turkey. In these latter countries the soil is generally fertile, and here grapes, olives, oranges, lemons, melons, and other delicious fruits, are abundant.

12. Here, too, all the wants of man for food are easily supplied, and so warm and gentle is the climate, that the people do not find it necessary to build tight houses, and put on thick clothing, and provide stores against the winter; yet it is remarkable, that where nature has done so much, the people think it hardly necessary to do any thing, and consequently they are less industrious, less comfortable, and less happy, than in more cold and severe climates.

13. In the northern parts of Europe, the people find it necessary to cultivate the soil with care, and lay up in summer a store of provisions against the long, cold winter. They build themselves good houses, they furnish them with many convenient articles, and thus, by their industry and care, they live more happily than those who inhabit the gentler climes of the south.

14. The wild animals of Europe resemble those of this country, though they are in some respects different. The trees, plants, shrubs, and flowers, are similar to those we find here, though not exactly the same.

15. If you were to go to Europe, you would everywhere feel that you were in a strange land, but still many things would remind you of your own dear home in America. But if you were to go to Asia or Africa, the houses, the fields, the dress of the people, and all their manners and customs, would impress you with the idea that you were in a strange land—far, very far, from your native country.

About Greece; where it is situated; appearance of the Country; Climate.

1. GREECE is a small strip of land extending into the Mediterranean sea. It lies almost exactly east of New York, at the distance of about five thousand miles. It is about as far from Asia Minor on the east, as from Italy on the west.

CHAPTER XLIX.—1. What is Greece? Direction and distance from New York? In what direction is it from Asia Minor? From Italy?

QUESTIONS ON THE MAP OF GREECE ON THE OPPOSITE PAGE.—What are the boundaries of Greece? Where is Mount Olympus? Thermopylæ? Corinth? Athens? Marathon? Argos? Where are the following islands?—Lemnos? Cythera? Ithaca? Coreyra? Cephallonia?

2. Greece is bounded on the north by Macedonia, which is now a part of Turkey; on every other side it is bounded by the sea. To the south and east of it are a great number of islands, some of which are extremely beautiful.

3. Several of them have towns and cities upon them, and one, called Antiparos, is remarkable for a grotto beneath the earth, which appears like a beautiful palace. When lighted up with lamps, it seems a vast hall, with thousands of pillars and ornaments of silver.

4. Some of the islands of Greece have been thrown up from the sea, and others which formerly existed have disappeared. These strange things have been caused by volcanic fires under the sea. Nothing can be more wonderful than the scenes which have sometimes been exhibited by these convulsions of nature.

5. In the southern part of Greece, and among the islands, the climate is as mild as in Virginia, and the country abounds in all sorts of delicious fruits. In the northern part, the climate is somewhat colder.

6. If you were to travel through Greece, you would discover that it is naturally very beautiful. Along the shores, you would meet with many little bays and harbors, and you would easily believe that the people living there would be tempted by the placid water to become seamen. You would accordingly find a large portion of the inhabitants to be seafaring people.

7. In the interior of the country you would meet with lofty mountains, whose tops in winter are covered with snow. You would meet with smiling valleys, bright, rapid streams, and steep hillsides covered with olive groves, vineyards, and fig trees.

8. You would discover that the people of the present day live in miserable villages or towns, all wearing an aspect of poverty and decay. But you would often meet with the ruins of temples and other edifices, built by the ancient Greeks two or three thousand years ago.

9. These would show you that, though the modern Greeks appear to be a degraded people, yet the former inhabitants of this country were among the most remarkable people that ever lived. It is of these that I am now going to tell you.

6. What of the shores of Greece? To what pursuits are many of the present Greeks devoted? 7. What of the interior of Greece? 8. What of the present inhabitants of Greece? What of ruins, temples, &c.? 9. What would these ruins prove?

The extent of Greece. First Settlement of the country.

1. THOUGH Greece is one of the most famous countries on the face of the globe, it is not very extensive; its boundaries varied at different times, but it never exceeded four hundred miles in length, and about one hundred and fifty in width. That portion to which the name of Greece is properly applied, was not much larger than the state of New York.

2. I must now carry you back to the first settlement of this country, which took place more than four thousand years ago. When the human race was scattered from the tower of Babel, it is supposed that the family of Japheth, Noah's youngest son, travelled from Asia into Europe. As Greece lay nearer to the land of Shinar than the other parts of Europe, it was probably settled first.

3. The Greeks themselves believed that their ancestors had sprung up out of the earth. The first inhabitants were mere savages. They dwelt in wretched huts, and fed on acorns. Their garments were the skins of wild beasts.

2. How long since Greece was first settled? Who are supposed to have been the first inhabitants of Greece? 3. What did the Greeks believe of their ancestors?

4. There are so many fables about the early history of Greece, that I shall pass very briefly over the first three or four centuries. Cecrops, an Egyptian, seems to have been the first who introduced civilization among the Greeks. He came with a number of his countrymen, and founded the city of Athens. This event took place about fifteen hundred and fifty-six years before the Christian era.

5. Thirty or forty years afterward. Cadmus came from Phoenicia and built the city of Thebes. He was one of the greatest benefactors of the Greeks, for he taught them the cultivation of the vine, the manufacture of metals, and the use of the alphabet.

6. Other parts of Greece were also settled by colonies from foreign nations. The country then consisted of a number of small kingdoms, which had little or no connection with one another. These were frequently at war among themselves.

7. Twelve of these little kingdoms, or states, soon united themselves into a confederacy. Their deputies held a meeting twice a year, in order to consult respecting the welfare of the country. They were called the Council of the Amphyctions. By means of this council, the different states were kept at peace with each other, and were united against foreign enemies.

8. One of the famous events of Grecian history was the Argonautic expedition. It is said that a prince named Jason, with a company of his friends, sailed to Colchis, which lay eastward of the Black Sea. Their object was to find a wonderful ram with a fleece of gold; but the whole story is supposed to be a fable, or to have some hidden meaning.

9. The Trojan war was still more famous than the expedition in search of the golden fleece. Troy was a large city on the Asiatic side of the Hellespont, which is now called the Dardanelles. Paris, the son of the Trojan king, had stolen away the wife of Menelaus, a Greek prince.

10. All the Grecian kings combined together to punish this offence. They sailed to Troy in twelve hundred vessels, and took the city after a siege of ten years. This event is supposed to have occurred eleven hundred and ninety-three years before the Christian era.

What of the Amphyctionic council? What effect had this council? 8. What of the Argonautic expedition? 9, 10. What of the Trojan war?

11. But most historians are of opinion that the Trojan war was a much less important affair than Homer has represented it to be. Poets do not always tell the truth; and Homer was the father and chief of poets. He was a blind old man, and used to wander about the country, reciting his verses.

The Grecian Lawgivers.

1. ONE of the principal states of Greece was called Sparta, or Lacedæmon. It was founded by Lelex, 1516 B. C. It received a code of laws from Lycurgus, who lived nearly nine centuries before Christ. He was strict and severe, but wise and upright.

2. Lycurgus ordered that all the Spartans should eat together at public tables. The reason of this law was, that the rich citizens might not feast luxuriously at home, but that the rich and poor should fare alike. As for the children, they were not allowed any thing to eat, unless they could steal it. This wicked custom was adopted with the idea that it would train up the young Spartans to be cunning in war.

3. In order that the people might not be avaricious, Lycurgus forbade any gold or silver to be coined into money. All the money was made of iron. It could not very easily be carried in the pocket, for a Spartan dollar weighed as much as fifty pounds.

4. The children were all brought up at the public expense. They were allowed to stand near the dinner tables and listen to the wise conversation of their parents. The Spartans were very anxious that their children should abhor drunkenness.

5. They showed them the disgusting effects of this pernicious vice, by causing their slaves to drink intoxicating liquors. When the children had witnessed the ridiculous conduct of the drunken slaves, they were careful never to reduce themselves to so degraded a condition.

6. When Lycurgus had completed his code of laws, he left Sparta. Previous to his departure, he made the people swear that they would violate none of the laws till he should return. But he was resolved never to return.

7. He committed suicide by starving himself to death; and his ashes were thrown into the sea by his command, so that the Spartans might not bring back his dead body. Thus, as Lycurgus never could return, the Spartans were bound by their oath to keep his laws forever.

8. They did keep them during five hundred years, and, all that time, the Spartans were a brave, patriotic, and powerful people. Many of their customs, however, belonged rather to a savage than a civilized nation.

9. Athens had two celebrated lawgivers, Draco and Solon. The laws of Draco were so extremely severe that they were said to be written with blood, instead of ink. He punished even the smallest offences with death. His code was soon abolished.

10. Solon's laws were much milder. Almost all of them were wise and good laws, and would have been advantageous to the people. But the Athenians had so much fickleness and levity, that they were continually proposing alterations in them.

7. What was the fate of the Spartan law-giver? 8. How long did the Spartans keep his laws? 9. What of Draco and Solon? The laws of Draco? 10. What of Solon's laws? The Athenians?

11. Athens was at this time a republic; which is, you know, a government of the people; but soon after Solon had made his laws, the supreme power was usurped by Pisistratus, an ambitious citizen. He and his sons ruled Athens fifty years.

*War with Persia.

1. ABOUT five centuries before the Christian era, Darius, king of Persia, made war against Greece. His generals invaded the country with a fleet of six hundred vessels, and half a million of men. There were scarcely any troops to oppose them, except ten thousand Athenians.

2. Darius felt so certain of conquering Greece, that he had sent great quantities of marble with his army. He intended that it should be carved into pillars and triumphal arches, and other trophies of victory. He had also commanded his generals to send all the Athenians to Persia, in chains.

11. What was the government of Athens? Who usurped the supreme power? What of the government of Athens for fifty years?

CHAPTER LII.—1. When did Darius make war against Greece? What of the Persian force? The Athenian? 2. What of marble? What did Darius command?

3. The Athenian general was named Miltiades. He led his little army against the immense host of the Persians, and encountered them at Marathon. This was a small town on the sea-shore, about fifteen miles north-east of Athens.

4. While their countrymen were fighting, the aged people, the women, and children, remained at Athens in the utmost anxiety. If Miltiades were to lose the battle, they knew that the Persians would chase his routed army into the city, and burn it to ashes.

5. Suddenly a soldier, covered with blood, ran into the market-place of the city. He was sorely wounded, but he had come all the way from the army to bring the news. He was ghastly pale, and the people feared that the Persians had won the day, and that the soldier was a fugitive.

6. They gathered round him, eagerly asking about Miltiades and the army. The soldier leaned heavily upon his spear. He seemed too much exhausted to give utterance to the news he had brought.

7. But, exerting all his strength, he cried out, "Rejoice, my countrymen! The victory is ours!" And, with that exulting shout, he fell down dead.

3. Who was the Athenian general? Where was Marathon? 4. What of those who remained at Athens? 5. What messenger was sent from Marathon? 6. What of the soldier? 7. What news did the messenger bring?

8. The Athenians showed themselves ungrateful to the brave Miltiades. All that he demanded as a reward for rescuing his native land from slavery, was a crown of olive leaves, which was esteemed a mark of honor among the Greeks. But they refused to give him one; and he was afterward condemned, on some frivolous pretence, to pay a fine of fifty talents. As Miltiades had not so much money in the world he perished in prison.

9. After the battle of Marathon, the Persians were driven out of Greece, and Darius died while he was preparing to invade the country again. His son Xerxes renewed the war. In the history of Persia, I have already told of the invasion of Greece by Xerxes with two millions of men, and of the misfortunes which befel him there.

Affairs of Athens.

1. AFTER the Persian war, Cimon, Aristides, and Pericles were the three principal men of Athens. Pericles at length became the chief person in the republic. Athens was never more flourishing than while he was at the head of the government.

2. He adorned the city with magnificent edifices, and rendered it famous for learning, poetry, and beautiful works of art, such as temples, statues, and paintings.

CHAPTER LIII.—1. Who were the three principal men of Athens? What of Pericles? 2. What did he do for Athens?

But the Athenians were fickle, and generally ungrateful to their public benefactors; and they sometimes ill treated Pericles.

3. In the latter part of his administration, a terrible plague broke out in Athens. Many of the citizens fell down and died, while passing through the streets. Dead bodies lay in heaps, one upon another.

4. The illustrious Pericles was one of the victims of the pestilence. When he lay at the point of death, his friends praised him for the glorious deeds which he had achieved. "It is my greatest glory," replied Pericles, "that none of my acts have caused a citizen of Athens to put on mourning."

5. Three years before the death of Pericles, a war had commenced between Athens and Sparta. These were now the two principal states of Greece, and they had become jealous of each other's greatness. A fierce war followed, in which all the states of that part of Greece called Peloponnesus were engaged. This bloody strife lasted twenty-eight years.

6. In the course of this war, Alcibiades made a conspicuous figure among the Athenians. He was the handsomest and most agreeable man in Athens. At one period he was greatly beloved by the people, and possessed almost unlimited power. But he was ambitious, and destitute of principle.

7. He was the cause of much trouble, not only in his native city, but all over Greece. At last, when he had lost the good will of everybody, he retired to a small village in Phrygia, in Asia Minor, and dwelt there with a woman named Timandra.

8. His enemies sent a party of assassins to murder him. These set fire to the house in which he lived. Alcibiades was a brave man, and he rushed out, sword in hand, to fight the assassins. But they stood at a distance, and pierced him through with javelins. They then went away, leaving Timandra to bury him.

9. The Peloponnesian war brought great misfortunes upon the Athenians. The Spartans conquered them, and burnt the city; and while this work of destruction was going forward, the victors caused gay tunes of music to be played.

10. The Athenians were now placed under the government of thirty Spartan captains. These were called the Thirty Tyrants of Athens; but they held their

Beginning of the Theban War.

1. Not long after this period, Thebes became the most distinguished city of Greece. It was the capital of the kingdom of Bœotia. A war between Thebès and Sparta originated in the following manner. Phæbidas, a Spartan general, had wrongfully taken possession of Cadmæa, a fortress belonging to Thebes. The Thebans demanded that it should be given up; but the Spartans garrisoned it strongly, and resolved to hold it as their own.

CHAPTER LIV.—1. What of Thebes? How did the war between Thebes and Sparta originate?

2. A brave and patriotic young man of Thebes, named Pelopidas, contrived a scheme to get back the fortress. He and eleven companions put on their breastplates, and girded their swords around them, but clothed themselves in women's garments over their armor. In this garb, they went to the gate of Cadmæa, and were admitted.

3. The magistrates and Spartan officers were assembled at a splendid festival. Archias, the Spartan commander, sat at the head of the table. He and his friends were wholly occupied with the enjoyment of the banquet. They took scarcely any notice when the twelve figures in female attire entered the hall.

4. At the moment when the mirth and festivity of the Spartans was at its height, the strangers tore off their female garb. Instead of twelve women, there stood twelve young warriors. The light of the festal torches flashed back from their bright breastplates. Their naked swords were in their hands.

5. Pelopidas and his eleven companions immediately attacked the Spartan banqueters. Their surprise hindered the Spartans from making any effectual resistance. Archias and many others were struck dead, almost before they could rise from the table.

2-4. What of Pelopidas? Describe the scheme of Pelopidas and his companions. 5. Did this bold undertaking succeed?

6. Thus the Thebans gained possession of the fortress. But Sparta immediately began a war against Thebes. Many of the other states of Greece lent their assistance to the Spartans. It appeared probable that the Thebans would be conquered and entirely ruined.

7. But they had a brave and skilful general, named Epaminondas. With only six thousand Thebans, he encountered twenty-five thousand Spartans, commanded by Cleombrotus, their king. The battle was fought at Leuctra. The Thebans gained a complete victory, and killed Cleombrotus and fourteen hundred of his men.

Sequel of the Theban War.

1. EPAMINONDAS, the Theban general, was one of the best men that lived in ancient times. His private virtues were equal to his patriotism and valor. It is said of him that a falsehood was never known to come from his lips; one of the highest praises that can be bestowed on any man.

6. What state made war upon Thebes? Other states? 7. What of Epaminondas? His army? The Spartan force? Who was the Spartan leader? Did the Thebans gain the victory?

CHAPTER LV.—1. Character of Epaminondas?

2. It might be supposed that the Thebans would have felt the utmost gratitude toward Epaminondas, whose valor had saved his country; and it is true that the most virtuous part of the people honored him according to his merits; but I am sorry to tell you that a great and good man is very apt to have enemies.

3. His virtues and his greatness are a reproach to the vicious and the mean, and therefore they hate him, and seek to destroy him. So it happened with Epaminondas, and so it has happened in all ages.

4. Epaminondas had many enemies among the Thebans. They at first attempted to have him sentenced to death because he had kept the command of the army longer than the law permitted. But as his only motive had been to preserve Thebes from ruin, his judges concluded to let him live.

5. Nevertheless, in order to disgrace him as much as possible, he was appointed to clean the streets of Thebes. Epaminondas was not mortified; for he knew that the Thebans might disgrace themselves by such ingratitude, but could not disgrace him. He therefore set about discharging the duties of his new office, and this great and victorious general was accordingly seen cleaning away the filth from the streets.

6. But the war was not yet at an end; and the Thebans soon found that they could not do without Epaminondas. They made him throw away his broom and take the sword again. He was placed at the head of the army, with greater power than he had possessed before.

7. So long as Epaminondas was their general, the Thebans were the most powerful people of Greece. The last victory that he gained was at Mantinea. But it cost the Thebans dear; for while Epaminondas was fighting in the thickest of the battle, a Spartan soldier thrust a javelin into his breast.

8. The Thebans and Spartans fought around the wounded Epaminondas, the latter wishing to put an end to his life, and the former to bear him from the field. The Spartans were driven back, and some of his soldiers carried Epaminondas in their arms to his tent.

9. The javelin remained sticking in the wound, for the surgeons declared that he would die the moment that it should be drawn out. Epaminondas lay in great pain; but he thought little of his own agony, and was anxious only for the success of his countrymen.

10. At last a messenger came from the battle-field, and told him that the Spartans were flying, and that Thebes had won a glorious victory. "Then all is well!" said Epaminondas. As he spoke, he drew the javelin out of his wound, and instantly expired.

11. This event took place in the year 363 before the Christian era. After the death of Epaminondas, the Thebans were no longer formidable to the rest of the Greeks.

Grecian Religion or Mythology.

1. MY history has now reached the period when the glory of Greece was at its height; and I shall soon have to speak of its decline. Before doing so, I think it proper to give a slight account of the religion of the Greeks, and some other interesting particulars.

2. The Greeks believed that there were three classes of deities, the Celestial, the Marine, and the Infernal.

10. Describe the death of Epaminondas. 11. When did this happen? What of the Thebans after the death of Epaminondas?

CHAPTER LVI.—1. At what period was the glory of Greece at its height?

The first, as they fancied, dwelt in the sky, the second in the sea, and the third in the dreary regions under the earth. Besides these, there were inferior kinds of deities, who haunted the woods, or lived in fountains and streams.

3. The deities whose home was in the sky, were Jupiter, Apollo, Mars, Mercury, Bacchus, Vulcan, Juno, Minerva, Venus, Diana, Ceres, and Vesta. The greatest of all the gods was Jupiter. When it thundered and lightened, the Greeks supposed that Jupiter was angry, and was flinging his thunderbolts about.

4. The Olympic games were instituted by the Greeks in honor of Jupiter. These games were celebrated every four years. They consisted of races on foot, and on horseback, and in chariots, and of leaping, wrestling, and boxing. It was considered a very great honor for a person to gain a prize at the Olympic games.

2. In what deities did the Greeks believe? What were the three classes? Where did each of them dwell? What of inferior deities? 3. Who were the celestial deities? What of Jupiter? 4. What of the Olympic games?

5. Apollo was the son of Jupiter. He was supposed to be the driver of the sun, which had four horses harnessed to it, and went round the world every day. It was pretty much like a modern stage-coach, except that it carried no passengers.

6. Besides being the coachman of the sun, Apollo was likewise the god of music and poetry, and of medicine, and all the fine arts. He also presided over the famous oracle at Delphos, whither people used to come from all parts of the world to find out the events of futurity.

7. Mars was the god of war, and Mercury the god of merchants, travellers, and shepherds, and Bacchus the god of wine, and Vulcan the god of blacksmiths. Vulcan seems to have been one of the best and most useful of the heathen deities, for he was an excellent blacksmith, and worked hard at his anvil.

8. Venus was the goddess of beauty. Her statues were made in the form of a beautiful woman. She had a son named Cupid, who was a mischievous little deity, and used to shoot at people with a bow and arrow.

9. Neptune was the chief of the marine deities. It was supposed that he had a huge scallop-shell for a chariot, and that his horses had the tails of fishes. Whenever he rode over the waves, a tribe of sea-monsters surrounded his chariot.

10. Pluto was the deity who presided in the infernal regions. He used to sit on a throne of brimstone, looking very stern and awful. In one hand he held a sceptre, and in the other two keys. A dog with three heads kept guard at his gate.

11. Juno was the wife of Jupiter, and queen of heaven. Minerva was the goddess of wisdom, Diana the goddess of hunting, Ceres the goddess of the fields and the harvests, and Vesta the goddess of fire.

Cupid? 9. What of Neptune? Where did he dwell? How is he represented?
 10. Who was Pluto? Where did he dwell? What of him? His dog? 11. What of Juno? Minerva? Ceres? Vesta?

12. Beside the gods and goddesses, the Greeks believed in heroes, who were half gods and half men. Of these, Hercules was very famous for his wonderful feats of strength.

13. Ridiculous as their deities were, the Greeks honored them with magnificent temples. No other edifices ever built by mortal hands have been so beautiful. Some of the churches in our own country are now built on the plan of the old Grecian temples dedicated to heathen gods.

14. The Grecian sculptors carved marble statues of their deities. These images were so grand, and beautiful, and dignified, that it seems as if the artists must have seen such heavenly creatures somewhere, or else they never could have carved their likenesses.

CHAPTER LVII.—EUROPE CONTINUED.

The Grecian Philosophers.

1. THE Greek philosophers were men who pretended to be wiser than mankind in general. There were a great many of them, who lived in various ages. I shall speak of some of the most remarkable, in this and the following chapter.

2. The philosopher Thales was born between six and seven hundred years before the Christian era. In his time there were seven philosophers, who were called the seven wise men of Greece; and Thales was considered the wisest of them all.

3. One night, while this great philosopher was taking a walk, he looked upward to contemplate the stars. Being much interested in this occupation, he strayed out of his path, and tumbled into a ditch. An old woman who lived in his family ran and helped him out, all covered with mud. "For the future, Thales," said she, "I advise you not to have your head among the stars, while your feet are on the earth!" Some people think that the old woman was the wisest philosopher of the two.

4. The philosopher Pythagoras believed that when people died, their souls migrated into the bodies of animals or birds. He affirmed that his own soul once lived in the body of a peacock.

5. Heraclitus of Ephesus was called the dark philosopher, because all his sayings were like riddles. He thought that nothing was wisdom which could be understood by common people.

6. This wise man considered the world such a wretched place, that he never could look at anybody without shedding tears. And at last he retired to a cave among the mountains, where he lived on herbs and roots, and was as miserable as his heart could wish.

7. Democritus, who lived not long after Heraclitus, was quite a different sort of philosopher. Instead of shedding tears, he laughed so continually that his townsmen thought him mad. And, to say the truth, I think so too.

8. The philosopher Empedocles went and lived near Mount Etna, in Sicily. He was a man of very grave and majestic appearance, and everybody knew him, because he used to wear a crown of laurel on his head. People generally acknowledged him to be a very wise man; but, not content with this, he wanted to be thought a god.

9. One day, after he had prepared a great festival, Empedocles disappeared, and was never seen again. The people took it for granted that he had ascended to heaven. But shortly afterward, there was an eruption of Mount Etna, and an old shoe was thrown out of the crater. On examination, it was found out that this shoe had belonged to Empedocles. It was now easy to guess at the fate of the foolish old man. He had thrown himself into the crater of the blazing volcano, in order that people might think him a god, and that he had gone to heaven.

10. Socrates was one of the wisest and best philosophers of Greece. Indeed, he was so wise and good, that the profligate Athenians could not suffer him to live. They therefore compelled him to drink poison.

11. Diogenes was the queerest philosopher of all. He was called Diogenes the Dog,—either because he lived like a dog, or because he had a currish habit of snarling at everybody.

12. His doctrine was, that the fewer enjoyments a man had, the happier he was likely to be. This philosopher went about barefoot, dressed in very shabby clothes, and carrying a bag, a jug, and a staff. He afterward got a great tub, which he used to lug about with him all day long, and sleep in at night.

13. One day, Alexander the Great came to see Diogenes, and found him mending his tub. It happened that Alexander stood in such a manner as to shade Diogenes from the sun, and he felt cold. “Diogenes,” said Alexander, “you must have a very hard time of it, living in a tub. Can I do any thing to better your condition?" "Nothing, except to get out of my sunshine," replied Diogenes, who disdained to accept any other favor from the greatest monarch in the world.

Something more about Philosophers. About the Greek Poets.

1. I COULD tell you much more about the Grecian philosophers, but I have not room. I must not forget, however, to mention Plato, who was born 429 years B. C., and was for eight years the pupil of Socrates.

2. This great man, like many other Grecian philosophers, was a sort of schoolmaster, and many young men came to be taught by him. He delivered his lectures in a grove near Athens, called Academus, from which circumstance the word academy has since been applied to schools.

3. So great was his reputation, that the first young men from various parts of the world came to be his pupils. He had very sublime ideas of religion, virtue, and truth, and he delivered them with so much sweetness and eloquence, that his listeners were enchanted. The Greeks spoke of him as Plato the Divine.

4. There were other celebrated philosophers in Greece, but I must leave them now, and tell you of the poets. Homer, the best poet of ancient times, and one of the greatest that ever lived, I have already mentioned. When this great man was born, how he lived, or where he died, are matters of uncertainty.

5. The general opinion is, that he lived about the year 900 B. C. and was a wandering minstrel, who went about from place to place reciting and singing his verses. The Iliad and Odyssey, his two great poems, were composed in separate parts, and, but for the care of Lycurgus, who had them collected, would doubtless have been lost. They celebrate the actions of heroes and imaginary gods, and are full of the deepest interest.

6. There were a multitude of other poets in Greece, some of whom acquired great celebrity. Among these was Anacreon, who wrote about love; Pindar, who composed sublime odes; and Theocritus, who sang about shepherds and shepherdesses. There were also many poets who wrote pieces to be played upon the stage.

7. You already know that the Greeks were in many respects very ignorant, and entertained many absurd notions. They did not know that the earth is a great globe or ball, that it turns round every day, and that the moon and stars are also great worlds moving about in the sky.

8. You would not therefore expect in their poetry to find any useful information about geography or astronomy. Yet they lived in a beautiful country, and their mountains, streams, and valleys were often the subject of their songs.

9. Their religion, too, though full of absurdity, furnished materials for the poets. They described the gods and goddesses as dwelling upon the mountains, or skipping along the valleys, or gliding amidst the waters. Thus every object of nature derived a new interest from the vivid fancy of the poets.

10. To this day the verses of these poets are remembered, and the places mentioned by them are often

VASES USED BY THE GREEKS FOR WATER.

About the Mode of Life among the Ancient Greeks.

1. BUT we must now leave poets and philosopher, and take a view of the private life of the ancient Greeks. The men wore an inner garment, called a tunic, over which they threw a mantle; their shoes or sandals were bound about their feet with thongs or ropes. In ancient times, the Greeks went with their heads uncovered, but afterward they used hats which were tied under the chin.

2. The women always covered their heads with a veil, which came down upon the shoulders. They wore in their hair golden grasshoppers, and ear-rings were suspended from their ears. The rest of their dress consisted of a white tunic fastened with a broad sash, and descending in folds down to their heels.

3. The Greeks usually made four meals a day: the morning meal, which was taken at the rising of the sun; the next at mid-day; the afternoon repast; and the supper, which was the principal meal, as it was taken after the business of the day. At the head of this chapter, I have given you pictures of some of their vessels for water, which will show you that some articles of their furniture were very beautiful.

4. In the early ages, the food of the Greeks was the fruits of the earth, and their drink water; the flesh of animals was introduced at a later period. This brought on the luxuries of the table, and some of the cities of Greece became renowned for producing excellent cooks. The Spartans, as we have before mentioned, ate at public tables. Their chief food consisted of black broth.

5. The poor sometimes fed on grasshoppers, and the extremities of leaves. In general, the Greeks were very fond of flesh. Their usual drink was water, either hot or cold, but most commonly the latter, which was sometimes cooled with ice. Wines were very generally used, and even perfumed wines were introduced at the tables of the rich.

6. Before the Greeks went to an entertainment, they washed and anointed themselves; when they arrived, the entertainer took them by the hand, or kissed their lips, hands, knees, or feet, as they deserved more or less respect. It must be observed concerning the guests, that men and women were never invited together.

7. They sat at meat either quite upright, or leaning a little backward, but in more degenerate ages they adopted the eastern custom of reclining on beds or couches. As soon as the provisions were set on the table, and before the guests began to eat, a part was offered as a sort of first-fruits to the gods.

8. They had a custom similar to ours, of drinking healths, not only to those present, but to their absent friends; and at every name they poured a little wine on the ground, which was called a libation.

9. The entertainment being ended, a hymn was sung to the gods. After this, the company was amused with music, dancing, and mimicry, or whatever could tend to excite mirth or cheerfulness.

10. The houses of the rich were built of stone, and many of them were highly ornamented. A large part of the people, however, lived in huts made of rough stone laid in clay.

11. In war, the Greeks fought with various weapons. Some of the soldiers had bows and arrows; some had javelins or spears, which they hurled with great force and precision of aim; and some had slings with which they threw stones. They usually carried shields for warding off the weapons of their enemies.

12. You must recollect that in these ancient times, gunpowder was not known, and muskets and cannon were therefore not in use. In battle, the warriors often engaged in close conflict, foot to foot, and breast to breast. The strife was therefore very exciting, and the men usually fought with furious courage.

13. As mankind were very much given to making war upon one another, it was the custom in all countries to surround the cities with high walls for defense. This practice indeed continued for many ages, and if you ever go to Europe, you will see that the principal cities of France, Germany, and many other countries, are still secured in this way.

14. In modern times, when an army attacks a city, it batters down the walls with cannon shot, or by undermining them, placing gunpowder beneath, and then setting it on fire. But in the olden times of Greece, the warriors used battering rams, consisting of heavy beams with ponderous stones at one end. These were driven by main strength against the walls, and thus, after many efforts, they were demolished.

How did the warriors engage one another in conflict? 13. What was the custom regarding cities? What are to be seen in Europe? 14. How do the moderns attack a walled city? How did the ancients destroy the walls of a city?

Philip of Macedon conquers Greece.

1. I SHALL now resume the history of Greece, at the point where I left off. The reader will recollect that I had just finished speaking of the Theban war.

2. Not long after the close of that war, the states of Greece became involved in another, which was generally called the Sacred war. The people of Phocis had been sentenced, by the Amphyctionic council, to pay a heavy fine for ploughing a field which belonged to the temple of Apollo, at Delphos.

3. Rather than pay the fine, the Phocians resolved to go to war. The people of Athens, Sparta, and Achaia, assisted the Phocians. The Thebans, Locrians, and Thessalians, took the part of the Amphyctionic council, and Philip, king of Macedon, was solicited to fight on the same side.

4. The kingdom of Macedon is numbered by some historians among the states of Greece; but others consider it a separate country. Although it was founded about five hundred years before this period, it had never been very powerful till Philip mounted the throne.

5. Philip was ambitious and warlike. No sooner had he marched his army into Greece, than he determined to make himself ruler of the whole country. The Greeks were not now so valiant as they had been; and there were no such men as Leonidas, Miltiades, or Epaminondas, to lead them to victory.

6. The man that gave Philip more trouble than any other, was Demosthenes, an Athenian. He was one of the most eloquent orators that ever lived; and he uttered such terrible orations against Philip, that the Athenians were incited to resist him in battle. It is from these orations against the Macedonian king that severe speeches have since been called philippics.

7 But the Athenians were beaten at Cheronea, in the year 338 before the Christian era. Thenceforward, Philip controlled the affairs of Greece, till his death. Perhaps, after all, he was a better ruler than the Greeks could have found among themselves.

8. But he had many vices, and among the rest, that of drinking to excess. One day, just after he had risen from a banquet, he decided a certain law-case unjustly. The losing person cried out, "I appeal from Philip drunk, to Philip sober!" And, sure enough, when Philip got sober, he decided the other way.

9. A poor woman, who had some business with Philip, tried in vain to obtain an audience. He put her off from one day to another, saying that he had no leisure to attend to her. "If you have no leisure to do justice, you have no right to be king!" said the woman. Philip was struck with the truth of what the woman said, and he became more attentive to the duties of a king.

10. He lived only about two years after he had conquered the Greeks. There was a young nobleman named Pausanias, a captain of the guard, who had been injured by one of Philip's relations. As Philip would not punish the offender, Pausanias resolved that he himself should die.

11. On the day of the marriage of Philip's daughter, the king was entering the public theatre, where the nuptial festivities were to be celebrated. At this moment Pausanias rushed forth, with his sword drawn, and stabbed him to the heart.

12. The Athenians greatly rejoiced at the news of Philip's death. They publicly voted that a golden crown should be given to Pausanias, as a reward for having murdered him. All the other states of Greece likewise revolted against the power of Macedon.

Conquests of Alexander the Great.

1. BUT the new king of Macedon, though only twenty years old, was well worthy to sit on his father's throne. He was Alexander, afterward surnamed the CHAPTER LXI.—1. Who was the new king of Macedon?

Great. Young as he was, he had already given proofs of the valor which so soon made him conqueror of the world.

2. Alexander subdued the Grecian states in the course of one campaign. He was then declared generalissimo of the Greeks, and undertook a war against Persia. The army which he led against that country consisted of thirty-five thousand men.

3. He crossed the Hellespont, and marched through Asia Minor, toward Persia. Before reaching its borders, he was met by the Persian king, Darius, who had collected an immense army. Alexander defeated him, and killed a hundred and ten thousand of his soldiers.

4. Darius soon assembled a mightier army than before. He had now half a million of men. He advanced to battle in the midst of his troops, seated on a lofty chariot, which resembled a moving throne. Around him were his life-guards, all in splendid armor.

5. But when the Persians saw how boldly the Macedonian horsemen advanced, they took to flight. Poor king Darius was left almost alone on his lofty chariot.

Of what had he given proofs? 2. After what exploit was Alexander declared generalissimo of the Greeks? What of the army which he led against Persia? 3. What sea and country did the army cross to reach Persia? Who opposed Alexander? How many of Darius' army were killed? 4. Describe the march of Darius and his half million of troops.

He had but just time to get on horseback, and gallop away from the battle. Shortly afterward, he was slain by two of his own subjects, as I have told you in the history of Persia.

6. After the victory, Alexander marched to Persepolis, which was then the capital of Persia. It was a rich and magnificent city. In the royal palace, there was a gigantic statue of Xerxes, but the Macedonian soldiers overthrew it, and tumbled it upon the ground.

7. While he remained at Persepolis, Alexander gave himself up to drunkenness and licentious pleasures. One night, at a splendid banquet, an Athenian lady persuaded the conqueror to set fire to the city. It was accordingly burnt to the ground.

8. When Persia was completely subdued, Alexander invaded India, now Hindostan. One of the kings of that country was named Porus. He is said to have been seven feet and a half in height. This gigantic king led a great army against Alexander.

9. Porus was well provided with elephants, which had been trained to rush upon the enemy, and trample them down. Alexander had no elephants, but his usual good fortune did not desert him. The army of Porus was routed, and he himself was taken prisoner and loaded with chains.

10. In this degraded condition, the Indian king was brought into the victor's tent. Alexander gazed with wonder at the enormous stature of Porus. Although so great a conqueror, he was himself only of middle size. "How shall I treat you?" asked Alexander of his prisoner. "Like a king!" said Porus. This answer led Alexander to reflect how he himself should like to be treated, should he be in a similar situation; and he was induced to behave generously to Porus.

Sequel of Alexander's career.

1. In the early part of his career, Alexander had shown many excellent and noble traits of character. But he met with such great and continual success in all his undertakings, that his disposition was ruined by it. He began to consider himself the equal of the gods.

CHAPTER LXII.—1. What of Alexander? What ruined his disposition? How did he consider himself?

2. Yet so far was Alexander from being a god, that some of his actions were unworthy of a man. One of his worst deeds was the murder of Clitus, an old officer who had fought under king Philip. He had once saved Alexander's life in battle, and on this account he was allowed to speak very freely to him.

3. One night, after drinking too much wine, Alexander began to speak of his own exploits; and he spoke more highly of them than old Clitus thought they deserved. Accordingly, he told Alexander that his father Philip had done much greater things than ever he had done.

4. The monarch was so enraged, that he snatched a spear from one of his attendants, and gave Clitus a mortal wound. But when he saw the old man's bloody corpse extended on the floor, he was seized with horror. He had murdered the preserver of his own life!

5. Alexander's remorse, however, did not last long. He still insisted on being a god, the son of Jupiter Ammon; and he was mortally offended with a philosopher named Callisthenes, because he refused to worship him. For no other crime, Callisthenes was put into an iron cage, and tormented, till he killed himself in despair.

6. After Alexander's return from India to Persia, he met with a great misfortune. It was the loss of his dearest friend, Hephestion, who died of a disease which he had contracted by excessive drinking. For three days afterward, Alexander lay prostrate on the ground, and would take no food.

7. It would have been well if he had taken warning by the fate of Hephestion. But Alexander the Great was destined to owe his destruction to the wine-cup. While drinking at a banquet in Babylon, he was suddenly taken sick; and death soon conquered the conqueror.

8. As to the merits of Alexander, I pretty much agree with a certain pirate, whom the Macedonian soldiers once took prisoner. Alexander demanded of this man by what right he committed his robberies. "I am a robber by the same right that you are a conqueror," was the reply. "The only difference between us is, that I have but a few men, and can do but little mischievous; while you have a large army, and can do a great deal."

9. It must be confessed that this is the chief difference between conquerors and robbers. Yet, when Alexander died, his body was deposited in a splendid coffin, at Alexandria, in Egypt, and the Egyptians paid him divine honors, as if he had been the greatest possible benefactor to the world.

Greece invaded by the Gauls.

1. WHEN Alexander lay on his death-bed, his attendants asked to whom he would bequeath the empire, which now extended from Greece to India, including a great many nations. His answer was, "To the most worthy."

2. But there appears to have been no very worthy man among those whom he left behind him; and even if there had been, the unworthy ones would not have consented to yield him the whole power. Alexander's empire was therefore divided among thirty-three of his chief officers.

9. What was done when Alexander died?

3. But the most powerful of these officers were determined to have more than their share; and in the year 312 before Christ, four of them had got possession of the whole. Alexander had then been dead eleven years. All his children and relatives had been destroyed by his ambitious officers.

4. The Greeks, when they heard of Alexander's death, had attempted to regain their liberty. But their struggles were unsuccessful; and the country was reduced to subjection by Cassander, who had been general of Alexander's cavalry. Cassander died in a few years. Thenceforward, the history of Greece tells of nothing but crimes, and revolutions, and misfortunes.

5. In the year 278 before the Christian era, the Gauls invaded Greece. They were a barbarous people, who inhabited the country now called France. Their general's name was Brennus; and their numbers are said to have been a hundred and sixty-five thousand men.

6. Brennus met with hardly any opposition. He marched to Delphos, intending to steal the treasures that were contained in the famous temple of Apollo. "A deity, like Apollo, does not want these treasures," said Brennus. "I am only a man, and have great need of them."

7. Accordingly, he led his barbarians toward the temple. The stately marble front of the edifice was seen at a short distance before them. It was considered the holiest spot in Greece. Here was the mysterious oracle, from which so many wonderful prophecies had issued.

8. A wild shout burst from the army of the Gauls, and they were on the point of rushing forward to the temple. But suddenly a violent storm arose. The thunder roared, and the wind blew furiously. At the same moment a terrible earthquake shook the ground beneath the affrighted Gauls.

9. A band of Greeks had assembled, to fight in defence of the temple. When they saw the disorder of the barbarians, they attacked them, sword in hand. It had grown so dark that the Gauls could not distinguish friends from foes. They killed one another, and the whole army was destroyed.

6. What of Brennus and a famous temple at Delphos? 7. Describe the march toward the temple. 8. What affrighted the Gauls? 9. What of the Greeks? How were the Gauls destroyed?

10. Such is the story which the old historians tell about this battle; it is doubtless much exaggerated, for some of the particulars appear hardly credible. But, at any rate, this was the last great victory that the ancient Greeks ever achieved over their enemies.

End of Grecian Independence.

1. THE Greeks had now almost entirely lost their love of liberty, as well as the other virtues which had formerly distinguished them. In proof of this, I will relate the story of Agis, the young king of Sparta.

2. King Agis was anxious for the welfare of Sparta, and he greatly desired to restore the ancient laws which Lycurgus had enacted. But the Spartans were now vicious and cowardly. They hated the very name of Lycurgus, and resolved not to be governed by his severe laws.

3. They therefore seized the virtuous young king and dragged him to prison. He was condemned to death.

10. What may be said of the victory over the Gauls?

CHAPTER LXIV.—1. What of the Greeks? 2. Who was Agis? What did he desire? What of the Spartans? 3. What did they do to Agis?

The executioner shed tears at the moment when he was going to kill him. "Do not weep for me," said Agis; "I am happier than my murderers."

4. A little while after Agis was killed, his mother and grandmother came to the prison to see him, for they had not heard of his death. They were led into his dungeon; and the murderers of Agis immediately strangled them both, and threw their dead bodies upon his.

5. Some time after this horrible event, the Spartans had a king called Nabis. He was such a cruel monster, that Heaven seemed to have made him a king only for the punishment of the people's wickedness. Nabis had an image in his palace. It resembled his own wife, and was very beautiful; it was likewise clothed with magnificent garments, such as were proper for a queen to wear. But the breast and arms of the image were stuck full of sharp iron spikes.

6. These, however, were hidden by the rich clothes. When king Nabis wished to extort money from any person, he invited him to his palace, and led him up to the image. No sooner was the stranger within reach, than the image put out its arms and squeezed him close to its breast.

Describe his death. 4. What of the mother and grandmother of Agis? 5. What of Nabis? Describe the image. 6, 7. What did Nabis do when he wanted to extort money from any one?

7. This was done by means of machinery. The poor man might struggle as hard as he pleased; but he could not possibly get away from the cruel embrace of the statue. There he remained, with the iron spikes sticking into his flesh, until his agony compelled him to give Nabis as much money as he asked for.

8. When such enormities were committed by the kings of Greece, it was time that the country should be governed by other masters. My readers will not be sorry to hear that this soon happened. One hundred and forty-six years before the Christian era, Greece submitted to the authority of Rome.

9. Thus I have given you a very brief account of ancient Greece. Its history is full of interest, and full of instruction. I hope you will hereafter read the whole story in some larger work than mine.

Modern History of Greece.

1. FROM this time forward, the history of Greece is connected with that of other nations. The Greeks had no longer any power, even in their own native country. But they were still respected on account of the poets, and historians, and sculptors, who appeared among them.

2. But in course of time, the genius of the Greeks seemed to have deserted them, as well as their ancient valor. They were then wholly despised. I have not space to relate any of the events that occurred to them while they were governed by the Romans.

3. Between three and four hundred years after the Christian era, the Roman dominions were divided into the Eastern and Western empires. The capital of the Eastern empire was Constantinople. The territory of ancient Greece was included under this government; and it was sometimes called the Greek empire.

4. Above a thousand years elapsed, and nothing happened of such importance that it need be told in this brief history. But about the year 1450, the Turks invaded the eastern empire of the Romans. Greece then fell beneath their power. During almost four centuries, the Greeks were treated by the Turks like slaves.

5. At last, in the year 1821, they rebelled against the tyranny of the Turks. A war immediately broke out. It continued a long time, and was carried on with the most shocking cruelty on both sides.

6. Many people from other countries went to assist the Greeks. The ancient renown of Greece made friends of all who were acquainted with her history. Lord Byron, the illustrious English poet, lost his life in Greece, for the sake of this famous land.

7. The Turks are a fierce people, and they resolved not to give up the country. The Greeks, on the other hand, determined either to drive away their oppressors, or to die. But they would not have succeeded, if England, France, and Russia, had not taken their part.

8. The fleets of these three nations formed a junction off the coast of Greece. They were all under the command of the English admiral, Sir Edward Codrington. In October, 1827, they attacked a Turkish fleet of more than two hundred vessels, in the bay of Navarino.

9. The Turks were entirely beaten, and their vessels were sunk or burned. In consequence of their losses in this battle, they were unable to continue the war. Greece was therefore evacuated by the Turks.

10. But as the Greeks were not considered entirely fit to govern themselves, a king was selected for them, by England, France, and Russia. The new king was INHABITANTS OF MODERN ITALY.

About Italy as it now is.

1. ITALY is a strip of land in the south of Europe, extending into the Mediterranean sea. It is fancied to have the shape of a boot, the island of Sicily lying at the toe. It has a beautiful climate, the seasons of spring and summer seeming always to prevail.

2. If you were to go to this country, you would be charmed with the beauty of the sky, and the balmy softness of the air. You would find grapes so abundant that you could buy a delicious bunch, as large as you could eat, for a cent; and if you wished for wine, you could get a bottle for four cents.

3. You would find, in short, that Italy abounds in pleasant fruits, and in every species of production required for the comfort of man. You would find the people—men, women, and children—living a great part of the time in the open air, often singing, and sometimes dancing in groups beneath the trees.

4. But in the midst of these signs of cheerfulness, you would observe a great deal of poverty, and you would soon discover that many of the people are indolent, vicious, and degraded.

5. In the cities, many of which are large, and filled with thousands of people, you would notice costly churches and splendid palaces, many of them built of marble. But still every thing around you would bear an aspect of decay, and impress you with the idea that Italy, with all its splendor, is an unhappy country.

6. At Florence, Rome, Naples, and other large cities, you would find collections of pictures and statues, which surpass in beauty every thing of the kind in the world. These pictures are the works of famous artists, who have lived in Italy within the last five hundred years.

7. The statues are the productions of sculptors, who have lived at various periods within the last two thousand years. Some of them, indeed, are supposed to have been executed by Grecian artists, who lived in the time of Pericles.

8. But in all Italy there is nothing that will excite so much interest as the ruins of ancient Rome, many of which are still to be seen in the modern city. These, like the ancient remains of Egypt and Greece, would delight you with their beauty, and astonish you by their grandeur and magnificence.

9. The most remarkable edifice of modern times to be found in Italy, is the church of St. Peter's at Rome, the height of which is nearly five hundred feet. Near this is the Vatican, a famous palace inhabited by the pope, the head of the Roman Catholic religion, all over the world. The present pope is Pius IX.

10. If you were to go to Naples, you would see at the distance of a few miles a famous mountain called Vesuvius, from which smoke, flame, and torrents of melted lava have periodically issued for ages. Some times whole towns and cities in the neighborhood have been buried beneath the burning masses.

11. If you were to go to the island of Sicily, you would find another volcanic mountain called Etna, which also pours out, from time to time, immense volumes of smoke, fire, and lava. Yet at the very base of these mountains the people dwell in thickly settled villages, and here you will find rich vineyards, beautiful gardens, and groves of figs, oranges, and olives.

12. Having visited Italy, you will return to America with many wonderful tales to tell of this famous peninsula that lies in the shape of a boot in the Mediterranean sea; but you will still be contented and happy to settle down in your native country, where beggars are seldom seen, where poverty and wretchedness are rare, and where every thing speaks of prosperity.

13. The truth is that Italy has been badly governed for ages, and the people have become indolent and vicious. Let us hope that they will yet become more worthy of the beautiful country they inhabit.

11. What of Etna? 12. With what feelings would you return to America after visiting Italy? 13. What may be said of Italy? Her people?

Founding of Rome by Romulus. Its early state.

1. I SHALL now proceed to tell you the history of Rome, the most celebrated empire of antiquity. Like the history of all ancient countries, it abounds in tales of battle, bloodshed, injustice, and crime. Over such horrid scenes I should be glad to draw a veil ; but these things have really happened, and it is the duty of a faithful story-teller to hide nothing which is necessary to give a true picture of what he undertakes to exhibit.

2. The famous city of Rome stands on the river Tiber, in Italy. Its distance from the sea is about sixteen miles. It is supposed to have been founded by Romulus, in the year 752 B. C. Romulus was the captain of about three thousand banditti, or outlaws. These men built some huts on a hill called the Palatine, and enclosed them with a wall. This was the origin of the most famous city the world ever saw.

3. It is said that this wall was so low, that Remus, the brother of Romulus, leaped over it. "Do you call this the wall of a city?" cried he, contemptuously. Romulus was so enraged, that he struck his brother dead ; and this was the first blood that bedewed the walls of Rome.

4. When Romulus and his fellow robbers were comfortably settled in their new houses, they found themselves in want of wives. At this time, Italy was inhabited by many rude tribes. Among these were the Sabines, who lived in the neighborhood of Rome. These would not allow their young women to marry the Romans; but Romulus contrived a scheme to get wives by force.

5. He invited the whole Sabine people to witness some games and sports. Accordingly, the Sabines came; and, as they suspected no mischief, they brought almost all their marriageable young women.

6. At first, the Sabines were highly delighted with the feats of strength and agility, which were performed for their entertainment. But, in a little while, Romulus gave a signal; and all his men drew their swords, and rushed among the peaceable spectators.

7. The Sabines were of course taken by surprise, and could make no resistance. Each of the Romans caught up the prettiest young woman he could find, and carried her away. There was no longer any scarcity of wives in Rome.

8. This outrageous act of violence caused a war between the Romans and Sabines. The latter mustered a large army, and would probably have exterminated Romulus and his banditti. But when they were about to engage in battle, the young wives of the Romans rushed into the field.

9. They besought the two hostile parties to make peace. They said that whichever side might gain the victory, it would bring nothing but sorrow to them; for, if the Sabines should conquer, their husbands must lose their lives; or, if the Romans should win the day, their kindred would perish.

10. Both parties were much moved by these entreaties. The Sabines saw that the young women had become attached to their husbands; and therefore it would be a pity to separate them, even if it could be done without bloodshed. In short, the matter ended peaceably, and an alliance, which you know is a friendly treaty, was formed.

11. The first government of Rome consisted of a king and senate. Romulus was chosen king, and reigned thirty-seven years. There are different accounts of the way in which his reign terminated.

12. Some historians pretend that, while Romulus sat in the senate-house, giving wise instructions in regard to matters of state, the hall was suddenly dark ened by an eclipse of the sun. When the sun shone out again, the chair of Romulus was perceived to be empty; and it was said he had been taken up into heaven.

13. Others say that Romulus attempted to make himself a tyrant, and that therefore the senators pulled him down from his chair of state and tore him in pieces. This story appears more probable than the former. At all events, king Romulus suddenly disappeared, and was never seen again in the city which he had founded.

1. THE second king of Rome was Numa Pompilius. He was a wise and good king, and a great lover of peace. He spent forty-three years in making excellent laws, and in instructing the people in agriculture and other useful arts.

2. The peaceful Numa was succeeded by Tullus

13. What do others say?

CHAPTER LXIX.—1. Who was the second king of Rome? What of him?

Hostilius. He was a warlike monarch. During his reign the Romans engaged in hostilities with the Albans, who inhabited a neighboring city.

3. It was agreed that the war should be decided by a battle between three champions on each side. In the army of the Albans there were three brothers, each named Curiatius; and in the Roman army there were likewise three, by the name of Horatius.

4. These Horatii and Curiatii were fixed upon as the champions. They fought in an open plain; and on each side stood the ranks of armed warriors, with their swords sheathed, anxiously watching the combat.

5. At first it seemed as if the Curiatii were going to win the victory. It is true they were all three wounded; but two of the Horatii lay dead upon the field. The other Horatius was still unhurt. He appeared determined not to perish like his two brothers; for he was seen to turn and flee. At the flight of their champion, the Romans groaned with shame and despair; for if he should lose the battle, they were all to be made slaves.

6. The three Curiatii pursued the fugitive. But their wounds had rendered them feeble. They staggered along, one behind the other, so that they were separated by considerable distances. This was what Horatius desired. Though he could not have beaten all three together, he was more than a match for them singly.

7. He now turned fiercely upon the foremost, and slew him. Then he encountered the second, and smote him dead in a moment. The third met with the same fate. The Alban army now turned pale, and dropped their weapons on the field; for they had lost their freedom.

8. The exulting Romans greeted Horatius with shouts of triumph. He returned toward Rome amid a throng of his countrymen, all of whom hailed him as their benefactor. But as he entered the city, he met a young woman wringing her hands in an agony of grief. This was his sister. She was in love with one of the Curiatii, and when she saw Horatius, she shrieked aloud, and reproached him bitterly for having slain her lover.

9. The victor still held the bloody sword with which he had killed the three Alban champions. His heart was still fierce with the frenzy of the combat. He could not bear that his sister should bewail one of the dead enemies, instead of her two dead brothers; nor that she should darken his triumph with her reproaches. Accordingly, in the frenzy of the moment, he stabbed her to the heart.

10. Horatius was condemned to die for this dreadful crime; but he was afterward pardoned, because his valor had won for Rome such a great deliverance. But the disgrace of his guilt was far more than the honor of his victory.

From the reign of Ancus Martius till the expulsion of the Kings.

1. AFTER the death of Tullus Hostilius, the Romans elected Ancus Martius to be king. He was succeeded by Tarquin the Elder, whose father had been a rich merchant. The next king was Servius Tullius. When Servius had reigned forty-four years, he was murdered by Tarquin, his son-in-law, who was ambitious of being king.

10. What of Horatius? Why was he pardoned?

CHAPTER LXX.—1. Who was king after Tullus Hostilius? Who next? Who killed Servius Tullius?

2. Tullia, the wife of Tarquin and daughter of Servius, rejoiced at her father's death, for she wished to be queen. She rode out in her chariot in order to congratulate her wicked husband. In one of the streets through which the chariot was to pass, lay the dead body of the poor old king. The coachman saw it, and was desirous of turning back. "Drive on!" cried the wicked Tullia.

3. The coachman did so; and as the street was too narrow to permit him to turn out, the chariot passed directly over the murdered king. But Tullia rode on without remorse, although the wheels were stained with her father's blood.

4. Her husband now ascended the throne, and was called Tarquin the Proud. The Romans abhorred him, for he was a hateful tyrant. Several almost incredible stories are told respecting his reign.

5. One day, it is said that a woman of singular aspect entered the king's presence, bringing nine large books in her arms. No one knew whence she came, nor what was contained in her books. She requested the king to buy them. But the price was so high, that Tarquin refused; especially as he did not know what the books were about.

2. 3. What of Tullia? Describe her wicked act. 4. What was Tarquin called? What of him?

6. The unknown woman went away and burnt three of her books. She then came back, and again offered the remaining ones to Tarquin. But she demanded as much money for the six as she had before asked for the whole nine; and Tarquin of course refused to buy them.

7. The woman went away a second time. But shortly afterward she was again seen entering the palace. She had now only three volumes left; and these she offered to the king at the same price which she had before asked for the nine.

8. There was something so strange and mysterious in all this, that Tarquin concluded to give the woman her price. She put the three volumes into his hands, and immediately disappeared.

9. The books were found to be the oracles of a sybil, or prophetess. They were therefore looked upon with superstitious reverence, and were preserved in Rome during many ages; and in all difficult and perplexing cases, the rulers looked into these old volumes, and read, as they supposed, the secrets of their country's fate. This story is doubtless a fable.

10. When Tarquin the Proud had reigned more than twenty years, he and his family were driven out of Rome by the people. This event was brought about by the wickedness of his son Sextus, whose conduct had caused a noble Roman lady to commit suicide. Her name was Lucretia.

11. The expulsion of the Tarquins took place in the year 509 before the Christian era. The Romans never had another king. Besides the senate, the government now consisted of two magistrates, called consuls, who were chosen every year. Brutus and Collatinus were the first.

12. Brutus gave a terrible example of his justice and patriotism. His two sons had engaged in a conspiracy to make Tarquin king again. Brutus, who was a judge when they were brought to trial, condemned them both to death, and had them executed in his presence.

What of him and his family? What of Sextus? 11. What took place 509 B. C.? How long from the founding of Rome to the death of her last king? What of the government of Rome after the Tarquins? Who were the first consuls? 12. What act did Brutus perform?

The story of Coriolanus.

1. Acts of heroism were common among the Romans, in those days. A young man, named Mutius Scævola, gained great credit for his fortitude. He had been taken prisoner by the troops of the king of Etruria, or Tuscany, who was at war with Rome. Porsenna threatened to torture him, unless he would betray the plans of the Roman general.

2. A fire was burning close beside the prisoner. He immediately put his hand into the midst of the flames, and held it there till it was burnt off. By this act he showed Porsenna that no tortures could induce him to turn traitor.

3. Almost from the first foundation of Rome, the inhabitants had been divided into two classes; one called patricians, and the other plebeians. The senate and most of the rich men were included among the patricians. The consuls were also chosen from this class.

4. Thus the patricians had nearly all the power in their hands. This caused frequent quarrels between them and the common people, or plebeians. But at length it was ordained that five magistrates, called tribunes, should be annually chosen by the plebeians.

5. These tribunes took away a great deal of power from the patricians, and were therefore hated by them. Coriolanus, a valiant, but proud patrician, endeavored to have the office of the tribunes abolished. But they were more powerful than he, and succeeded in procuring his banishment.

6. Coriolanus left the city, and went to the territories of the Volsci, who were bitter enemies of the Romans. There he gathered a large army, and advanced to besiege Rome. His countrymen were greatly alarmed when they heard that the banished Coriolanus was returning so soon, and in so terrible a manner.

7. They therefore sent an embassy to meet him, consisting of the oldest senators. But these venerable men could make no impression on Coriolanus. Next came an embassy of priests; but they met with no better success.

8. Coriolanus still marched onward, and pitched his tent within a short distance of the Roman walls. He was gazing toward the city, and planning an attack for the next day, when a third embassy appeared. It was a mournful procession of Roman ladies.

CORIOLANUS AND HIS MOTHER.

9. At their head walked Volumnia, who was the mother of Coriolanus; and Virgilia, his wife, was also there, leading his children by the hand. When they drew near, his mother knelt down at his feet, and besought him not to be the ruin of his native city.

10. Coriolanus strove to resist her entreaties, as he had resisted those of the senators and priests. But though his heart had been proud and stubborn against them, it was not so against his mother.

11. "Mother," cried he, "I yield! You have saved Rome, but you have destroyed your son!" And so it proved, for the Volsci were enraged at his retreat from Rome, and they murdered him at Antium.

BRENNUS INVADING ROME.

Rome invaded by the Gauls. The first Punic War.

1. IN process of time, the Roman government underwent various changes. The will of the plebeians had far greater influence than the will of the patricians.

11. What was his fate?

CHAPTER LXXII.—1. Of what was the prosperity of Rome the consequence?

The consequence was, that the prosperity of Rome increased, both at home and abroad.

2. But in the year 385 before Christ, a great calamity befel the city. It was taken by an army of Gauls, inhabitants of the country now called France. When Brennus, their general, had entered Rome, he marched with his soldiers to the senate-house.

3. There he beheld an assemblage of gray-bearded senators, seated in a noble hall, in chairs of ivory. Each held an ivory staff in his hand. These brave old men, though they could make no resistance, considered it beneath their dignity to run away from the invaders.

4. The Gauls were awe-struck by their venerable aspect. But finally, one of the soldiers, being ruder than his companions, took hold of the long gray beard of an aged senator, and pulled it. The old gentleman, whose name was Papyrius, was so offended at this insult, that he uplifted his ivory staff, and hit the soldier a blow on the head.

5. But that blow cost Rome dear. The Gauls immediately massacred Papyrius and the other senators, and set fire to the city; and almost the whole of it was reduced to ashes. You must bear in mind that at this time Rome had become an immense city. It contained many magnificent edifices; the most splendid of these was called the capitol; this was not taken by the Gauls.

6. All the bravest of the Romans assembled there, and resolved to defend it to the last. Yet the enemy had nearly got possession of it in the night. But as they were creeping toward the gate, they awoke a large flock of geese; and their cackling alarmed the sentinels.

7. In consequence of this fortunate event, a goose was thenceforth considered a very praiseworthy and honorable fowl by the Romans. I am not sure that they did not think it a sin to have roast goose for dinner.

8. The Gauls were driven out of Rome, and were soon vanquished by Camillus, a brave and patriotic Roman. It is said that not a single man of them got back to their own country, to tell the fate of his companions.

9. The Romans were almost continually at war. Their valor and discipline generally rendered them successful; but sometimes they met with misfortunes. In a war with the Samnites, a Roman army was captured, and forced to pass under the yoke, which was a sign of subjection. This was the highest possible ignominy.

10. But at length all the other states and kingdoms of Italy were brought under the Roman power. Afterward, the most formidable enemy of Rome was Carthage. This was a powerful city on the African coast, near where Tunis now stands. It was situated nearly south of Rome, across the Mediterranean sea, at the distance of about four hundred miles.

11. The wars between Rome and Carthage were called Punic wars. The first began in the year 264 before Christ, and lasted twenty-three years. Many battles were fought on land, and some by sea.

12. The Carthaginians were a cruel people. Whenever their generals lost a battle, they were crucified. Regulus, a Roman general, was taken by them, and underwent horrible torments. They cut off his eyelids, and then exposed his naked eyes to the burning sun. He was afterward put into a barrel, the inner sides of which were set with iron spikes.

13. A peace was at last concluded between Rome

Second and Third Punic Wars.

1. THE doors of the temple of Janus were soon flung wide open again; for a war broke out between the Romans and a tribe of Gauls. It ended in the conquest of the latter.

2. In the year 218 before the Christian era, another war with Carthage began. This was called the Second Punic war. The Carthaginians were commanded by Hannibal, who proved himself one of the greatest generals that ever lived.

3. Hannibal transported his army across the Mediterranean sea to Spain, and thence marched toward Italy. In his progress it was necessary that he should cross the Alps. The summits of these mountains are many thousand feet in height, and were covered with ice and snow; in some places Hannibal is said to have cut a passage through the solid rock.

4. After crossing these mountains, several battles were won by the Carthaginians. At length, the two Roman consuls, with a large army, encountered Hannibal and his soldiers at Cannæ. Here the Romans were defeated with dreadful slaughter. One of the consuls fled; the other was slain, and forty thousand men were left dead on the field.

5. Rome had now no army to protect it. If Hannibal had marched thither immediately, it is probable that he might have taken the city. But he delayed too long, and the Romans made preparation to defend themselves.

6. Hannibal never won such another victory as that at Cannæ, for the Romans soon enlisted new armies, and fought more successfully than before. Scipio, their best general, sailed over to Africa, in order to attack Carthage. Hannibal immediately followed him.

7. A battle was fought between him and Scipio at Zama. The Carthaginians had a multitude of elephants. These animals were wounded by the Roman darts, and the pain made them rush through the field, trampling down whole ranks of Hannibal's army.

8. The Carthaginians were entirely defeated, and Hannibal himself barely escaped amid the rout and confusion. This battle put an end to the second Punic war.

9. But a third war between Rome and Carthage broke out in about fifty years. The Romans were commanded by another Scipio, who was as valiant as his namesake; but the Carthaginians had no longer a Hannibal.

10. This third Punic war ended in the destruction of Carthage. The city was set on fire, and continued to burn during seventeen days. Many of the citizens threw themselves into the flames, and perished. This happened in the year 137 before the Christian era.

11. Scipio returned to Rome, and was rewarded with a triumph. As this was the highest honor that a Roman general could attain, and as such triumphs Scipio's Triumph.

1. SCIPIO, on his return from Carthage, stopped at the Campus Martius, which was a plain on the outside of Rome. From thence he was escorted into the city by a grand procession.

2. First came a band of musicians, playing their loudest strains on all sorts of instruments. Then followed a drove of oxen, which were to be sacrificed in the temples of the gods. Their horns were gilded, and garlands were wreathed around their heads.

3. Next came a train of wagons, heavily laden with the rich spoils that had been taken at Carthage. There was gold and silver in abundance, and statues, pictures, and magnificent garments. The brilliant armor of the vanquished army was likewise piled upon the wagons.

CHAPTER LXXIV.—1. Where was the Campus Martius? What of the procession? 2. What came first? What was to be done with the oxen? 3. With what were the wagons laden?

4. Then were seen some elephants, treading along like moving hills. These huge animals were trained to war, and were able to carry a whole company of soldiers on their backs.

5. Next appeared a melancholy troop of the vanquished Carthaginians. Their chains clanked as they walked heavily onward. Among them were all the principal men of Carthage, and they drooped their heads in shame and sorrow, regretting that they had not perished in the flames of their city.

6. Behind the sad troop came another loud band of music, drowning the groans of the captives with the uproar of a hundred instruments. There were likewise dancers, whose garb made them appear like monsters, neither beasts nor men. These wore crowns of gold.

7. Then came a splendid chariot, adorned with ivory, and drawn by four white horses all abreast. In this chariot stood the triumphant Scipio, dressed in a purple robe, which was covered with gold embroidery. His face was painted with vermilion, and he had a crown of laurel on his head.

hand he held an ivory sceptre, with a golden eagle at the top. But in the same chariot stood a slave, who kept whispering to Scipio, "Remember that thou art but a man!" And these words seemed to sadden Scipio's triumph.

9. Around the chariot was a great throng of Scipio's relatives, and other citizens, all clothed in white. Next came the consuls and all the members of the Roman senate, in their robes of ceremony.

10. Last in the procession marched the victorious army. Their helmets were wreathed with laurel. The standard-bearers carried eagles of gold and silver, instead of banners. As they moved onward, they sang hymns in praise of Scipio's valor, and all the Roman citizens joined their voices in the chorus. In this manner, the procession passed through the streets of Rome and entered the doors of the capitol.

Sylla and Marius.

1. THE Romans still continued to make conquests. Not long after the ruin of Carthage, the whole of Spain became a province of Rome. There was likewise a war with Numidia, a country of Africa, now called Algiers. Jugurtha, the Numidian king, was brought prisoner to Rome, and starved to death in a dungeon.

2. There was afterward a Social war, beginning in the year 91 before Christ. This war was called Social, because it was between the Romans and the neighboring states of Italy, who had been their own friends and allies. Three hundred thousand men were killed on both sides. Then there was a war with Mithridates, the powerful king of Pontus, in Asia Minor. He was not entirely vanquished till forty years afterward.

3. In the course of all this fighting, two Roman commanders acquired great renown. One was named Marius, and the other Sylla. Marius was a rude and daring soldier, knowing nothing but how to fight. Sylla was likewise a good soldier, but also a person of great elegance and polished manners.

4. These two generals became so great and powerful, that each was envious of the other. They therefore began a civil war, in which Romans fought against Romans. I will relate an incident in order to show the horrors of this war.

5. One of Sylla's soldiers had killed one of the soldiers of Marius. He began to strip him of his armor; but on taking off the helmet which had concealed the dead man's face, he saw that it was his own brother. The wretched survivor placed the body on a funeral pile, and then killed himself.

6. In the outset of the struggle with Sylla, Marius was beaten; but he afterward gained possession of Rome. He now resolved to put to death every person that was not friendly to his cause. Senators and other distinguished men were publicly murdered. Dead bodies were seen everywhere about the streets.

7. But Marius could not escape the misery which his wickedness deserved. He was so tortured by remorse, that he contracted a habit of drinking im-moderately. This brought on a fever, of which he died.

8. After the death of this wicked man, Sylla returned to Rome at the head of a large army. He declared himself dictator; and his word then became the sole law of Rome. Like Marius, he determined to massacre all his enemies. As fast as they were killed, their bloody heads were brought to him.

9. When Sylla had shed as much blood as he desired, he suddenly resigned his power. Everybody was surprised at this, but nobody lamented it; nor were there any mourners when this cruel and wicked man died, an event which happened soon after.

Cneius Pompey and Julius Cæsar.

1. If the Roman people had loved liberty as well as they once did, they never would have borne the tyranny of Sylla and Marius. But they had become addicted to luxury, by the riches they had acquired from their conquests in all parts of the world.

8. What did Sylla do? Give an account of his proceedings. 9. What act of Sylla's surprised everybody?

CHAPTER LXXVI.—1. What of the Roman people?

2. Owing to their continual wars, they had also accustomed themselves to consider successful warriors as the greatest men on earth. Soldiers must obey their leaders, without asking why or wherefore; and all the Roman people felt like soldiers. Thus the very same causes which rendered the Romans so invincible to their enemies, made them liable to be enslaved by any great general who should be ambitious of enslaving them. And such a general soon appeared.

3. After the death of Sylla and Marius, the two most valiant and distinguished warriors were Pompey and Cæsar. Pompey was the eldest. He had grown famous by vanquishing Mithridates, and by many other victories. He had conquered fifteen kingdoms, and taken eight hundred cities.

4. The name of this illustrious leader's rival was Julius Cæsar. He was the most beautiful person in Rome. He had fought in Gaul, Germany, and Britain, and had overcome three millions of men, and killed one million. His soldiers idolized him.

5. At last, like Sylla and Marius, these two generals became so great and powerful, that the world was no longer wide enough for them both. They each collected great armies, in which all the Roman soldiers were enlisted, on one side or the other.

6. They encountered each other at Pharsalia, in Macedon. The best part of Pompey's army consisted of a multitude of the young Roman nobility. These youths had very handsome faces; and it was chiefly owing to this circumstance that Pompey lost the victory.

7. Cæsar ordered his rough and weather-beaten soldiers to aim their blows right at the faces of their enemies. The latter were so afraid that their beauty would be spoiled, that they immediately turned and fled. A complete victory was gained by Cæsar.

8. Pompey made his escape into Egypt, but was there murdered. His head was cut off and brought to Cæsar, who turned aside his eyes from the bloody spectacle, and wept to think that so mighty a warrior had met with so sad a fate.

Cæsar usurps the Supreme Power.

1. WHEN the Roman senate heard of Cæsar's victory, they proclaimed a solemn thanksgiving to the gods. Supreme power was granted him for life, with the title of dictator. His person was declared sacred and inviolable.

2. His statue was placed among those of gods and heroes, in the capitol. It stood next to that of Jupiter, and bore this impious inscription: "THE STATUE OF CÆSAR, THE DEMI-GOD." This proves that the Romans were already slaves, when they thus deified a mortal man.

3. Cæsar had now but one other wish to gratify. He desired to bear the name of king. He endeavored to gain the good will of the soldiers and people, in order that they might gratify his ambition. For this purpose he spent immense sums in entertainments and magnificent spectacles.

4. On one occasion, he made a feast for the whole Roman people. Twenty-two thousand tables were set out in the streets of Rome. All sorts of delicious food and drink were heaped upon them. The meanest beggar was at liberty to sit down and eat his fill.

5. Most of the Romans had now lost the noble spirit which had animated their forefathers. They were willing to be governed by any man who would feed them with delicacies, and amuse them with splendid shows, as Cæsar did. It must be owned, also, that Cæsar had many noble and amiable qualities.

6. The people, therefore, had a fondness for their tyrant. They loved to behold him, at the public spectacles and entertainments, sitting in a gilded chair of state, with a golden crown upon his head. Had he asked it, they were even ready to fall down and worship him.

7. But there were a few Romans of the old stamp, who loved liberty for its own sake. There were others, also, who hated Cæsar because he had wronged them, or because he was more powerful than they. These two sorts of persons formed a conspiracy to kill him.

8. The two chief conspirators were Brutus and Cassius. Brutus was a dear lover of liberty, and a true friend of Rome. He also loved Cæsar, and was beloved by him. But he resolved to assist in slaying him in order that his country might be free.

5.—What of the Romans? 6. What did they love to see? 7. Who formed a conspiracy to kill Cæsar? 8. Who were the chief conspirators? What of Brutus?

9. Cassius formed the same resolution; but it was chiefly because he hated Cæsar. Sixty other senators were engaged in the plot. Most conspirators endeavor to do their work in secrecy and at midnight. But the blood of Cæsar was to be shed in broad daylight, and in the great hall of the senate-house.

of the portal, a gray-bearded philosopher pressed through the crowd and put a paper into his hand. It contained an account of the whole plot. If Cæsar had read it, it would have cost all the conspirators their lives, and have saved his own. But he gave it to one of his secretaries, and walked onward.

2. As Cæsar passed through the streets of Rome, he looked round at the crowd of obsequious senators, and listened to the shouts of the multitude. He felt that he was the most exalted man in all the world. But his heart was not at ease; for he also felt that he had enslaved his country.

3. The proud procession ascended the steps of the senate-house and passed into the hall. Along the sides of this hall were ranged the statues of many famous Romans, and among them stood the marble image of Pompey, whose bloody head had been brought to Cæsar. Just as Cæsar was passing in front of Pompey's statue, Metellus Cimber, one of the conspirators, knelt down and took hold of his robe. This was the signal for the attack.

4. Casca, who was behind Cæsar, drew a dagger and stabbed him in the shoulder. "Wretch! what doest thou?" cried Cæsar, snatching the weapon. The other conspirators now rushed upon him. But he defended himself with the valor that he had shown in a hundred battles.

5. At length Brutus pressed forward and struck him with his dagger. When Cæsar saw that the hand of his dear friend was raised against his life, he made no more resistance. "And thou too, Brutus!" he said, with one reproachful look.

6. Then covering his head with his mantle, that his enemies might not behold the death pang in his face, he fell before the pedestal of Pompey's statue. The marble countenance of the statue seemed to look down upon him, and Pompey was avenged.

7. The conspirators dipped their weapons in the blood that flowed upon the pavement. Brutus raised his dagger aloft, and called to Cicero, the illustrious orator and patriot. "Rejoice, father of our country!" he exclaimed, pointing to the prostrate form of Cæsar, "for Rome is free!"

Consequences of Cæsar's Death.

1. THE death of Cæsar took place forty-three years before the Christian era. The affairs of Rome were thrown into great confusion by it. Cæsar's friends found no great difficulty in persuading the people that he had been unjustly murdered.

2. Brutus, Cassius, and the other conspirators, were compelled to flee from the city. Three men then usurped the government, and were called triumvirs, or a triumvirate. Their names were Mark Antony, Lepidus, and Octavius. The latter was Cæsar's nephew, and had been his adopted son.

3. The triumvirate resolved to secure themselves in power by murdering all who were opposed to them. They made a list of three hundred senators, and more than two thousand knights, and offered rewards for killing them. They exulted when the heads of their victims were laid at their feet.

4. One of these wicked triumvirs presented the head of his own brother to his colleagues. Another brought his uncle's head. No friend, nor relative, nor patriot was spared, if he was suspected of being opposed to the triumvirate.

5. In the mean time, Brutus and Cassius were in Greece. They had collected an army of a hundred thousand men. Mark Antony and Octavius marched against them; and a battle was fought at Philippi. Brutus and Cassius being defeated, they both committed suicide.

6. The triumvirate had now got all the power into their own hands. But they soon quarrelled among themselves. Lepidus was turned out of office, and banished. Mark Antony and Octavius then made war upon one another, like Marius and Sylla, and like Pompey and Cæsar.

7. The good fortune of Octavius gave him the victory, and Antony killed himself with his own sword, as I have related in the history of Egypt. Octavius had no longer any rivals, and was now sole master of Rome and its dominions. He was afraid to assume the title of king, but called himself emperor, and Augustus Cæsar.

8. In addition to several other titles, the senate gave him that of Pater Patriæ, or Father of his Country. This was merely a piece of flattery. Yet there were now so few good men in Rome, that perhaps Octavius made a better use of his power than any other would have done.

9. His reign from this time was peaceful and quiet, and offers few events that need be recorded in this brief history. Nearly the whole world was under his sway, and therefore he had no occasion to increase his dominions by going to war. The greatest glory of his times consists in the works of poets and other men of genius.

10. Octavius, or, as he is always called, Augustus Cæsar, reigned forty-one years, and died at the age of seventy-six, in the year 14 after the birth of Christ. You will observe that it was during his reign that Christ appeared in Palestine.

ROMAN EMPIRE

About the great power and extent of the Roman Empire in the time of Augustus.

1. As Rome was now at its greatest height of wealth and splendor, I shall try to give you some idea of the extent and power of this vast empire, and then, having told you a little more of its history, I shall say something about the manners and customs of the ancient Roman people.

2. In the time of Augustus, the Roman empire embraced all the nations of Europe, except a few northern tribes, who maintained their independence. It included England, France, Spain, Germany, all the states of Italy, Greece, the country now occupied by Turkey in Europe, besides many other nations.

3. In Asia, it embraced all the kingdoms from Asia Minor on the west, to India on the east. Of course, it included Asia Minor, Syria, Palestine, Arabia, Persia, Parthia, and many other countries.

4. It included the whole northern portion of Africa, from Mauritania, now Morocco, on the west, to Ethiopia on the east. This was the whole of Africa then known; the interior being only inhabited by scattered bands of negroes.

5. It seems wonderful that one country could govern so many nations. This was done, however, by placing Roman governors over these various kingdoms; the governors being sustained by a multitude of Roman soldiers.

6. During this period, the people of Rome had great skill in architecture, sculpture, painting, and many other arts. These arts were extended to all parts of the empire.

7. Thus a multitude of cities in various parts of Europe, Africa, and Asia, were filled with costly temples and palaces of marble, with beautiful statues and valuable paintings. The splendor and magnificence of many of these cities, at this period, was indeed wonderful.

8. Nor was this all: the Romans built many public works of great utility; they constructed roads paved with stone; they built durable bridges, and made aqueducts for supplying the cities with water. So numerous and so permanent were these vast works, that

What parts of Africa were then known? 5. How did Rome govern all these nations? 6. What of the people of Rome? 7. With what were many cities filled? 8. What of public works? Roads? Bridges? Aqueducts?

the remains of them are still to be found in most of the countries over which the Roman dominion was then established, though they were executed nearly two thousand years ago.

9. But of all the cities in the world, Rome was itself the most wonderful. In the time of Augustus, it was fifty miles in circuit, and contained four millions of inhabitants.

10. Like all ancient cities, it was surrounded by high, strong walls of stone; for in these warlike times, as I have before said, walls were a necessary protection against the attacks of an enemy. The walls of Rome were entered by thirty-seven gates.

11. The interior of this wonderful city surpassed all description. The various generals who had conquered other countries, had robbed them of their choicest treasures, and these had been brought to Rome to decorate and enrich the capital.

12. There were beautiful statues from Greece, obelisks and columns from Egypt, and a great variety of curious and costly manufactures from Asia. Gold, silver, and precious stones had been gathered from every part of the earth.

13. Beside all this, the city was embellished with temples, many of them of marble, and beautifully sculptured; there were also theatres, amphitheatres, porticoes, public baths, triumphal arches, and aqueducts.

14. In short, the city of Rome was enriched with the spoils of the whole world, and had that air of pomp and magnificence which suited the capital of the greatest empire that the world ever saw.

13. What of temples? Other buildings? 14. What of the city generally?

The Means by which Rome acquired its Power.

1. I TRUST you have now some faint idea of the extent, wealth, and power of the Roman empire. We cannot look back upon it without feelings of admiration; yet when we look at the means which had been employed to establish this dominion ; when we look at the condition of mankind during that age, and consider that this vast dominion soon crumbled into atoms ; we cannot but feel the strongest emotions of pain.

2. In the first place, the means used to aggrandize Rome were those of conquest. The Roman generals went abroad to subdue other countries, for no other purpose than to acquire fame and spoils for themselves, and power for Rome.

3. They slaughtered the inhabitants without mercy, they robbed them without scruple, and they subjected them to the Roman yoke without the slightest regard to the rights of mankind.

4. Such were the means by which the fabric of Roman power was erected. And what must have been the condition of mankind during the seven hundred years that Rome was carrying on its wars for no other purpose than to enslave the world !

5. It is true that a few men—generals, senators, consuls, and governors—may have lived in splendor, and enjoyed wealth and fame. Some of the Roman soldiers, too, may have led lives of adventure, gratifying to bold and restless spirits.

2, 3. By what means did Rome rise to such a high pitch of renown ? What of the Roman generals ? 4. How many years was Rome at war with other nations ? 5. What classes may have been benefited by these wars ?

6. But how much suffering, sorrow, and despair must there have been among the millions of wounded men; among the millions who were bereaved of their friends; among the millions who were stript of their fortunes; among the millions who were reduced to slavery!

7. The simple truth is, that the policy of Rome was wholly selfish. The Roman people, like the Greeks, Persians, Egyptians, and other ancient nations, had some notions of virtue, and occasionally displayed noble and generous qualities.

8. Yet, like all these nations, they were destitute of true morality; that morality which Christ has taught in a single sentence: Do to another as you would have another do to you. Like most other ancient nations, Rome was destitute of that true religion, which teaches mankind that all power founded in injustice must perish.

9. Splendid as the Roman empire was, it was destitute of real glory. Its splendor was acquired by robbery, and its fame, though it might dazzle a heathen, will be regarded as a false renown by the Christian.

10. Such as it was, the power of Rome was destined to speedy decay. For a time after Augustus, the empire maintained its sway, and the magnificence of Rome continued. The luxury of the wealthy citizens even increased, and refinement in many respects was carried to a higher pitch than ever.

11. But the whole fabric was based upon a false foundation; and in a few centuries imperial Rome was divided among a host of ruthless invaders.

Rome under the Emperors.

1. THE Roman empire had now reached the height of its power, pomp, and splendor; but its decline had already commenced, because the people and their rulers were alike corrupt. It was like a great tree with wide-spreading branches, but rotten at its trunk.

2. In the course of about three hundred and fifty years after the death of Augustus Cæsar, there had been thirty-six emperors of Rome; but I can mention only a few of them. They lived in great luxury and splendor, but they were generally such wicked persons that it would have been better for the world if they had never lived.

3. The next emperor to Augustus Cæsar was Tiberius. He was a frightful looking object, being bald, and covered with sores, and his disposition was far more hideous than his aspect. This gloomy tyrant suspected everybody of plotting against his life.

4. He put so many people to death, that their dead bodies were piled in heaps in the public places. He once sentenced a poor woman to die, merely for lamenting the death of her son. At last, he fell into a swoon, and his guards smothered him with his bed-clothes.

5. His successor was Caligula, who wished that the whole Roman people had but one head, that he might chop it off at a single blow. He, also, was murdered by his guards, and was succeeded by Claudius, an idiot. Claudius was poisoned by his own wife.

6. Nero was the next emperor. His whole reign was a scene of bloodshed. He murdered his mother and his wife. He set Rome on fire, merely for the pleasure of seeing it blaze. While the city was in flames, he sat on the top of a lofty tower, playing on a harp. Finally, he was dethroned, and condemned to be beaten to death with rods. To escape this torture, he killed himself.

7. The two next emperors were Galba and Otho. The first was killed by his soldiers, and the second committed suicide. The next was Vitellius. This monster delighted in visiting fields of battle, and snuffing up the smell of the dead bodies.

8. When the Romans grew weary of Vitellius, they put a rope around his neck and hauled him into the most public part of the city. There they bespattered him with mud, and then killed him in the most cruel manner. His head was put on a lance, and his body dragged into the Tiber.

9. But I am weary, my dear young readers! My heart grows sick and sad, while I speak to you of these evil and miserable men. Forget what I have told you. Forget that such monsters have ever existed in the world.

10. Or, if you must remember them, remember, too, that their frightful crimes resulted from the possession of more power than mortal man ought ever to possess. And, above all, remember that if these tyrants were the scourges of their people, it was because the people had not virtue enough to be free.

Fall of the Western Empire of the Romans.

1. YET there were some good men among the Roman emperors. Such were Vespasian, Titus, Antoninus, Marcus Aurelius, Alexander Severus, Aurelian, and Diocletian. But these good men would doubtless have been better, if their evil fortune had not made them emperors.

2. The first emperor who became a convert to Christianity, was Constantine the Great. He began to reign in the year 306 after the Christian era. By him the seat of government was transferred from Rome to Constantinople, formerly called Byzantium.

3. The religion of Christ was planted in various parts of the Roman empire by the apostles, but the first Christians were much persecuted. Some were whipped, many were imprisoned, and thousands were murdered.

4. Still their numbers increased. At length the emperor Constantine ordered that the persecutions should cease, and he himself became a convert to Christianity. This took place in 311.

5. It is said that Constantine was one day riding at the head of his army, when he saw a splendid cross in the heavens, upon which was written, "Conquer by this sign." It is supposed that this vision persuaded the emperor of the truth of the Christian religion, and induced him to adopt it as the religion of the state.

6. From this period Christianity flourished for a cor-siderable time. The mythology of Greece and Rome, which had been extended throughout the Roman empire, gave way before it. Many of the temples were converted into churches, and the people who had been accustomed to bow down before the statues of Jupiter and other imaginary gods, knelt in humiliation at the foot of the cross.

7. In the year 364, the Roman dominions were divided into the Eastern and Western empires. The capital of the Eastern empire was Constantinople. The fate of this city will be briefly related in the history of the Turks.

8. The capital of the Western empire was Rome. But this imperial city was no longer powerful enough to defend itself against the nations which it had formerly conquered. It was ravaged by hordes of barbarians from the north of Europe, consisting of Huns, Goths, Vandals, &c.

9. Of these rude tribes I shall speak more particularly hereafter. It is sufficient for the present to say that they were bold warriors, and chose rather to obtain wealth by plundering the rich inhabitants of Italy, than by the cultivation of their own more sterile soil.

10. One of the first and fiercest of these northern invaders, was Alaric, king of the Goths, who led a large army against Rome, and threatened the destruction of the city. The inhabitants were very different, from the ancient Romans, and, being overawed by the daring freebooter, promised him large sums of money. But this promise not being fulfilled, Alaric took the city and gave it up to plunder.

11. For six days imperial Rome was a scene of pillage and murder. Thousands of citizens were slain, and a large portion of the place was reduced to ashes. This occurred in the year 410.

12. After a while, Alaric retired; but about the year 455, Attila, leader of the Huns, threatened to follow the example which Alaric had set. But in the midst of his projects he died; and Rome, for a time, was saved.

13. In the year 476, the whole Western empire, with Rome itself, was entirely subjugated by Odoacer, the leader of another northern tribe, called the Heruli, and it remained under this dominion for many years.

14. In the year 537, these barbarians were driven from Rome. This triumph was effected by Belisarius, an illustrious commander in the service of the emperor of the East. The Eastern and Western empires were then reunited, but only for a short period. Italy, as well as Rome, from this time frequently changed hands, being sometimes under the sway of northern kings, and sometimes under the Greek emperors.

Progress of the Decline of Rome.

1. In the tenth century, the emperor of Germany claimed Italy as a part of his dominions. Several cities resisted his authority. When the emperor, whose name was Otho, heard of it, he invaded Italy, and went to Rome.

2. He took possession of the palace, and prepared a magnificent feast. All the great men of Rome were invited. The emperor sat at the head of the table, on a splendid throne. The guests seated themselves, expecting to be feasted with luxuries.

3. But before they had eaten a mouthful, Otho made a sign. Immediately the hall was filled with armed men. The emperor ordered the guests neither to move nor speak, on pain of death, whatever might take place. They trembled, and wished themselves away from the banquet.

4. One of the emperor's officers stood up and read aloud the names of all who had opposed his authority. These unfortunate men had been invited to the feast, and were now sitting at the table. The emperor commanded them to be dragged into the middle of the hall and put to death. The executioner was in readiness with a broad and heavy sword. One after another the heads of the condemned persons rolled upon the floor of the hall. No mercy was shown to any of them.

5. When this dreadful scene was over, the emperor turned his attention to the banquet. His stern and wrathful aspect became mild and pleasing. He endeavored to make the other guests enjoy themselves; but probably their appetites were not increased by the sight of dead bodies on the bloody floor. This is a horrible story, and I only tell it to show you the barbarous and cruel character of the men of those times.

6. In the course of years, Italy was divided into several separate states, or sovereignties. The principal of these were Naples, Tuscany, Parma, Lombardy, Genoa, and Venice. Rome, with other territories, was given to the pope. Of these I shall give you a brief account; but before I proceed farther with the history of Rome, I will tell you something of the manners and customs of the ancient Romans.

7. Let me remark, however, that Rome was now totally changed from what it was in the days of Augustus. Not only was the empire broken in pieces, but the proud city of Rome itself had lost its former glory.

8. The number of its inhabitants had greatly diminished; many of its most splendid edifices were falling into ruins, and the people, having been long mixed with barbarians, had lost their former polish, and become partially barbarous themselves.

9. Even the language of Rome and of all Italy gradually became changed. The people had formerly spoken the Latin language; but this became mingled with the languages of the northern invaders, and thus

Manners and Customs of the Ancient Romans.

1. I AM now going to give you an account of the manners and customs of the great people whose history you have just read. I shall tell you about their domestic habits, and about their public observances; about their state of society, agriculture, shows, dresses, religion, marriage ceremonies, funeral rites, military institutions, and public edifices.

2. The people of Rome, as you know, were at first divided into two classes, the patricians and plebeians. It was to the struggles for power between these ranks that most of the difficulties in the state were owing. To these ranks a third was afterward added, called equites, or knights; the custom of making slaves of the subjects of conquered nations, introduced a fourth division.

3. You have seen that the government of Rome was subject to very numerous changes. At one time it was under a king, at others under consuls, dictators, emperors, etc. The other officers of the state were numerous, and invested with very different degrees of power.

CHAPTER LXXXV.—2. Into what four ranks or classes were the Roman citizens divided?

4. The ministers of religion among the Romans did not form a distinct order of citizens, but were chosen from the most virtuous and honorable men of the state. These attended to the sacrifices of beasts to the gods, and other religious rites. The superstitions of the times gave rise to the establishment of a college of augurs, whose business it was to explain dreams, oracles, and prodigies, and to foretell future events.

5. They drew their auguries or presages concerning futurity from the appearance of the heavens, and an inspection of the entrails of birds and beasts. Of course they could no more divine the future, than the old women you may sometimes meet with in our villages, who pretend to "tell your fortune," by examining the grounds of coffee cups.

6. The augurs at Rome interpreted the will of the gods in regard to making war and peace, and none dared to dispute their authority. No business of importance could be proceeded in, without first consulting them; and their advice, whatever it might be, was, by a decree of the senate, to be strictly observed.

7. The office of an augur was important and honorable, and was sought after by many of the principal persons in the Roman senate. Cato, the censor, was a member of their college, and Cicero also; though they both appear to have been fully sensible of the extravagance and folly of the art they practised. A remark is attributed to Cato, that he wondered how one augur could look in the face of another without laughing.

About Religion.—Deities.—Temples.—Marriages.

1. THE religion of the Romans was borrowed from the Greeks, and included the worship of Jupiter, and a multitude of other deities. Every virtue and vice of the human heart, every faculty of the mind and body, every property of the real and imaginary world, was presided over by its peculiar god. Every grove, and mountain, and stream had its nymph or naiad, and every hero and sage of the country was elevated to the rank of a divinity.

7. The office of an augur? Cato and Cicero? Remark of Cato?

2. Every religious sect was tolerated at Rome except the Jews and the Christians. These were persecuted with unrelenting cruelty, until the mild precepts of the true religion triumphed over superstition and ignorance. Christianity at length prevailed over conflicting opinions, and was adopted as the religion of the state, A. D. 311.

3. The number of deities whom the Romans worshipped, occasioned the erection of a great multitude of temples. Many of these were very splendid edifices, adorned with all the arts of sculpture, and filled with offerings and sacrifices. The priests attended at the temples, and sacrificed sheep, bulls, oxen, and other animals.

4. Marriage was very much favored by the laws of Rome, and severe penalties were inflicted on those who remained single. At one period, the censors obliged all the young bachelors to make oath that they would marry within a certain time. Augustus increased the penalties on bachelors, and bestowed rewards on those who were parents of a numerous offspring.

5. The parties were betrothed some time before the actual celebration of the marriage. This latter was attended with many ceremonies, at which the priests and augurs assisted. The contract of marriage was drawn up in the presence of witnesses, and confirmed by the breaking of a straw between the engaged pair.

6. The bridegroom then presented his bride with the wedding ring, and the father of the bride gave a great entertainment. The wedding ring was worn on the third finger of the left hand, from a notion that a nerve of that finger communicated directly with the heart.

7. In dressing the bride, they never failed to divide her locks with the point of a spear, to signify that she was about to become the wife of a warrior. They then crowned her with a chaplet of flowers, and put on her a veil proper for the occasion.

8. Her toilet being completed, she was led in the evening toward the bridegroom's house, by three boys, whose parents were still alive. Five torches were carried before her, and also a distaff and spindle. Having come to the door, she herself bound the posts with wreaths of wool washed over with melted tallow, to keep out witchcraft.

9. In going into the house, she was by no means to touch the threshold, but was to be lifted over by main strength. When she had entered, the bridegroom presented her with the keys, and with two vessels, containing fire and water.

10. The bridegroom then gave a grand supper to all the company. The festival was accompanied with music and dancing, and the guests sang verses in praise of the new-married couple.

CHAPTER LXXXVII.—EUROPE CONTINUED.

About Funeral Rites and Ceremonies.

1. THE funeral rites of the Romans present a very interesting subject. Burning the dead, though practised by the Greeks from very early times, was not adopted in Rome till the later ages of the republic. It afterward became universal, and was continued without interruption till the introduction of Christianity. It then gradually fell into disuse.

2. Among the Romans, the bed of the sick was never abandoned to hired nurses and servants. It was attended by the relatives and intimates, who waited till the last hour, and bade a last farewell to their dying friend.

3. The body of the dead was bathed in perfumes, dressed in rich garments, and laid out on a couch strewn with flowers. The outer door of the house was shaded with branches of cypress. According to the heathen mythology, Charon would not convey the departed spirit across the Styx, without payment of a fixed toll. A small coin was therefore placed in the mouth of the deceased to meet this demand.

MERCURY CONDUCTING THE SPIRITS OF THE DEAD TO CHARON.

4. The funeral took place by torchlight. The body was borne by near friends and relatives, on an open bier covered with the richest cloth. Lictors dressed in

3. The body of the dead? What was the belief in regard to Charon? 4. The funeral?

black regulated the procession. If the deceased had been a soldier, the badges of his rank were displayed, and the corps to which he belonged marched with their arms reversed.

5. Before the corpse were carried images of the deceased and his ancestors. Then followed musicians and mourning women, who were hired to sing his praises, and dancers and buffoons, one of whom attempted to represent the character of the dead man, and imitate his manner when alive.

6. The family of the deceased followed the bier in deep mourning, the sons with their heads covered, the daughters unveiled and with their hair dishevelled. Magistrates and patricians attended without their badges or ornaments, and the procession was closed by the freed men of the deceased, with the cap of liberty on their heads.

7. The funeral ceremonies of a man of rank were distinguished by an oration in his honor, pronounced over the body by a friend. The scene of this display was the capitol, and in the later ages of the republic it became very common. While the practice of burial prevailed, the body was either interred without a coffin, or placed in a kind of deep chest called a sarcophagus.

8. On the termination of the rites, the sepulchre was strewed with flowers, and the mourners took a farewell of the remains of their friend. The attendants were then sprinkled with water by the priests, and all were dismissed.

9. When the custom of burning the body was introduced, a funeral pile was raised in the form of an altar, and the bier was placed upon it. The procession then moved slowly around, to the sound of solemn music, when the nearest relative advanced from the train with a lighted torch, and set fire to the pile.

10. Perfumes and spices were then thrown into the blaze, and the embers were quenched with wine. The ashes were collected and placed in a costly urn, which was deposited in the family sepulchre. In the funeral solemnities of a soldier, his arms, and the spoils he had won from the enemy, were sometimes added to the funeral pile.

11. It was a horrid belief of the heathen nations that the spirits of the dead were pleased with blood. It was their custom to sacrifice on the tomb of the deceased, those animals to which he was most attached during his life. In the more remote and barbarous ages, men were often the victims; so also were domestic slaves and captives taken in war; and sometimes friends gave themselves to be sacrificed from feelings of affection.

12. No burial was allowed within the walls of the city, except to the vestal virgins, and some families of high distinction. The tombs of military men were usually raised in the field of Mars, and those of private citizens in the gardens of their villas, or by the side of the public roads.

13. Many of these monuments are still standing. The sepulchres of the great and wealthy are engraven with long and pompous lists of their titles, honors, and achievements. The tombs of the humble bear but a simple lesson to the reader, and some beautiful and touching expressions of sorrow or hope for the departed.

14. How much more affecting and impressive are the simple rites of Christian burial, than the pomp and splendor of the Roman; there is nothing that speaks more strongly to the heart than a funeral ceremony in a New England village.

15. Every thing is so still, and simple, and unaffected, that the mind rests only on the solemnity of death, without being distracted by display and splendor. Prayers are said at the house of the deceased, the friends and relatives follow the body in silent procession, and enter with it into the unadorned grave-yard, where the generations of the family are sleeping.

16. The body is consigned to the earth whence it came, dust to dust. Prayers are again said, and the mourners are dismissed to their sad homes, cheered, however, with the blessed consolations which their religion promises.

Roman Farms.—Mode of Ploughing.—Farm-houses.—Grain.—Cattle.—Superstitions of the Farmers.—Vines.—Country Houses.—Aqueducts.

1. I AM now going to tell you about the farms and gardens of the Romans. In the early and more virtuous ages of the state, the cultivation of the fields, and a few rude trades connected with it, were the only occupations.

2. The man most valued and honored was the best husbandman; and many of the most ancient families received their names from their success in the cultivation of plants or the rearing of cattle.

3. It is probable that at this period the ground was broken up only by the spade. Afterward, when the farms were enlarged, more expeditious means were discovered. Some of the Roman modes of ploughing are still in use. They always ploughed with oxen, a single pair, or sometimes three abreast, yoked by the neck and horns.

4. The farm-houses were at first little huts, but they were soon enlarged to suit the increasing possessions of the owners. We read, at a later period, of large store-houses and granaries, cellars for wine and oil, barns, together with separate buildings for the care and rearing of every species of domestic animal.

5. The kinds of grain in common cultivation were the same as those now known in Europe, with the exception of maize, or Indian corn, which was first found in this country. The ancient mode of converting grain into meal was by pounding it with an instrument something like the pestle and mortar. Mills moved by cattle, and by water, are later inventions.

6. Much care was paid by the Romans to the rear-

3. What is said of their mode of ploughing? 4. Their farm-houses? Other buildings? 5. What kinds of grain were cultivated?

ing of cattle. Sheep were secured under cover during the winter, notwithstanding the mildness of the Italian climate. Shearing-time was a season of general festivity.

7. Goats were made as profitable to the farmer as sheep. Their hair was clipped every year, and woven into a kind of coarse stuff, and their milk was the chief supply of the dairy.

8. The Roman farmers were very superstitious. They refrained from all labor on the fifth day of the new moon; on the seventh and tenth they planted vines, and harnessed young oxen to the yoke; on the ninth they commenced a journey.

9. The skeleton of an ass's head was hung up at the boundary of the farm, to enrich the soil, and drive away the effects of blight. The same figure, carved in brass, and crowned with vines, was affixed as an ornament to their couches.

10. It is supposed that the Romans obtained a knowledge of the cultivation of the grape, and of the art of making wine, from Greece. They took great care of their vineyards, and labored in cultivating the plants, with much art and industry.

6, 7. What is said of cattle? 8, 9 What of the superstitions of the farmers?
10. What is said of the grape?

11. The mode of gathering and pressing the grape was the same that is now practised. The vintage was a time of festival, and the rustics made merry with the performance of a rude kind of comedy, and pouring out libations of new wine to Jupiter and Venus.

12. The wine appears to have differed from that of modern times; it was kept in jars formed like urns, some of which are said to have been so large as to have made, when filled, a load for a yoke of oxen. They were commonly ranged in cellars, but were sometimes buried in the earth, or even bedded in solid masonry.

13. Roman villas, or country seats, were originally nothing more than very humble farm-houses; but with the progress of wealth and luxury, they were made by degrees more extensive and costly.

14. Some of them were surrounded with large parks, in which deer and various foreign wild animals were kept. Large fish-ponds were also not unfrequently attached to them, and were stocked at great expense. Generally, however, the villas were merely surrounded by gardens, and in size and appearance resembled those of modern Italy.

15. It was not till the year 441 after its foundation that Rome obtained its supplies of water by means of aqueducts. They afterward became so numerous that it has been calculated they furnished the city about five hundred thousand hogsheads every day. They were built of brick, and were sometimes thirty, forty, or even sixty miles in length.

16. The water was conveyed to reservoirs, and thence distributed through metal pipes over the town in great abundance. Only three aqueducts now remain for modern Rome; yet so pure are the sources from which they draw their supplies, that few cities can boast of such clear and healthful water.

17. Great attention was paid to ornament in the erection of the aqueducts. One built by Agrippa, when Edile under Augustus, contained one hundred and thirty reservoirs, and five hundred fountains, adorned with statues and columns. Remains of many of these great works at this day bear witness to their beauty and convenience.

Military Affairs of the Romans.—Division of the Army.—The Imperial Eagle.—Music.—Arms.—Dress.—Military Rewards.—Crowns.—The Triumph.

1. You know that the Romans were almost continually engaged in wars. Their military affairs, therefore, occupied the attention of the most distinguished citizens. According to the Roman laws, every free-born citizen was a soldier, and bound to serve in the army at any period from the age of seventeen to that of forty-six.

2. The Roman forces were divided into legions, each of which consisted of three thousand foot soldiers and three hundred horsemen. The standard of the legion was the imperial eagle.

3. This was made of gilt metal, was borne on a spear by an officer of rank, and was regarded by the soldiers with a reverence which approached to devotion. The cavalry carried pennons, on which the initials of the emperor or of the legion were embroidered in letters of gold.

4. The only instrument of martial music among the Romans, was the brazen trumpet. Some of the soldiers were armed with light javelins, and others with a heavier weapon of a similar description. All, however, carried shields and short swords, which they wore on the right side.

ROMAN CAVALRY.

5. They were dressed in a metal cuirass, with an under covering of cloth, which was generally red, and hung loose to the knee. On the head they wore brazen helmets, often ornamented with flowing tufts of horse-hair. The uniform of the generals was an open scarlet mantle.

6. The cavalry wore a coat of mail, of brazen or steel scales, or of chain-work, sometimes plated with gold. Under this they wore a close garment which reached to their buskins. They rode without stirrups, and their saddles were merely cloths folded to suit the convenience of the rider. The discipline of the army was maintained with great strictness and severity.

7. Rewards of various kinds were held out to those who distinguished themselves by an extraordinary exploit. A particular kind of crown was presented to him who, in the assault, first scaled the ramparts of a town.

8. A soldier who saved his comrade's life in battle was entitled to the civic crown, which was thought a distinction of the highest honor. The general who conquered in a battle was decorated with the laurel leaf.

9. But the highest ambition of every Roman commander was to obtain a triumph. This was the gift of the senate, and was only granted on occasions of splendid victory. When decreed, the general returned to Rome, and was appointed to the supreme command of the city on the day of his entry.

10. A sculptured arch was erected, under which the procession was to pass, and scaffoldings were raised for spectators in all the public squares and streets. The procession moved at daylight from beyond the walls of the city.

11. A band of cavalry, with military music, took the lead. They were followed by a train of priests, in their sacred robes, with attendants leading to sacrifice a hecatomb or hundred of the whitest oxen. Next came chariots laden with spoils, the arms and standards of the conquered, followed by long trains of the captives, conducted by lictors.

12. Loud notes on the trumpet then announced the approach of the victor, dressed in a robe of purple, crowned with laurels, and bearing a sceptre of ivory. He rode in a splendid car, drawn by four horses, preceded by the Roman eagle, guarded by a troop of cavalry.

13. The most distinguished officers of the army, in their richest dress and trappings, surrounded him; a band of children clothed in white followed, flinging clouds of perfume and flowers on the air, and singing hymns of praise to the conqueror.

14. Last of all, came the victorious army, their weapons wreathed with laurel, and their burnished armor gleaming in the sunshine. Countless multitudes of the citizens lined the streets, and every window and every scaffolding shone with beauty. The procession was greeted on all sides by loud acclamations, joy and revelry reigned in the city, and a scene was displayed of a magnificence and gorgeousness not to be paralleled in modern times.

About Naval Affairs.—The War Galley.—Commerce.—Shows of Wild Beasts.—Exhibitions of Gladiators.

1. THE first vessel of the Roman navy is said to have been built after the model of a Carthaginian galley, taken in war. Their ships were roughly and slightly constructed, and, though very large, unfit to contend with boisterous and tempestuous weather.

2. They were clumsy and ill-fashioned, with a high stern and sides, and rowed with two or three tiers of oars on different decks. The prows of the ship were armed with iron, usually carved into the shape of some animal's head; the upper deck was surmounted with a movable turret, from which the soldiers could throw their weapons with advantage. The smaller vessels had but one tier of oars, and were without turrets.

3. The merchant ships of the Romans were of a size corresponding with the purposes for which they were intended. Before the discovery of the magnet, by which the mariner can now direct his course in safety over the pathless waves, navigation was necessarily confined to the coast. These coasting vessels were considered large if they reached the burden of fifty tons.

4. Rome was long supplied with the products of the East by the merchants of the maritime states of the Mediterranean. It was not till the conquest of Egypt by Augustus, that the trade became exclusively her own. Of this commerce Alexandria was the centre.

5. The principal exports into Italy from India consisted of drugs and spices; of cotton cloths and muslins, from the coasts of Coromandel and Malabar; of silk from China, and of large quantities of diamonds and pearls from Bengal, and the pearl-fisheries near Cape Comorin. From Persia and Arabia they procured the richest carpets, silks, and embroidered stuffs, together with rice and sugar.

6. The first amphitheatre erected in Rome, for the shows of wild beasts and gladiators, was a mere temporary building of wood, probably erected by Julius Cæsar. The Flavian amphitheatre, better known by the name of Coliseum, was commenced in the reign of Vespasian, and is supposed to have been large enough to contain upward of eighty thousand persons.

7. The wild beasts were secured in dens round the arena, which were strongly fenced, and surrounded by a canal, to guard the spectators against their attacks. A vast number of wild beasts were made to destroy each other in these very cruel exhibitions.

8. Eleven thousand are said to have been slain during four months of triumph in honor of a conquest over the Dacians; and five hundred lions were killed in a few days on another similar occasion.

9. The first public combats of gladiators took place at Rome in the close of the fifth century from the foundation of the city. They were exhibited at a funeral. From that period, they became common on such occasions, and afterward, on days of public fes-

10. Five hundred pairs of these wretched beings have frequently been led to the public games to sacrifice each other for the amusement of barbarous spectators. They were at first taken from captives in war, or malefactors; afterward from slaves trained to the profession.

11. They fought with various weapons, some in complete armor, others with only a trident and a net, in which they endeavored to entangle their adversary and thus slay him.

12. It is needless to give a minute account of these inhuman customs. They were conducted in the most bloody and savage spirit, and are sufficient proofs of the degraded and brutalized condition of the period in which they were tolerated.

Sports.—Chariot racing—The Circus.—Carriages.—Private Entertainments.—Supper Rooms.—Convivial Parties.—Luxuries.—Clocks.—Fine Arts.—Books.—Costume.

1. I WILL now change the picture, and give you an account of some of the less barbarous amusements of the Romans. The young men chiefly engaged in sports in the open air, that would make them more active and vigorous. Boxing, wrestling, and throwing the quoit, formed a prominent part of these amusements; but chariot driving took the lead of all others.

2. For the better enjoyment of horse and chariot races, there was an enclosed course immediately adjoining the city, called the circus. It was rather more than a mile in circumference, and was surrounded with seats and three tiers of galleries.

3. In the centre was a barrier, twelve feet in breadth and four feet high, around which the race was performed; and at one end was a triumphal arch, through which the successful charioteer drove, followed by the shouts and applause of the assembly.

4. Four chariots usually started together, the drivers of which were distinguished by dresses of different colors. Each color had its particular partisans, who wagered largely on the success of their favorite. These sports were exceedingly popular, and repeated in endless succession.

5. Of the form of carriages in use among the Romans, we have no precise description. They were of various kinds, open and covered, chairs and couches, borne on poles by slaves in livery. The couch was furnished with pillows and a mattress, and with feet of silver or gold to support it when set down.

6. There were also close litters, drawn by mules, and carriages on two and four wheels, painted of various colors, and highly ornamented. The horses were yoked to the carriage by means of a curved cross-bar passing over their necks, and were directed by bridles and reins, which were sometimes of embroidered silk, with gold bits.

7. Besides mules and horses, many other animals were occasionally used in carriages, such as dogs, goats, and deer, and even bears, leopards, lions, and tigers. But this, of course, was merely for a whimsical amusement, and not for real service.

4. The chariots? Their drivers? 5. What is said of the form of the Roman carriages? 6. Litters? How were the horses harnessed and managed? 7. What other animals were sometimes used?

8. When the Romans were pure and simple, they lived chiefly on milk and vegetables, with a coarse kind of pudding made of flour and water. But as they began to grow powerful, and to conquer the neighboring nations, they became acquainted with the luxuries of the people they subdued, and introduced them into their own state.

9. The supper rooms of some of the emperors were hung with cloths of gold and silver, enriched with jewels. Tables were made for them of fine gold, and couches with frames of massive silver. The Romans always reclined on couches to take their meals.

10. At great entertainments the supper room was hung with flowers, and the guests were crowned with garlands. The floor was generally bare, though richly ornamented, and the ceiling was inlaid with a fretwork of gold and ivory. Scented oil was used for lighting the apartments, and massive carved lamps of figured bronze reflected their brilliancy on the gay and beautiful scene.

11. Some of the more voluptuous and degraded of the Roman emperors, in the decay of the republic, were most extravagant and ridiculous in providing rare dishes for their table: the livers and brains of small birds, the heads of parrots and pheasants, and the tongues of peacocks and nightingales, formed a part of their daily food.

12. But the most luxurious dish that graced the table of the Romans was an entire boar, roasted, and stuffed with game and poultry. On one occasion, the senate was assembled to consult on the best mode of dressing an immense turbot which had been presented to the emperor!

13. The use of such clocks and watches as we have at present was unknown to the Romans. The sun-dial was introduced 440 years after the building of the city. About a century afterward, a kind of water clock was introduced, which was contrived with much ingenuity, and answered all purposes for the measurement of time.

14. The fine arts were unknown in Rome till after the sixth century of her existence, when they were introduced by the successful captains of her armies, from the nations they had conquered. After a taste for the arts had been thus formed, large enclosed galleries were built around the mansions of the rich, and were adorned with the finest specimens of painting and sculpture.

15.. In the dwellings of the most affluent patricians, these galleries also contained splendid libraries, which were open to the inspection of the learned and the curious. Collections of books were then of course, very rare, on account of the great expense and difficulty of transcribing them.

16. They were sometimes written on parchment, but more frequently on a paper made from the leaves of a plant called papyrus. The leaves were pasted together at the ends, and then made up into a roll, which was enclosed in a covering of skin or silk, fastened with strings or clasps.

17. Writing was performed with a reed, split and pointed like our pen, and dipped in ink. Matters not intended for preservation were usually written with a pointed instrument on tables spread with wax. When letters were sent forward for delivery they were perfumed, and tied with a silken thread, the ends of which were sealed with common wax.

18. The usual garments of the Romans were the toga and the tunic; the former was a loose woollen robe, of a semicircular form and without sleeves; the latter, a close white garment, worn when abroad under the toga, but alone in the house. The men usually went bareheaded.

19. For the feet, the usual coverings were the buskin and the sandal. The buskin reached about half-way up to the leg; the sandal was a mere sole, fastened to the foot by straps and buckles.

VIEW OF MODERN ROME.

Rome under the Popes.

1. I WILL now proceed to finish the history of Rome. I have already had occasion to speak of the pope.

This title was given to the bishops, at a very early period of the Christian church. At first, the pope of Rome was only one of the superior dignitaries of the church; but in the course of years he became the head of it, and both claimed and exercised an authority superior to that of any king or emperor.

2. For a long time the popes of Rome had authority only in matters of religion; but Gregory III., about the year 731, resisted the Greek emperor, who ruled over Italy, and established the title of the pope to reign over Rome in matters of state. From this time forward, the popes rapidly acquired power, and in the year 760 they had extensive possessions and immense wealth. Their pride was now equal to their power, and neither seemed to have any bounds.

3. The popes claimed the authority of God's viceroys on earth. They called themselves the successors of St. Peter, and said that the keys of heaven and hell were given into their custody. No other tyranny had ever been like theirs, for they tyrannized over the souls of men.

4. Other potentates are content with wearing a single crown ; but the popes crowned themselves with three, rising one above the other. They assumed the title of Holiness ; but some of them were as unholy men as ever lived, being full of earthly ambition, and stained with atrocious sins.

5. When their power was at its height, they showed themselves to be the haughtiest of mortals. Nobody was allowed to enter their presence without kneeling down to kiss their toes. When they mounted on horseback, they caused kings and emperors to hold their stirrups.

6. They took away kingdoms from the rightful sovereigns, and gave them to others. A pope by the name of Clement declared that God had given him all the kingdoms of heaven and earth. If any person denied the pope's authority, he was burnt alive.

7. In 1077, pope Gregory obliged Henry IV., emperor of Germany, to stand three days in the depth of winter, barefoot at his castle gate, to implore his pardon. In 1191, another pope kicked another emperor's crown off his head, while he was kneeling before him, to show that the pope could make and unmake kings at his pleasure.

8. It was near the year 1100 that one of the popes of Rome ordained that the title of pope should be given only to the bishop of Rome. It was about this period that the power of the pope was at its highest pitch. For nearly four hundred years this potentate continued to exercise an almost undisputed sway over the people, and even the kings and princes of the Christian world.

9. During this age, great darkness prevailed throughout Europe, Asia, and Africa; and though Rome was the seat of the popes, who were now more powerful than any sovereign, the people were generally in a state of ignorance and degradation.

10. But in the year 1518, a Reformation was commenced by a man called Martin Luther. He preached against the power of the popes, and all Europe was shaken with the convulsion which followed. The result was that the authority of the popes was generally thrown off by the governments throughout Christendom, though it is supposed that fifty millions of people were killed in the wars that took place during this period of agitation.

11. Until very recently, the pope governed Rome and the adjacent territory like a king. In 1870, however, the Romans declared by a vote, that they wished to join the new kingdom of Italy, with Victor Emmanuel as king, and thus the pope lost what is called the "temporal power," remaining, however, as before, the head of the church.

12. Pius IX. was elected pope in 1847, and still (1874) remains upon the throne. The French Revolution of 1848 awakened a spirit of rebellion in his subjects, and he was compelled to flee. He was brought back by the French, however, and has ever since owed his security to foreign bayonets.

13. The city of Rome at present is thirteen miles in circumference. The greater part of it has a dark, gloomy, and desolate appearance. It is full of old ruins of palaces and temples, and other magnificent edifices of the ancient Romans.

14. Travellers are wonder-struck by these tokens of the greatness of ancient Rome. But instead of her mighty warriors, they find only a degraded people.

11. What of the pope at the present day? What happened in 1870? What power did the pope thus lose? 12. What of Pius IX.? 13. What of the present city of Rome? 14. How are travellers affected in Rome? What of the people? How has their spirit been crushed?

Their spirit has been crushed by ages of servitude and superstition.

15. But these ruins and relics are not the only remains of former grandeur. There are a good many works still existing, written by the old Roman authors. These are in the Latin language, which, as I have before said, was spoken by the Romans. Many of them are very interesting, and from them modern nations have derived a large part of their most valuable laws and institutions.

15. What of old Roman works? In what language are they written? What have the moderns derived from these works?

The Kingdom of Italy.

1. THE kingdom of Italy, now under one king, consists of several states which were once distinct. Each of these has its history, and at some future day it will be well for you to read the story of these celebrated countries. In this little book I can only give you a very brief account of two or three of them.

2. The kingdom of Naples, or the kingdom of the two Sicilies, includes the island of Sicily and the southern extremity of the peninsula of Italy. It embraces the foot of the figure of the boot, which I have before mentioned. This kingdom has a population of eight millions five hundred thousand.

3. The history of Naples, after it was separated from the Roman empire, possesses very little interest. It passed first into the hands of one tribe of northern invaders, then into the hands of another, and then into the hands of another. After this, it was subject to Spain and other countries, until at length it became an independent country, under the government of its own kings.

4. In 1860, the Sicilians, goaded to desperation by the shocking cruelties of their Neapolitan governors, rose against them. They were led by Garibaldi, an Italian who had long been exiled in America. The Neapolitans were driven out of Palermo and Messina, and Sicily and Naples recovered their independence. They soon afterwards became part of the kingdom of Italy, under Victor Emmanuel, by their own choice and a wise choice it has proved to be.

5. The history of Venice is more interesting. When the northern barbarians invaded Italy in 452, the inhabitants living in the vicinity of the present city of Venice, settled in the marshes along the border of the sea, and supported themselves by fishing, making salt, and by commerce.

THE DOGE OF VENICE AND HIS ADVISERS.

6. In the year 809 they commenced building the city of Venice on a little island called Rialto. To this place they transported their riches, and soon the new city became the capital of the republic of Venice. The city and state increased, until at length Venice was one of the most powerful states in the world.

6. When and where was Venice built ?

7. The inhabitants paid great attention to commerce, and such was the number of their ships, that in the eleventh century, Venice sent a fleet of two hundred sail to assist in the first crusade. It was on account of the interest which this state had in maritime matters that the Doge, who was the chief officer, used to be wedded to the sea with pompous ceremonies.

8. The power of Venice continued to increase, and in process of time, the proud city of Constantinople was conquered by its armies, aided by the crusaders. The spoils of the conquered city, consisting of gems and jewelry, books, marbles, pictures, statues, obelisks, and other costly treasures, were chiefly carried to Venice.

9. The republic prospered for many years, and its wealth and power increased, though the people were often governed in the most cruel and oppressive manner. But I have only room to add, that toward the close of the last century, it fell a victim to the power of France, and was long attached to the empire of Austria. In 1861, it became part of the new kingdom of Italy.

10. I could fill a book with tales about Genoa, which was at one time the rival of Venice; about Tuscany, which is considered the most beautiful portion of Italy; and about the kingdom of Sardinia, which lies in the northern part of Italy. But as it is impossible to get a long story into a little book, I must let these things pass. There are now twenty-four millions of people in Italy.

CHAPTER XCV.—EUROPE CONTINUED.

About the Ottoman Empire.—Turkey in Europe.—Turkey in Asia.—About the Climate, People, and other things.

1. THE Turkish or Ottoman empire is divided into two parts, called Turkey in Europe and Turkey in Asia. It was formerly much more extensive than at present. It now embraces a large region of territory in Europe, lying between Greece on the south, and Russia

CHAPTER XCV.—1. What other name has the Turkish empire? How is the Ottoman empire divided? Was the Turkish empire more extensive once than it is now?

and Germany on the north; this portion is called Turkey in Europe.

2. Turkey in Asia includes Asia Minor and Armenia, Syria, Palestine, Mesopotamia, etc. Egypt and the Barbary states in Africa were also subject to Turkey, till within a few years.

3. These latter countries, together with Greece, have become wholly, or partially, independent of the Turkish dominion. The capital of this empire is Constantinople, which I have often mentioned before, and which at this day is one of the greatest cities in the world.

4. The chief ruler or king of the Turks is called the sultan. He lives at Constantinople, in a splendid palace. Like most eastern princes, he has two or three hundred wives, whom he keeps shut up in a place called the harem.

5. The Turks have long beards, wear turbans on their heads, and a loose flowing robe over their under dress. They sit on cushions instead of chairs, and take their food with their fingers, instead of forks.

6. The sultan rules over his country, not according to certain established laws, but according to his own will. The people generally do exactly what he requires; if they refuse to obey him, they are sure to lose their property and their heads.

7. If you were to go to Turkey, you would discover that the climate is warm, and the country naturally fertile. You would see that the people are indolent and cruel. You would see that they have not many manufactures, and but little commerce. You would see that the lands are poorly cultivated, and that many tracts naturally fruitful are barren and desolate for want of tillage.

8. You will discover that the people dislike the Christians, and worship according to the faith of Mahomet. You will discover that they have mosques instead of churches. At Constantinople, you will see a very splendid edifice, called St. Sophia. This was formerly a Greek church, but it is now converted into a Mahometan mosque.

About the Saracens.—How the Turks overturned the Saracen Empire.—How the Ottoman Turks founded the Ottoman Empire.—About Bajazet, Timour, and others.

1. IN the history of Asia I have given you some account of the Saracens. These, you will remember, were Arabs, among whom Mahomet and his successors established an empire at the commencement of the seventh century.

2. The kings or rulers of the Saracen empire were called caliphs, and resided at Bagdad, a splendid city which they built near the river Tigris in Mesopotamia. I have told you how these caliphs extended their empire over a considerable part of Asia and Africa, and some portions of Europe.

3. To the north of Mesopotamia, there were several tribes of Tartars, among which were some called Turks. These were daring warriors, and such was their fame, that the caliphs induced many of them to come to Bagdad and serve as soldiers.

CHAPTER XCVI.—1. What of the Saracens? When and by whom was the Saracen empire established? 2. What of the caliphs? Dominion of the caliphs? 3. Who were the Turks? Where did they live? Why were they employed by the caliphs of Bagdad?

4. In process of time, the Turks acquired great influence at Bagdad, and finally overturned the Saracen empire, made themselves masters of nearly all the Saracen possessions, and adopted the Mahometan religion. Thus the Turkish empire became the successor of the Saracen empire, and included in its dominions Asia Minor, Syria, Palestine, and other Asiatic countries, which the Saracens had conquered from the Greek empire.

5. After a while, the Turkish empire, which had been thus established, was overturned by another tribe of Turks, who called themselves Ottomans. These came from the country east of the Caspian sea, and laid the foundation of the present Ottoman empire. This took place in the year 1299; the founder of the empire being Othman I.

6. The Greek empire had formerly included Asia Minor, but this had been taken by the Saracens, and afterward by the Turks. At the time of the Ottoman invasion, it included little more than what is at present called Turkey in Europe, with Greece.

7. Constantinople, the present capital of Turkey, was called Byzantium, from Byzas, who founded it in 715 B. C. It was a flourishing city in the time of the early Greeks. The neighboring country was settled by colonies from Greece, and by other tribes. It was conquered by the Romans, and the name of Byzantium was changed to Constantinople, by the emperor Constantine, in 329.

8. It had before this period fallen into decay, but it was now revived, and Constantine removed thither with his whole court. It thus became the capital of the Roman empire. When that was divided into the Eastern and Western empires in 395, it was the capital of the former, which, as you know, was often called the Greek empire.

9. This continued, with various changes, to subsist as a distinct sovereignty, till the period of which I am now treating. It was, as I have said, on the brink of ruin, when the Ottomans, who had already established themselves in Asia Minor, and swallowed up the countries formerly belonging to the Saracen dominions, began to cast longing eyes upon the Greek empire in Europe.

10. The sultan, at this time, was Bajazet. He began to reign in 1389, and was so famous for his conquests, that the Turks called him the Thunderbolt.

11. He was preparing to attack Constantinople, when a greater warrior than he came from Tartary, and subdued him. This was Tamerlane, otherwise called Timour the Tartar, and sometimes Timour the Lane Man. He defeated Bajazet in a great battle, in which three hundred thousand men were slain.

12. It is said that when Timour the Lane Man had got Bajazet, the Thunderbolt, into his power, he put him into an iron cage, and carried him about for a show, like a wild beast. Most conquerors have a resemblance to wild beasts, and it would be well if they could always be kept in iron cages.

13. The misfortunes of Bajazet prevented the Turks from conquering the Eastern empire of the Romans, for a considerable time. But in 1453, when Mahomet the Great was sultan, they took Constantinople. The emperor, whose name was Constantine, was killed. From this time forward, the Turks were securely established in Europe, and the country which they inhabited was called Turkey.

Sequel of the Turkish History.

1. THE reigns of most of the Turkish sultans have been full of crime and bloodshed. Sultan Selim, who began to reign in 1512, invaded Egypt, and conquered it. The Egyptian soldiers were called Mamelukes, of whom I have told you in the history of Egypt. Thousands of them were taken prisoners.

2. After the victory, the sultan ordered a splendid throne to be erected on the banks of the river Nile, near the gates of Cairo. Sitting on his throne, he caused all the Mamelukes to be massacred in his sight, and their bodies to be thrown into the river.

3. Mahomet the Third, who ascended the throne in 1596, had nineteen brothers. All these he caused to be strangled, so that they might not attempt to rob him of his power.

4. Amurath the Fourth became sultan in 1621. This monster caused fourteen thousand men to be murdered. The sport that pleased him best, was to run about the streets at night, with a drawn sword, cutting and slashing at everybody whom he met.

5. These facts will show the reader what kind of a government the Turks have lived under. Mahmoud the Second, who ascended the throne in 1808, was more enlightened than his predecessors. But he was compelled to act with great severity. This was particularly the case in regard to the janizaries.

6. These were a large body of troops, established in 1300, and who continued to be a very powerful body of soldiers for several centuries. Though called the sultan's guards, they became more dangerous than all the other subjects of the empire.

7. Sultan Mahmoud, therefore, determined to free himself from their power. Accordingly, in the year 1826, he ordered the rest of his troops to surround the janizaries. This was done, and they were shot down and massacred without mercy. The sultan afterward endeavored to reform the manners of the Turks, and to make them adopt the customs of other European nations. In this he had some success.

8. In 1853, Abd-ul-Medjid was the Turkish sultan. Russia showed a disposition, at this period, to make war upon Turkey, and though many people were of the opinion that it would be well if so miserable a government as that of Turkey could be destroyed, yet France and England went to the sultan's relief, and the contest known as the Eastern war followed.

9. This lasted several years, and was brought to a close by the capture of Sebastopol, a Russian fortress, in the summer of 1855. It is supposed that half a million of lives were lost in this struggle. Russia has been foiled for a time, and Turkey still retains its independence.

10. But in 1860, millions of people in the two Christian nations that aided the Turks were led to regret the part they had taken. For early in that year, 10,000 Christians living in Syria and other countries belonging to Turkey, were massacred in cold blood by believers in Mahomet! France and England were forced to send out soldiers to punish the murderers.

Early History of Spain. The Moorish Conquest.

1. THE kingdom of Spain is divided from France by the range of mountains called the Pyrenees. It has Portugal on the west; its other boundaries are the Atlantic ocean, the Bay of Biscay, and the Mediterranean sea. The whole country forms a large peninsula.

2. Spain is a very remarkable country; it is full of wild, rocky mountains, with beautiful valleys between.

CHAPTER XCVIII.—1. How is Spain divided from France? Boundaries of Spain?

The climate is warm and delightful. The country produces abundance of grapes, olives, lemons, almonds, figs, citrons, and pomegranates.

3. Spain has about half as many inhabitants as the United States. The people are generally ignorant and superstitious, but they seem to be very honest, ceremonious, and polite. They are fond of gay dances in the open air. Madrid, the capital of Spain, is a very splendid city.

4. Spain abounds in castles, churches, and palaces, built by the Moors, of whom I shall soon tell you the story. These edifices are some of the most wonderful buildings in the world. They are totally unlike those of ancient Greece and Rome. They bear some resemblance to what is called the Gothic architecture, specimens of which are to be found in some of our cities.

5. If I had time and room, I should like very much to tell you a long story about Spain; but I shall be obliged to say very little of it, and leave you afterward to pursue the subject in some larger book.

6. Little is known about the history of Spain till the Phœnicians made voyages thither, about 900 B. C.

2. What sort of a country is Spain? Climate? Productions? 3. Population? What of the people? The capital? What of Madrid? 4. What of the Moorish buildings in Spain?

They came from Phœnicia, which you know was close to the land of Canaan, a distance of two thousand miles, and built two columns at the Straits of Gibraltar. These columns were called the pillars of Hercules. The ancients did not dare to sail beyond them, into the broad Atlantic ocean.

7. The Greeks founded several cities in Spain. Afterward, the Carthaginians acquired possession of the country; but it was taken by the Romans in 134 B. C., who kept it till the year 406 after the Christian era. Spain was then invaded by barbarians from the north, called the Suevi, the Alans, and the Vandals.

8. Some of these people continued in the country more than a hundred years. They were then driven out by another set of barbarians, called Goths, or Visigoths, who overran the whole of Spain. These became established in the country, and finally founded a kingdom there.

9. After the Goths had been in Spain about two hundred years, a king mounted the throne whose name was Roderick. This king grievously injured Count Julian, who was one of the most powerful of the Spanish or Gothic nobles. In order to avenge himself, Julian took steps which resulted in the ruin of his country.

6. What of the early history of Spain? Where was Phœnicia? How far from Spain? What did the Phœnicians do in Spain? What straits connect the Mediterranean sea with the Atlantic ocean? Where were the pillars of Hercules built? How far did the ancients venture to go in their vessels? 7. What of the Greeks? The Carthaginians? The Romans? What barbarians conquered Spain? 8. How long did the Suevi and other barbarians remain in Spain? Who drove out the Suevi? What of the Goths?

10. In Mauritania, which I have already mentioned, on the northern coast of Africa, and not far from Spain, there was a nation of Saracens. They were called Mauri, or Moors, from the country which they inhabited. Count Julian invited them to cross the sea, and invade Spain.

11. Accordingly, a great number of these infidels landed on the Spanish shores, under the command of a general named Tariff. King Roderick the Goth gathered an army, and encountered them at Xeres, in the south of Spain. Here a great battle was fought.

12. The Moors were completely victorious. The fate of king Roderick was never known. His horse, and his sword, helmet, shield, and breastplate, were found by the side of a river, near the field of battle; but his body was nowhere to be seen. These events occurred about 712 after Christ.

9. What of Roderick? Count Julian? What did he do? 10. What of Mauritania? Its direction from Spain? What of the Moors? Count Julian? 11. What did the Moors do? What followed? 12. Fate of king Roderick? When did this happen?

13. The Spaniards long believed that king Roderick was alive, and that, at some future day, he would again lead an army to battle against the Moors. But his war-shout was heard no more, and as the Gothic monarchy was ruined by his fall, he is called Roderick the last of the Goths.

14. Pelagio, a prince of the blood-royal, took command of all the Gothic Spaniards who had not been slain by the Moors. He led them into the mountainous region of the Asturias and Burgos, and there founded a little kingdom. This was the only part of Spain which the Moors never conquered.

15. The successors of Pelagio enlarged the boundaries of his kingdom. But, for a long time, the Moors possessed three-fourths of Spain.

polished. There was more learning among them than in any other part of Europe.

2. In the city of Cordova, there was a library of six hundred thousand volumes. There were likewise seventy public libraries in other parts of the Moorish territories in Spain. The Moors were great lovers of poetry and music.

3. They built many noble edifices in Spain. The Alhambra, in the city of Granada, was the palace of the Moorish sovereigns. It was of marble, and ornamented with beautiful sculpture. The sultry atmosphere was cooled by fountains, which played continually in the chambers and halls. Beneath the Alhambra were vaults, which the Moorish kings had caused to be dug, that they might be buried there; for they loved the Alhambra so well, that they used it both as their palace and sepulchre.

4. But the Spaniards hated the Moors, and seldom were at peace with them. In their continual wars, the victory sometimes fell to one party, and sometimes to the other. Eighty thousand Moors were once slain in a single battle.

2. What of the libraries in Cordova? In other cities? What did the Moors love? 3. What did they build in Spain? Describe the Alhambra. What were beneath the Alhambra? 4. How did the Spaniards feel toward the Moors? What of their wars?

5. On the other hand, a Moorish hero, by the name of Almanzor, is said to have vanquished the Spaniards in more than fifty battles. He took the city of Compostella, and compelled his captives to carry the gates of a large edifice from thence to Cordova, on their shoulders.

6. The most famous warrior that appeared on either side, was Don Rodrigo de Bivar, surnamed the Cid Campeador, or the Incomparable Lord. He gained so many battles against the Moors, that at last the Spaniards considered victory certain whenever the Cid Campeador was at their head.

7. When the Incomparable Lord was dead, the courage of the Moors revived. They boldly attacked the Spaniards, and besieged the city where the Cid Campeador lay buried. The Spaniards went forth to meet them, and at their head rode an armed warrior, with a countenance like death.

8. The Moors recognized his features, and fled; for it was the Cid Campeador! The Spaniards had taken him from the tomb, and seated him on the war-horse which he had ridden in his lifetime. And thus the dead warrior won another victory.

5. What of Almanzor? What city did he take? 6. What famous warrior can you mention? What of him? 7. What of the Moors after his death? Who rode at the head of the Spaniards? 8. How were the Moors affected by seeing the dead body of the Cid Campeador?

9. Many other wonderful stories are told about the Moorish and Spanish wars. Sometimes, it is said, a saint came down from heaven to lead the Spaniards to battle. Sometimes the sun stood still that they might have time to kill their enemies. Sometimes they were encouraged by the appearance of a blazing cross in the sky.

10. But these are fables. It is certain, however, that the Moors gradually lost their Spanish territories, till nothing remained to them except Granada. And, in the reign of Ferdinand and Isabella, they were wholly driven out of Spain. This event took place in 1492, nearly eight centuries after the overthrow of king Roderick the Goth.

The Spanish Inquisition.

1. THE reign of Ferdinand and Isabella was disgraced by the establishment of the Spanish Inquisition. The design of this horrible institution was to prevent the people from adopting any but the Catholic religion.

9. What stories are told of the Moorish and Spanish wars? 10. What at last remained to the Moors? When were the Moors driven out of Spain?

CHAPTER C.—1. When was the Inquisition established? What was its design?

2. Persons who were suspected of being heretics were thrown into damp and dismal dungeons. They were then brought before the inquisitors, who sat completely covered with long robes and hoods of sackcloth. Their faces were invisible; but they looked at the prisoners through two holes in their sackcloth hoods.

3. If the accused persons would not plead guilty, they were tortured in various ways. Sometimes they were drawn up to the roof of the chamber by a rope, and after hanging a considerable time, the rope was loosened, so that they fell almost to the floor.

4. The rope was then suddenly tightened again, and the prisoner's limbs were put out of joint by the shock. If he still refused to confess, the inquisitors rubbed his feet with lard, and roasted them before a fire. In short, their cruelties were too dreadful to be told.

5. When the inquisitors had satisfied themselves with torturing their prisoners, they prepared to burn them. The condemned persons walked in a procession, dressed in garments which were painted with flames. On their breasts they wore their own likenesses, in the act of being devoured by serpents and wild beasts.

2. How were suspected persons treated? Describe the inquisitors. 3, 4. How were the accused persons tortured?

6. When they reached the place of execution, the victims were fastened to a stake with iron chains, and roasted to death by a slow fire. They sometimes suffered the agony of this torment for two or three hours, before death relieved them.

7. Such were the horrors of the Inquisition ; yet it was introduced into Italy and other Catholic countries, and continued in operation for nearly three hundred years. Between thirty and forty thousand persons were burnt alive before the Inquisition was abolished.

8. The remembrance of the Inquisition will ever cause a stain to rest upon the reign of Ferdinand and Isabella. It was the greatest glory of this king and queen, that they gave Christopher Columbus the means of discovering America. But Columbus died in absolute misery, as the reward of his discovery !

9. The Spaniards made great conquests in America. The riches of the country were in this way much increased, and there was more silver and gold in Spain than in all the rest of Europe. But it is doubtful whether Spain ever derived any real benefit from her American colonies ; for instead of staying at home to cultivate the soil, the inhabitants crossed the ocean in search of gold and silver.

*The Invincible Armada.—Curious Death of a Spanish King.
—Recent Affairs of Spain.*

1. ONE of the most powerful monarchs of Spain was Philip the Second. He was not only king of Spain, but he obtained the crown of Portugal also, in 1580 ; but Portugal afterward became a separate kingdom again. It had first been declared independent of Spain at the beginning of the twelfth century.

2. Philip intended to conquer England, and prepared a fleet of eighty ships for that purpose. This fleet was called the Invincible Armada. But it was conquered even without a battle, for a storm scattered it, and drove many of the ships on the British coast.

3. The son of Philip was a weak-minded man. The manner of his death was very singular. He was sit ting, one day, in the council chamber, which was warmed by a large stove. The heat and vapor of the stove affected his head.

4. He ordered the attendants to quench the fire. But the person whose duty it was to do this happened not to be in the chamber, and the rules of the Spanish court were so strict, that it would have been unlawful for any other person to touch the fire.

5. Moreover, it would have been beneath the king's dignity to leave the chamber, or even to move his chair back from the stove. So the fire continued to grow hotter, and the poor king grew sicker and sicker, till at last it was impossible to cure him. And thus he died, by a kind of death that could have befallen nobody but a Spanish king.

6. In the year 1700, Charles the Second of Spain died without children. He was succeeded by a young French prince, named Philip, duke of Anjou, the grandson of Louis the Fourteenth. The kings of this family are called the Spanish Bourbons.

7. This event caused a long war in Europe. Charles, archduke of Austria, claimed the crown of Spain, and he and Philip of Anjou alternately drove each other out of Madrid. But Philip finally kept his seat on the throne.

8. Spain has often been at war with England. She united with France against that country during the American Revolution; but peace was concluded in 1783. Another war, however, began between England and France about ten years afterward.

9. In 1808, when the emperor Napoleon was at the height of his power, he compelled the Spanish king to abdicate his throne. The name of this king was Ferdinand the Seventh. Napoleon then placed the crown of Spain upon the head of his own brother, Joseph Bonaparte.

10. But most of the Spaniards refused to acknowledge king Joseph as their sovereign. A bloody war ensued. The English government sent armies into Spain and Portugal; and it was there that Lord Wellington gained his first victories over the French.

11. Ferdinand, the old Spanish king, was replaced upon the throne in 1814. He was, however, a tyrant.

8. What of Spain and England? When was peace concluded between France and England? 9. What did Napoleon compel the Spanish king to do in 1808? Who was Ferdinand VII.? and a bigot, and his reign was a mischievous one. His death took place in 1833.

12. After this, Spain was ravaged by a civil war between Don Carlos and the young queen Maria Isabella. In 1870, the Spaniards invited Amadeo, son of the king of Italy, to be their king, and he consented. He only remained two years, however, when he returned home. Spain then declared itself a republic, and has been since in a state of anarchy.

A short Story about Portugal.

1. PORTUGAL lies to the west of Spain, and is bounded on the west by the Atlantic ocean. The population of the country is nearly four millions. The capital is Lisbon. This is a large city, and many of our vessels visit it for the purpose of getting wines, grapes, oranges, and lemons.

2. The climate of Portugal is similar to that of Spain. The people also resemble the Spaniards, but speak a language somewhat different. The Portuguese are very ignorant, and as they seldom read, they have plenty of time for dancing.

3. Portugal was originally considered a part of Spain, and shared in the events of that country. In the twelfth century, it became independent. Since that time it has been considered a separate kingdom, though it has been subject to Spain for a portion of this period.

4. The history of Portugal is of little interest till about the year 1400, when the Portuguese took the lead in navigating the Atlantic ocean. At that time, this great sea was little known, and nobody had gone across it to America, nor had any one dared to sail around Africa.

5. But the little Portuguese vessels ventured out further and further, and finally one of them reached the Cape of Good Hope. After this, a Portuguese fleet passed entirely around Africa, crossed the Indian ocean, and reached India.

6. These wonderful adventures and discoveries excited other nations, and in a few years Christopher Columbus discovered America. Thus the Portuguese may be considered as having led the way to the discovery of this vast continent on which we live, and which was unknown to the people of Europe, Asia, and Africa, till the year 1492.

7. I need not tell you of what happened in Portugal from this time till the year 1755. At that date, an earthquake took place which shook down nearly the whole city of Lisbon. Houses, churches, and palaces were suddenly tumbled into heaps of ruins. Large chasms were opened in the earth, and hundreds of houses were plunged into them. The sea at first rolled back from the land, and then returned, sweeping every thing before it. In this awful calamity, ten thousand persons lost their lives.

8. The Portuguese founded a good many colonies in different parts of the world. One of these was in Brazil, in South America. To this place the king of Portugal retired with his family in 1807, and established his court at Rio Janeiro, the capital of the country. This was done because Portugal had been invaded by the French.

SCENE IN FRANCE.

Description of France.—Its Climate.—Cities.—Manufactures.—Manners and Customs of the People.

1. FRANCE lies in the western part of Europe, and contains about thirty-six millions of inhabitants. Paris, the capital, is a very large city, surrounded with walls of stone. It is full of fine houses, beautiful public gardens, pleasant walks, handsome streets, and interesting places of amusement. To a stranger, it is the most agreeable city in the world.

CHAPTER CIV.—1. Where is France? Its population? Describe Paris. What else of Paris?

2. Besides Paris, there are a great many other large and handsome cities in France. Among these are Rouen, where the people manufacture a great deal of handsome jewelry; Lyons, where they make beautiful silks; Bordeaux, where the people deal in wines; and Marseilles, in the midst of a country which produces fine grapes, and other delicious fruits.

3. The climate of France is about the same as that of Pennsylvania, Maryland, and Virginia. The soil is fruitful, and yields abundance of food for the numerous inhabitants. The country produces many kinds of fruit in great perfection, such as cherries, pears, plums, peaches, and figs. It also yields immense quantities of grapes, from which many kinds of choice wines are produced.

4. The people of France are very gay and cheerful. They live a great deal in the open air, and it is common in all parts of the country to see both men and women at work in the fields. They do not labor very hard, and during the holidays, of which they have a great many, they walk about the streets, and dance in the public gardens or squares.

5. If the French are not the wisest people in the world, they seem to enjoy themselves better than most others. They are fond of music, and delight to get together, and talk about all sorts of things. They are very polite, and always treat strangers with particular civility. The gentlemen are very courteous to the ladies, and the ladies in return take every means in their power to make their society agreeable to the gentlemen.

6. The manufactures of France are numerous and valuable. The people have an excellent fancy in making jewelry, silks, clocks, watches, and many other ornamental articles. These are sent to all parts of the world, and though they may not be considered very necessary, yet they give a great deal of pleasure, and thus have their use.

7. The French people are fond of dress, and the dress-makers of Paris set the fashions for the rest of the world. The milliners and mantua-makers of this city have more followers than any king that ever lived; for the gowns and bonnets of all the ladies of Europe and America are made according to their direction.

8. The French nation, on the whole, are a very interesting people. Though they might seem to be frivolous and thoughtless, yet France has produced many great men, and the history of the country displays many great and glorious actions.

9. You might at first think them a nation of fiddlers, dress-makers, and dancing masters; but if you look deeper into their character, and read their story with attention, you will see that perhaps they are the most warlike nation in Europe, and that if they spend their time in amusement, it is not because they are deficient in genius for the highest pursuits of the mind.

About the Gauls and other tribes of Barbarians.—How the southern parts of Europe were first settled, and how the northern parts were settled afterward.

1. In the course of this history, I have had frequent occasion to mention various northern tribes of Europe, called Barbarians, and perhaps I shall not find a better opportunity than the present to give you some account of them. You remember that Greece was settled before any other part of Europe. The first inhabitants were the descendants of Japheth. The descendants of these spread themselves over Greece, and probably other parts of Europe.

8. What might seem to be the character of the French? What does their history display? 9. What of their talent for war? Their genius for other things?

2. As the people increased along the shores of Asia and Africa, they sent colonies to different places along the shores of the Mediterranean. Some settled in Greece, some in Italy, some in Spain. These countries being warm, pleasant, and fruitful, were soon filled with inhabitants. Living upon the coast, they had a great many ships, and carried on commerce with different countries.

3. In this way, after many years, they grew rich, and built large cities, with fine houses, temples, and palaces. Such was the course of events in regard to all southern Europe, of which I have been telling you the story. But while these things were going on, various tribes were emigrating into the more northern portions of Europe.

4. Here the climate was colder, and the soil less fruitful. Still the woods were full of elks, rein-deer, fallow-deer, roe-bucks, wild bulls, wild boars, and many other animals. These supplied food for the inhabitants, and the chase furnished excellent sport to the adventurous men of those days.

5. Besides all this, in those regions unoccupied by man, the land cost nothing, and whoever would come and take it might have it. These circumstances invited the people to leave the soft, sunny regions of Greece, Italy, Spain, and also of Asia, for the colder and wilder realms of northern Europe.

6. Thus tribe followed tribe, and nation followed nation, until the whole country was occupied, from the Mediterranean on the south, to the Arctic sea on the north. These emigrants were savages, and of a war-like character; they therefore did not mingle into one great nation, but each tribe remained distinct. As they increased in numbers, they increased in power.

7. After a while, something would happen to bring two tribes living near each other into a state of war. Fierce battles would follow, and a great many would be killed. Sometimes one tribe would be vanquished, and they would all be slaughtered, reduced to a state of slavery, or driven out of their country.

8. Among the most remarkable of these northern tribes were the Gauls, who were the first known inhabitants of France; the Franks and Suevi, who inhabited Germany; the Goths and the Vandals, who inhabited Norway, Sweden, and Lapland, and afterward established themselves in Germany; and the Huns, who lived in Hungary. There were still many other tribes, but it is not necessary to mention them here.

9. Well, you must now imagine all the north of Europe inhabited by these wild tribes. Spending their time chiefly in the chase, or in war, or other hardy pursuits, they became bold, daring, and adventurous. Their numbers also increased, and some of them became powerful nations.

10. They were, however, restless, and, like beasts of prey, were constantly looking out for some object upon which they might fall and devour it. So things went on, till at length these barbarians fixed their attention upon the rich cities, the fertile plains, and vine-clad hills of the south of Europe.

11. The Roman empire was now tottering to decay, and the Roman armies were no longer the dread of these tribes. About the year 400, they began to pour down their armies upon the plains of Italy. Alaric, king of the Goths, laid Rome under contribution, and less than fifty years after, Attila, king of the Huns, threatened the same city with destruction.

12. After this period, these ruthless invaders continued from time to time to attack the southern regions of Europe, till they made themselves masters of its finest portions.

13. As the northern barbarians of whom I have been speaking had no books, and wrote no histories, their early story is little known. After getting possession of Rome, Spain, and other southern portions of Europe, they settled in these countries.

14. For a time, literature and learning, the arts of poetry, painting, sculpture, and music, which had been cultivated by the Romans, were unknown in the countries where they once flourished. But, by degrees, the new inhabitants became civilized and polished, and the modern nations which now occupy these regions may be considered as in part their descendants. It is now time to proceed with the history of France.

12. What did the barbarians continue to do? 13. Where did the northern barbarians settle? 14. What of them for a time? What happened at length? What of the modern nations of the south of Europe?

The Gauls.—Origin of the French Nation.—Little King Pepin.

1. THE ancient name of France was Gaul, and the inhabitants were called Gauls. These were one of those warlike tribes of which I have just been speaking. At a very early date, they appear to have been numerous and powerful. In the year 390 B. C., they invaded Rome under Brennus, and took that city, but were expelled by Camillus.

2. Under another Brennus, they invaded Greece, as I have told you. In the reign of Julius Cæsar, the Gauls had made some little progress towards civilization; but they were still a barbarous people, and retained many practices that belong only to savages. They had, however, a good many cities, and these were defended by strong walls.

CHAPTER CVI.—1. What was the ancient name of France? Of the people? What did they do under Brennus?

3. When Cæsar entered the country, he found the Gauls sorely pressed by some of the German tribes. At first, he affected to be the deliverer of the Gauls from these troublesome enemies.

4. But the people soon discovered that Cæsar's real design was to conquer them. They then began to resist, and for nine long years they fought Cæsar and his armies with admirable skill and spirit. But the Romans were better versed in the art of war than their enemies. Their soldiers were better trained, and their implements of war were superior to those of the Gauls.

5. Notwithstanding all this, so brave and obstinate were the Gauls in the defence of their country, that it required all the genius of Julius Cæsar, one of the greatest leaders that ever lived, aided by the immense power of Rome, to subdue them.

2. Under whom did they invade Greece? What of them in the time of Julius Cæsar? What of their cities? 3. What did Cæsar find on entering the country? 4. What did the people soon discover? What did they do? What of the Romans? 5. What of the Gauls? What was required to subdue them?

6. Cæsar was occupied no less than nine years in conquering the Gauls, and it is supposed that a million of men were slain in the bloody struggle. From the time of Cæsar's conquest, about 50 years B. C., Gaul was a Roman province, and the people gradually adopted the manners and customs of the Romans. Even their language became changed, and assumed a resemblance to the Latin. But between the third and fourth century, the Franks, a German tribe whom I have mentioned, got possession of the greater part of Gaul.

7. It is said that the Franks who first established themselves in Gaul were led by Pharamond. He died in 428, and was succeeded by his son Clodian, who was celebrated for the beauty of his hair. Clodian died in 448, and was succeeded by Merovius; Merovius died in 458, and was succeeded by Childeric. Very little is known of these kings, except the last.

6. What was the consequence of this struggle between the Gauls and Romans? What of Gaul from this time? What of the Franks? 7. Pharamond? Clodian? Merovius? What of these kings?

About Clovis and little King Pepin.

1. CHILDERIC is considered the founder of the French monarchy. He was succeeded by his son Clovis. When Clovis was only nineteen years old, he drove the Romans out of France. He afterward gained a great victory over the Germans.

2. As Clovis had married a Christian princess, he attributed his success to the God whom she worshipped. He therefore determined to become a Christian himself, and he was baptized, with three thousand of his subjects, on Christmas day, in the year 496. After the death of Clovis, France was divided among several petty kings. They quarrelled among themselves, and caused great trouble to the nation. The wife of one of them was accused of murdering ten kings, or children of kings.

3. Little king Pepin, otherwise called Pepin the Short, thrust all the other kings from their thrones, and made himself sole ruler of France. He was a very small man, being only four feet and a half high; but he had a mighty spirit in that little body.

4. Moreover, he had an enormous deal of strength. Knowing that some of his courtiers made fun of his little size, he resolved to show them that there was as much manhood in him as there could possibly be in a giant. He therefore invited them to see a fight between a lion and a bull.

5. The lion gave a tremendous roar, and leaped upon the bull's back, sticking his claws deep into the flesh. The bull also roared with pain and terror, as well he might. Then little king Pepin stood on tiptoe on his throne, to make himself as tall as he could; and he roared out to his courtiers, full as loud as either the bull or the lion:

6. "Which of you all," cried he, "will make the lion let go his hold?" The courtiers all stood silent and abashed; for they had no notion of venturing within reach of the lion's claws. "Then I'll do it myself!" said king Pepin the Short. So the valiant little king leaped down from his throne, and drew a sword almost as long as himself. Brandishing it in the air, he ran up to the lion, who was still clinging to the mad bull's back.

3, 4. Describe the little king Pepin. What did he invite his people to see? 5-7. Relate king Pepin's encounter with the lion.

7. When the lion beheld this terrible small champion, he opened his enormous jaws, as if he meant to snap him up at a single mouthful. But little king Pepin dealt him a blow with his sword, and hit him square upon the neck.

8. Down fell the lion's head on one side of the bull, and down fell his body on the other! And from that time forward, the courtiers would sooner have taken a roaring lion by the mane, than have laughed at little king Pepin.

8. How did his bravery affect his courtiers?

CHARLEMAGNE.

The reign of Charlemagne.

1. KING Pepin the Little had a son who was called Charlemagne, or Charles the Great. The epithet was given him because he was a mighty king and conqueror, but he also deserved it on account of his height, which was not an inch less than seven feet.

2. Charlemagne used to wear a sheepskin cloak. Whenever he saw his courtiers richly dressed, he invited them to go a-hunting with him. Charlemagne took care to lead the way through all the thorns and bushes he could find, on purpose that his courtiers might tear their fine clothes in following him.

3. This king was continually at war. He subjugated the Saxons, and other tribes who lived in Germany. He likewise made conquests in Spain and Italy. At length, ruling over France, Germany, and other countries, he wished for the title of Emperor of the West.

4. Accordingly, he went to Rome, and knelt down at the high altar of the church as if to say his prayers. There was a large congregation in the church, and they were much edified by the devout behavior of Charlemagne. But while he was kneeling, the pope stole softly behind him, and placed the Imperial crown upon his head.

5. This was the crown which all the old emperors of Rome had worn, and when the people beheld it on the head of Charlemagne, they shouted "Long live the emperor!" Charlemagne pretended to be surprised and angry; but he took care to keep the imperial crown upon his head.

6. Charlemagne died in the year 814, when he was quite an old man. While he was alive, as I have mentioned, he wore a sheepskin cloak. But after he was dead, his attendants dressed him in robes of imperial purple.

7. They placed a throne of gold in his sepulchre, and set the dead body of the gray-bearded old emperor upon it. A sword was girded about his waist. He had a golden crown upon his head, a golden sceptre and shield at his feet, a golden chalice in his hand, and a Bible upon his knees.

8. Over the sepulchre, there was a magnificent triumphal arch, with an inscription to the memory of the mighty Charlemagne. And having wasted all this splendor upon the senseless corpse, the attendants shut up the tomb, and went to pay their court to Charlemagne's successor.

9. This was his son, entitled Louis the Mild. I know not wherefore he was called the Mild, for one of the acts of his reign was to put out the eyes of another king, whom he had taken prisoner. When Louis died, he left his dominions to his three sons. They immediately went to war with each other. It is said that a hundred thousand men were slain in one of their battles.

6. When did Charlemagne die? 7. How was his body dressed for his burial?
8. What was put over the sepulchre? 9. Who was Louis the Mild? What of him? What of his three sons?

10. Some of the succeeding kings of France were Charles the Bald, Louis the Stammerer, Charles the Fat, Charles the Simple, Louis the Foreigner, and Hugh Capet. These sovereigns performed no actions that need be recorded in my book.

CHAPTER CIX.—EUROPE CONTINUED.

About the Crusades, or Holy Wars.

1. I MUST now give you some account of the Crusades, or Holy Wars, undertaken by the European nations for the recovery of Jerusalem, which was in the hands of the Turks. The Christians had a great reverence for this city, for here Christ preached, here he performed many miracles, and here he was buried.

10. Who were some of the succeeding kings of France?

CHAPTER CIX.—1. What were the crusades? Why were they undertaken? Why did the Christians reverence Jerusalem?

2. On account of the pious reverence entertained for what they called the Holy City, many Christian pilgrims went on foot to visit it. It was very common for the Roman Catholic priests to impose this pilgrimage on persons who had committed some sin, and they were made to believe that in this way alone they could receive pardon of God.

3. Now the pilgrims to Jerusalem were often treated with cruelty and scorn by the Turks who held possession of Jerusalem and the country around it. The pilgrims returned to Europe, and gave an account of the treatment they received. This excited the indignation of the Christians, and they were easily induced to unite in a great effort for taking the Holy Land from the infidel Turks.

4. The pope of Rome at this time had vast influence, and he wished to acquire more. When this project was proposed, therefore, he gave it his sanction, thinking that he should extend his dominion over Palestine, if the country should be taken.

2. What of pilgrimages to Jerusalem? 3. How were the pilgrims treated? What did they do? What was the consequence of their representations? 4. What of the pope of Rome?

5. Peter the Hermit was the principal agent in exciting the people to the first crusade. He was a half-starved monk, and went about bareheaded, with a rope round his waist, and wearing a garment of coarse cloth. This was so short that it barely covered his body, leaving his arms and legs naked.

6. It might seem that such a scarecrow as this would rather have excited ridicule than reverence. But Peter had been in Palestine, and had experienced the insults of the Turks. He therefore spoke of things he had seen, and the people listened with a willing sympathy.

7. Thus Peter went from city to city, and everywhere crowds came to hear him. There was soon such a state of excitement, that the princes assembled, and armies were speedily gathered for the enterprise. Thus in the year 1096, Peter set out with two hundred thousand men at his heels. He carried a ponderous cross upon his shoulders, and his followers wore crosses of red cloth sewed upon their clothes.

8. But scarcely had this army landed in Asia, when sultan Solyman attacked them, and made a terrible slaughter. As a trophy of his victory over the poor first crusade. And all this slaughter took place before they had even come in sight of Jerusalem.

10. There was another army, however, belonging to the first crusade, that had better success. This consisted of eighty thousand men, and was led by a French prince called Godfrey of Boulogne. He proceeded through Asia Minor, took several cities, and captured Jerusalem in 1099. From this period till the year 1187, the Holy City remained in the hands of the Christians, when it was again captured by the Turks, in whose hands it has since remained.

11. No less than five other crusades took place, the last being commenced in 1248. This, like most of the others, proved unsuccessful. The whole number of men who lost their lives in these wild expeditions, was not less than two millions.

12. It appears that many of the crusaders were good men, and some, perhaps, were wise ones. Several of the leaders were brave knights, and they went forth clad in bright steel armor, and mounted upon fine horses. But a large portion of the armies were of a different character. Some were half crazy people filled with religious zeal, and a larger portion were thieves and robbers, who joined the expeditions that they might share in the plunder of cities that should be taken.

13. But although the motives of many of the crusaders were selfish, though the great object of these expeditions was not very important, and though much slaughter and bloodshed flowed from them; still the half barbarous inhabitants of Europe brought from the East many arts that tended to refine and civilize the people. In this, and other ways, the crusades produced some good results.

CHAPTER CX.—EUROPE CONTINUED.

About the Feudal System.

1. I SUPPOSE you think it is now time to proceed with the history of France; but do not be impatient. -It is not right for one who undertakes to tell the history of mankind, to speak only of kings and the great battles which they fight. We must not forget to consider how the people lived, and what they were about while their rulers were thus engaged.

CHAPTER CX.—1. What must not be forgotten?

2. I trust you will therefore excuse me for talking a little about the Feudal System, Chivalry, and a few other big words, which it is proper that you should understand. I have told you that the northern tribes of Europe were fond of war, and of a restless, roving character. War was indeed the chief business of the men. A few of them were engaged in agriculture, but a large portion of them led the lives of soldiers, either wholly, or at such times as their services were required.

3. A few were devoted to the building of houses, to the manufacture of armor, and such other articles as the simple manners of the people rendered necessary. But even these artisans occasionally bore arms, and went with their countrymen to the field of battle if they were needed.

4. But, as I have said before, the great business of society in these times was war, either for defence against the attacks of other tribes, or for the purpose of conquering other tribes. The chiefs, or leaders, were generally the bravest and strongest men, those who would be most likely in a battle of hard blows to carry off the victory.

5. When a country was conquered, the lands, towns, cities, gold, silver, merchandise, horses, cattle, and all other property belonging to the conquered people, were considered the spoils of the victors. The people who were defeated were either killed, driven away, or reduced to a state of servitude.

6. Strange as it may seem, this making of war and robbing people of their lands and possessions, was not only considered lawful, but it was reckoned grand sport. It is true that the soldiers had often hard fare and hard knocks; occasionally they were wounded and many of them were slain. But when the battle was over, those who survived celebrated their victory with feasting and drinking, and other amusements suited to the tastes of barbarous men.

7. It frequently happened that some person in the camp had a great talent for singing and story-telling; he therefore would be often called upon to exercise his gift. So he would amuse the company with wild legends of the chase, in which a king or prince had a terrible battle with a fierce boar or a rough bear.

8. Or he would tell of some chief who had performed wonderful deeds; or perhaps he would weave some superstitious tale of ghosts that walked abroad by moonlight, or of some murdered prince whose spirit often came at night to haunt the castle where he once dwelt.

9. Such were some of the amusements which repaid these barbarians for the toils of war. But these were by no means all. The real object of most of the wars among these people was plunder. War took the place of trade and commerce among them, and the principal inducement to carry it on was to obtain the lands and the goods of other nations. It was, in short, a system of plunder, and the several tribes might be considered as so many bands of robbers.

10. When a nation was conquered, the spoils were distributed among the victors according to their rank. The king, or chief, had a large share, the inferior chiefs had a smaller share, and the common soldiers had still less. The lands were divided in this way, but it was always understood that those who received the land were afterward bound to go and fight whenever called upon by their chiefs.

11. The king or baron built upon his land an im-huts. They tilled the land, taking what was necessary for their own support, but giving the best of every thing to their liege lord.

12. Now what is meant by the feudal system is this: that the vassals of a baron who lived upon his land were bound to do military service whenever the baron required it. So also the barons, under the feudal system, were required to do military service, bringing into the field all the men they could muster, whenever their king required it.

11. What of a king or baron? The people or vassals? 12. What was the feudal system? What were the vassals required to do?

13. In return for these services, the lord of the manor, or owner of the land, was expected to protect his people in time of war, and as the castle was usually large and strong, the people fled to it whenever an enemy appeared in sight.

14. Here in the castle they would make the best defence in their power. Sometimes they would be besieged for months; but so long as the wines lasted, and the stores of provisions held out, the besieged inmates of the castle would hold their revels, tell their stories, and sing their songs.

About Chivalry, or Knight-Errantry.

1. If you will reflect a moment you will perceive that Europe at this time was divided among a great number of warlike tribes or nations, each tribe having a king, each king having under him several powerful barons, and each baron having a good many vassals.

2. You will remember that the kings and barons dwelt in strong stone castles, and if you should ever go to Europe, you will see many of these still in existence, some of which were built more than a thousand years ago. Most of them are in ruins, but they are interesting on account of the tales and legends of the olden times which are connected with them.

3. It is not certain when the feudal system commenced, but it appears to have been first in use among the German tribes, and was introduced into France by the Franks, who entered that country 420 B. C., and who laid the foundation of the French monarchy about 486 years after Christ. It continued in full force in the time of Charlemagne, and, for some centuries after, it formed the basis of all the political systems of Europe.

4. Now I must tell you that among the rough kings and barons of the feudal times, it often happened that private acts of violence and injustice took place. Sometimes a powerful baron would come suddenly upon a weaker one, seize his castle, and either murder him or shut him up in a dungeon. Sometimes one of these barons would carry off the beautiful daughter of another king or baron, and take her home to his castle.

5. Even in these rude times, such things were considered wrong, and sometimes a brave warrior, called a knight, would take it upon himself to redress these grievances. He would perhaps go and challenge the baron who had been guilty of injustice, to come out and fight with him, or in some other way would endeavor to repair the injury done.

6. The people applauded these knights, and cheered them on to acts of daring, in the cause of justice and benevolence. Thus, by degrees, their numbers increased, and about the time of the crusades, there appear to have been a good many of them.

7. The crusades themselves served to establish knight-errantry as a regular profession, and from the year 1100 after Christ, we may consider it as one of the most remarkable institutions in Europe.

8. When knight-errantry, or chivalry, had become thus established, those who belonged to the profession were considered as under a religious vow to devote themselves to the cause of justice and humanity. If any person had suffered an act of injustice, they considered themselves bound to set the matter right. If any person was in distress, they were under obligation to peril their lives for his relief.

5. How were such things considered? What would a knight sometimes do? 6. What of the people? Knights? 7. What of the crusades? When did knight-errantry become a regular profession? 8. What of those who belonged to the profession?

9. Besides this, the knights were required always to tell the truth, and always to perform their promises; they were expected to be full of generosity and courage, and never to be guilty of any act of meanness. They were, in short, expected to devote themselves to the cause of humanity, and remedy, as far as was in their power, the injustice and violence which belonged to the age in which they lived.

10. Many of these knights spent their whole time in riding about the country in search of adventures. These were called knights-errant. If, in the course of their travels, they heard of anybody in distress, they would offer their services for relief.

11. They were particularly devoted to the cause of ladies who had been stolen away, and shut up in castles. In behalf of these, they often performed wonderful feats of strength and valor. Sometimes, it is true, the knights acted wickedly, but in so doing they violated their vows.

A TOURNAMENT.

More about Chivalry.

1. If one knight-errant chanced to meet another, they usually went to fighting, either for sport or renown. Some of them acquired great fame, and a multitude of songs and ballads were composed in celebration of their deeds.

2. The knights were very particular to ride fine, strong horses. Some of these are almost as famous in the legends of chivalry as their riders. The knight was powerfully armed, his chief weapon being a long, pointed lance. Besides this, he had a sword, dagger, battle-axe, and mace, which was a heavy sort of club.

3. In addition to these weapons for attack, he had a defensive armor, consisting of a shield of metal, a helmet of steel with a vizor to cover his face, a body harness made of plates of steel, and sometimes a shirt of mail consisting of a multitude of iron links, the whole fitting close to the body.

4. The horse, also, was carefully defended by mail or steel plates. His head, chest, and sides were usually covered, and sometimes the whole body was shielded by glittering steel. Nothing, indeed, could exceed the care and preparation usually bestowed by the knights in training their horses, in selecting their armor, in having it carefully fitted, and in keeping it bright.

5. A knight was always attended by a squire, and sometimes by several squires. These waited upon their masters, and were considered as learning to become knights themselves. As the institution of chivalry advanced, it became a matter of honor to be a knight, and therefore most kings, princes, and military leaders took upon themselves the vows of knighthood. The celebrated leaders of the crusades, Richard of England, Godfrey of France, and others, were knights.

6. In after times, there were several orders of knights; those of each order taking upon themselves peculiar vows. Such were the Knights of St. John of Jerusalem, the Knights of Malta, the Knights of the Cross, Knights Templars, etc.

7. When society had become somewhat more civilized, it was the custom in different parts of Europe to have tilts and tournaments. These were occasions of great ceremony, and multitudes of people collected together to witness them. They were often splendid beyond description. Kings, princes, and fair ladies delighted in these exhibitions.

8. They consisted of encounters between celebrated knights, clad in complete armor. They took place in some open plain, surrounded with tents and pavilions filled with spectators. The victorious knights were honored with applause from the people, and with marks of favor even from kings and queens.

9. Such was the institution of chivalry. If I had time, I could fill a book with stories of knights. A multitude of tales called romances were written in the age of chivalry. These recounted the deeds, or pretended deeds, of celebrated champions. Some of them are very amusing, but they are nearly all filled with incredible fables.

10. Chivalry was at its height from the year 1200 to about 1400. From this latter period it rapidly declined, and in the time of Elizabeth of England, that is, about 1600, it had ceased. If there were a few tilts and tournaments after this, they were only as relics of an age that had passed.

9. What of romances? 10. When was chivalry at its height? What of it after 1400? When did it cease?

CHAPTER CXIII.—1. When did Philip the Fair begin to reign? What of him?

Fair, who began to reign in 1285. He possessed great personal beauty, but had many bad qualities of mind and heart. The most remarkable event of his reign was a great quarrel with pope Boniface.

2. This potentate was one of the haughtiest popes that ever wore a triple crown. He spoke to the sovereigns of Europe as if he were sovereign of them all, and king of kings. But Philip the Fair refused to acknowledge his authority. Pope Boniface excommunicated king Philip for his disobedience, and king Philip called pope Boniface all the bad names he could think of.

3. One day, some of Philip's friends took pope Boniface prisoner. They put him on a horse, without saddle or bridle, and made him ride with his face toward the horse's tail. Nobody could help laughing to see what a ridiculous figure was cut by his Holiness. But as for poor pope Boniface, he took the joke so much to heart, that, together with the loss of his treasures, it actually killed him. Philip the Fair survived him several years.

4. The French have always been a warlike people. They have been so often at war with England, that Frenchmen and Englishmen think themselves born to be each other's enemies.

5. On the death of Charles the Fourth, in 1328, Philip of Valois became king of France. But Edward the Third, king of England, asserted that he himself was the rightful king of France, because his mother was the daughter of Philip the Fair. He undertook to enforce his claim by invading France with an English army.

6. King Edward challenged Philip of Valois to fight him in single combat; but Philip preferred to meet him with an army. At the bloody battle of Cressy, in France, in 1346, the French lost the bravest of their nobles, and thirty thousand men.

7. In 1350, John the Good, son of Philip of Valois, succeeded to the throne of France. The country was invaded by an English army under the eldest son of Edward the Third. He was called the Black Prince, on account of the color of his armor.

8. King John of France, with sixty thousand men, encountered the Black Prince of England near Poitiers. The Black Prince had only eight thousand soldiers. But the English archers and cross-bow men let fly their arrows at the French, and made a dreadful havoc among them. King John was taken and kept prisoner four years in London.

9. John the Good was succeeded by his son, Charles the Wise. King Edward of England had now grown old, and his son, the brave Black Prince, was dead. The French, therefore, got back all the territories which the English had won of them, except the town of Calais.

10. But when Charles the Well-beloved was king of France, the English renewed the war. Henry the Fifth, then king of England, invaded France. At the battle of Agincourt he had but fifteen thousand men, while the French had nearly a hundred thousand.

11. Yet the English gained a glorious victory, with the loss of only forty men. On the side of the French, there were seven princes, the high constable of France, and ten thousand gentlemen killed, besides many prisoners. In 1420, the English king entered Paris in triumph.

8. Who encountered the Black Prince? Describe the battle of Poitiers. 9. Who succeeded John the Good? Why were the French able to win back their territories from the English? 10. Who was the next king of France? What battle was fought with Henry V.? 11. Which side won the victory? What was the loss of the French? What took place in 1420?

12. But Henry, king of England, died soon afterward; and then the French began to beat the English. The chief leader of the French at this time was a girl of eighteen, named Joan of Arc, or the Maid of Orleans. She was very beautiful. The French believed that Heaven had sent her to rescue their country from the English invaders. The English believed her to be a witch, and that the evil one assisted her in fighting against them.

13. For a considerable time, it was found impossible to withstand holy Joan, the Maid of Orleans. She was clad in bright steel armor, and rode in front of the French army on a snow-white horse. In her hand she carried a consecrated banner, on which was painted the image of our Saviour. But, at last, she was wounded and taken prisoner. The English condemned her to be burnt alive for witchcraft.

14. She was accordingly bound to a stake, in the market-place of Rouen. The English army looked on, rejoicing, while the flames roared and whirled around her. When the fire had burnt out, there remained nothing but ashes and whitened bones, of the valiant Maid of Orleans.

12. What happened after the death of Henry V.? Describe the Maid of Orleans. What did the French and English think of her? 13. How did she appear at the head of the army? 14. What was her sad fate?

The Reigns of several French Kings.

1. BUT, though the Maid of Orleans was no longer their captain, the French were still successful. The English lost nearly all that Henry the Fifth had won. The French monarch was called Charles the Victorious, on account of his many triumphs.

2. Yet he was an unhappy king. His son hated him, and attempted to kill him by poison. After the discovery of this plot, the poor old king was afraid to take food enough to support life, lest he should take poison with it. So he wasted away, and died miserably.

3. His son, Louis the Eleventh, succeeded him in 1461. He was a crafty, treacherous, and cruel king. Once, when a nobleman was to be beheaded, Louis ordered his infant children to be placed under the scaffold, that they might be sprinkled with their father's blood.

4. One of the most famous of the French kings was Francis the First, who ascended the throne in 1515.

CHAPTER CXIV.—1. What of the French people? The English? The French king? 2. What of Charles the victorious? 3. What of Louis XI.?

He fought against the Swiss, and against the emperor of Germany; but the emperor took him prisoner at the battle of Pavia.

5. There was no war with England during the reign of Francis the First; but he once held an interview with the English king, near Calais. So much magnificence was displayed on both sides, that the place of meeting was called the Field of the Cloth of Gold.

6. In 1560, Charles the Ninth became king of France. He was then a boy ten years old. His reign was disgraced by one of the bloodiest scenes in history. It is called the Massacre of St. Bartholomew.

7. The Catholics (those who were attached to the pope of Rome) had conspired to murder all the Protestants (those who did not like the pope) throughout France. On the night of St. Bartholomew's day, their wicked project was put in execution. Some writers affirm that a hundred thousand Protestants were murdered.

8. The king himself sat at one of his palace windows, with a musket in his hand, and shot some of the poor wretches. But he was soon called to receive the recompense of his crimes. After the massacre, he was afflicted with disease, and died in 1574.

9. The next king but one was Henry the Fourth, who ascended the throne in 1589. He was a good king, a brave warrior, and a generous man. His subjects loved him, and the French have always been proud of Henry the Fourth.

10. Yet the affection of his people could not save his life. One day he was riding through the streets of Paris in his coach. Several courtiers were with him. Other vehicles were in the way, so that the coachman was compelled to stop the horses. The king chose to alight.

11. There was a man near the coach, named Ravail-lac. He was waiting for a chance to kill the king; and now, seeing him about to get out of the coach, he drew a poniard. All the power of France could not now be of any avail. The first blow of the poniard wounded the king, and the second killed him.

The Reigns of Louis the Grand and his Successor.

1 THE murdered Henry was succeeded by his son, Louis the Thirteenth. The government was chiefly directed by cardinal Richelieu, an ambitious priest. He grew more powerful than the king himself.

2. The next king was Louis the Fourteenth, whom the French call Louis the Grand. He was a very proud and haughty monarch. He endeavored to make France the greatest country on earth; not that he really cared for the welfare of his subjects, but because he wished to exalt himself above all other kings.

3. He had a peculiar manner of walking, which would have been ridiculous in a common man, but was thought extremely majestic in a king. He used to wear a large curled wig, and nobody ever saw him without it. He would never pull off his wig till he had got into bed and closed the curtains.

4. This king began to reign when five years old, and reigned no less than seventy-two years. He was continually at war. In the early part of his reign, his armies achieved many splendid victories.

5. But, in the king's old age, the English duke of Marlborough wasted his troops, and reduced his kingdom to great distress. The French people now grew weary of their grand monarch.

6. And well they might be weary of him, for he had taken all their money, in order that he might have the means of going to war. He seemed to think it more necessary that he should have glory, than that they should have bread.

7. At last, in 1715, the old king died. As he had been so grand in his life-time, his courtiers deemed it proper that he should carry as much grandeur with him to the tomb as possible. They therefore prepared a magnificent funeral.

3. What can you say of Louis the Grand? 4. What of his wars? 5. What of the duke of Marlborough? 6. What of the French people? 7. When did Louis the Grand die?

8. But wherever the procession passed, the people heaped curses on the royal corpse. They hissed so loudly, that, if the king had not been stone dead, he would have started up in his coffin. Thus ended the glorious reign of Louis the Grand.

9. All the sons and grandsons of old Louis the Grand had died before him. He was therefore succeeded by his great-grandson, a child five years old, who now became Louis the Fifteenth.

10. Until the little king should become of age to take the sceptre into his own hands, the duke of Orleans was declared regent of France. He was a profligate man. Instead of teaching the young king how to make his subjects prosperous and happy, he set him an example of all sorts of wickedness.

11. And Louis the Fifteenth turned out just such a king as might have been expected. In his whole reign of fifty-nine years, he seems to have thought of nothing but his own selfish pleasures.

12. His kingdom was almost ruined, and his subjects were starving. But if an earthquake had swallowed France and all its inhabitants, the king would hardly have cared. The reign of this odious monarch prepared the French to hate the very name of monarch. He died in 1774, and was succeeded by his grandson, Louis the Sixteenth, who was then a young man of twenty.

13. Thus, by the extravagance of Louis XIV., and the profligacy of Louis XV., a foundation was laid for what is called the French Revolution, of which I shall tell you in the next chapter.

14. I should be very glad to pass by the story of that awful period, for I know it can give my reader no pleasure to read of violence and bloodshed. But it is necessary to read the dark as well as the bright pages of history.

15. We may learn from the French Revolution how much evil may be brought upon a country by bad rulers, and as some of my young pupils will hereafter be men, and be called upon to assist in choosing rulers, they may be made to feel the duty of choosing good ones.

12. When did he die? 13. What event followed these two reigns? 15 What may we learn from the French Revolution?

LOUIS XVI. AND MARIE ANTOINETTE.

The French Revolution.

1. Louis the Sixteenth had no talents which could render him fit to govern a nation. But he was a man of good heart, kind disposition, and upright intentions. With all his defects, there has seldom been a better king; for, if he was unable to do good, he was unwilling to do harm.

2. The king was married to an Austrian arch-duchess, named Marie Antoinette. She had great beauty and accomplishments; but she was never a favorite of the French people.

3. Not long after this king and queen were crowned, the American Revolution broke out. The United States declared themselves a free and independent republic. The people of France took a great interest in the affairs of America; and they began to think that a republic was a better kind of government than a monarchy.

4. They compared the tyranny under which they and their forefathers had groaned for ages, with the freedom which made the Americans so prosperous and happy. The more they reflected upon the subject, the more discontented they became with their own condition.

5. The French are a people whose minds are easily excited, and whenever any thing remarkable is going on among them, you would think that the whole nation was almost mad, or perhaps had been drinking too much wine. So it happened in this case. They now began to rave against the king, queen, and nobles, the priests, the gentlemen, and all others whom they had formerly respected. They even blasphemed against Heaven itself.

3. When did the American Revolution begin? 4. What of the French people?
5. How do the French appear when any thing remarkable is going on?

6. In 1789, the mob of Paris tore down the Bastile. This was an old castle, where the kings of France had been accustomed to confine such of their subjects as offended them. Many a poor wretch had been thrown into the dungeons of the Bastile, and never again beheld the sunshine.

7. The destruction of the Bastile was a good thing; and so, likewise, were many other of the first movements of the French Revolution. But when the people had once begun to change their ancient government, they knew not where to stop.

8. It was not long before blood began to flow. No man or woman in the kingdom was now safe, unless they wore a red cap upon their heads, which was called the cap of liberty.

9. At this period it was no uncommon thing to see a mob of men and women in the streets of Paris, carrying a bloody head upon a pole. And those who looked at the features would perhaps recognize the countenance of some great nobleman or beautiful princess.

10. In a little while longer there were so many heads to be cut off, that the work could not be done fast enough in the ordinary way. It was therefore necessary to do it by machinery; and a horrible instrument, called the guillotine, was invented for the purpose.

11. This infernal contrivance was set to work upon the proud nobles, and the holy priesthood, and the beautiful ladies of France. Hundreds of their heads fell upon the pavement of Paris, and their blood ran like a river through the streets.

12. When many of the loftiest heads in the kingdom had been cut off, the people fixed their eyes on the head that wore a crown. "Off with the king's head too!" cried they. So they dragged the poor harmless king before the national convention, and he was forthwith sentenced to the guillotine.

13. As the poor king mounted the steps of the scaffold, he gazed round at the fierce and cruel multitude. It seemed all like a dream, that they, his born subjects, should be waiting there to see him die. Then he looked at the guillotine, and beheld it stained with the blood of the thousand victims who had been dragged thither before him.

14. He could not yet believe that his royal blood was no longer precious to his people. He lingered—he was loth to lay down his head—he shivered with the agony of his spirit. There stood a holy priest beside him on the scaffold. Other priests, in those dreadful times, had abjured their God; but here was one who held fast his faith. Other subjects had betrayed their king, but here was one who revered him most upon the scaffold.

15. He whispered consolation to the unhappy king, and pointed heavenward. The victim mustered his fainting courage, and laid his head upon the block. “Son of Saint Louis,” said the priest, “ascend to heaven!”

16. Down came the axe of the guillotine, and the head that had worn a crown was severed from the body! The blood of a kingly race gushed out upon the scaffold. Thus the crimes and misused power of many kings had brought vengeance on their innocent descendant.

The Rise of Napoleon Bonaparte.

1. THE day of the king's execution was the 21st of January, 1793. Not many months afterward, the queen was likewise beheaded. France was now ruled by a succession of bloody monsters, who, one day, were sending crowds to the guillotine, and, the next day, were sent thither themselves. This anarchy was what the French called a Republic.

2. In the mean time, war was breaking out on all sides. Austria, Prussia, England, Holland, Spain, and Russia, sent armies against France. The French raised a million of men, and bade defiance to all Europe.

3. In the French army, there was a young lieutenant of artillery, named Napoleon Bonaparte. When the war began, he was an unknown and friendless youth. But he distinguished himself in every battle and every siege, till, in a very few years, the whole world had heard of Bonaparte.

4. When he was only twenty-six years old, he conquered Italy. The next year he compelled the emperor of Austria to make peace. In 1798, he invaded Egypt, and fought many battles in the sandy deserts, and among the pyramids.

5. The French were now tired of being governed by men whose only engine of government was the guillotine. They wanted a ruler who would deserve their obedience by his sagacity and energy, and not merely compel them to obedience by the fear of having their heads cut off.

6. Napoleon Bonaparte was such a man. He was not a good man, nor a truly wise one. He was a selfish and ambitious despot. But perhaps he was a more suitable ruler for such a people as the French than if he had been a different man.

7. He saw that the French were now so excited that it would be difficult, perhaps impossible, to restrain them. He thought it better that they should make war on foreigners than slaughter each other, and with the sword, rather than with the guillotine. So, partly because he could not help it, but chiefly because he was ambitious, Napoleon Bonaparte became a mighty conqueror.

The Fall of Bonaparte.

1. IN 1802, Bonaparte was elected consul of the French republic for life. Two years afterward, he was proclaimed emperor, by the name of Napoleon. He had now more power than any of the ancient kings.

all over Europe, nor even number the victories which he won. Wherever he went, monarchs humbled themselves before him. He drove them from their thrones, and placed his own brothers and chief officers there instead. He gave away royal diadems for playthings. He was called the Man of Destiny, because fate seemed to have ordained that he should always be victorious.

3. But, in 1812, the spell of his success began to be broken. He invaded Russia with a vast army, and penetrated to the city of Moscow. The Russians set the city on fire. Winter was coming on, and the French soldiers had nowhere to shelter themselves.

4. They retreated toward Poland. On their way thither, they fought many battles with the Russians, and the weather was so bitter cold, that the snow was crimsoned with their blood, and the bodies of the slain were frozen stiff.

5. Before they reached the frontiers of Poland, three-fourths of the army were destroyed. The emperor Napoleon fled homeward in a sledge, and returned to Paris. He soon raised new armies, and was ready to take the field again.

6. But all the nations of Europe were now allied against him, and, after a few more battles, he was driven from Germany into France. The enemy followed him. They compelled him to surrender the imperial crown of France in exchange for the sovereignty of the little island of Elba, in the Mediterranean.

7. Napoleon went to Elba, and remained there almost a year. But in March, 1815, he suddenly landed again on the French coast. He was almost alone when he set his foot on the shore. But there were a multitude of his grim old veterans throughout the country. These shouted for joy, and trampled on the white flag of the Bourbon kings, who had succeeded him. In a few days, Napoleon's banner again waved triumphant all over France.

8. The nations of Europe now mustered their armies once more. They were led by the English duke of Wellington. Napoleon marched into Flanders, or Belgium, to meet them. He was followed by almost every young Frenchman that could shoulder a musket.

9. The emperor Napoleon's last battle was fought at Waterloo, on the 18th of June, 1815. There he was utterly overthrown, and France was overthrown with him. The warlike emperor was sent to die on the island of St. Helena, and the Bourbon king was again established on the throne of Louis the Sixteenth.

CHAPTER CXIX.—EUROPE CONTINUED.

Later Revolutions in France.—Napoleon III.

1. Louis the Eighteenth, the new king of France, was a fat, quiet, respectable sort of old gentleman, and seems to have been chiefly distinguished for his love of oysters. He died in 1824, and was succeeded by his brother, Charles the Tenth.

2. It was said of all the Bourbon family, that they had learnt nothing during their exile from France, nor forgotten any thing. And Charles soon proved that he had not forgotten that his ancestors had exercised absolute power, nor learnt that such power is very dangerous to possess or exercise.

3. In 1830, when Charles the Tenth had sat on the throne about six years, he forbade the printing of any newspapers, except such as praised his conduct and government.

4. The mob of Paris immediately rose, and began a war against the royal troops. They beat out the brains of the king's soldiers with paving-stones, and shot them from the windows of the houses. The old king, who had not forgotten the days of the Revolution, began to tremble for his head.

5. In order to keep it on his shoulders, he took off his golden crown, and put it on the head of his grandson. But the French would not acknowledge the little fellow for their king. They raised large armies, and drove Charles X. and family out of the kingdom.

6. They then asked the good and glorious Lafayette (the man who came and fought with our countrymen in the time of the Revolution) what sort of a government they should have. He would have chosen a republic, like our own; but he knew that his countrymen were not like us.

7. He therefore told them that the government must be a limited monarchy, and that Louis Phillippe, the duke of Orleans, must be their king. Louis Phillippe was accordingly raised to the throne, not as king of France, but as king of the French ; his title implying that the country did not belong to him, but to the people.

8. During his reign, France had no foreign wars, except one with the Arabs in Algeria. Manufactures, agriculture, and commerce increased to a great extent. But, by-and-by, the king made himself unpopular by increasing the army, by muzzling the press, and by preventing the people from holding public meetings.

9. So, in February, 1848, the people rose against him, and on the third day, drove him out of France. They then had a provisional government, and in December, made Louis Napoleon Bonaparte, a nephew of Napoleon, president of the new republic.

10. Louis Napoleon took a solemn oath that he would maintain the republic, but, not long after, he broke his oath and overturned it; in 1852, he made himself emperor, with the title of Napoleon III. The next year, he married a Spanish lady, Eugenie Montijo.

11. Napoleon III. encouraged manufactures and commerce, increased the navy and greatly embellished Paris. The French army, during his reign, was engaged in some of the most destructive wars ever fought—with the Russians, the Austrians, the Mexicans, and finally with the Germans.

8. What of his reign ? How did he become unpopular ? 9. What happened in 1848 ? What followed ? Who was made president ? 10. What of Louis Napoleon's oath ? Did he keep it ? What happened in 1852 ?

12. This last war—1870—came about in the following way : Spain happened to want a king, and proposed to take a Prussian prince. The French were extremely angry at this, for they were jealous of Prussia, and did not want Spain to have a German king. So they made a great pothor, and as they thought they had a very fine army, they soon got into a war with Prussia and her allies.

13. Little did they think what the end of this war would be. During the next six months they lost nearly a hundred battles. The Germans took Napoleon III. prisoner, and captured armies of hundreds of thousands of men. They besieged Paris, and, early in 1871, took it. They then compelled France to pay one thousand millions of dollars damages, and to cede to Germany the territories of Alsatia and Lorraine, containing one and a half millions of inhabitants.

14. France declared itself a republic again in 1870, and Adolphe Thiers, a distinguished statesman, was chosen president. He was soon deposed, however, and Marshal McMahon, a soldier, was chosen to succeed him. The state of things in France at present (1874) must be described as very unsettled. Napoleon III. died in England in 1873.

SCENE IN GERMANY.

About Germany.

1. THE German Empire, as at present constituted, is made up of perhaps forty different states, once distinct, but united in 1871, as a consequence of the war with France. Prussia is the principal power of this confederation, and its king became the first German emperor, as William I.

2. Some of the principal states of Germany are Bavaria, Hanover, Saxony, Wirtemberg, Baden. They were nearly all governed by kings, or grand dukes, or princes of some sort. Even now these kings, etc., remain, but are in a manner dependent upon the emperor—a dependence with which some of them are not particularly well pleased.

3. There are a great many large towns and cities in Germany. Among these, the principal are Hamburg, which carries on a good deal of commerce with this country; Munich, which is a very splendid city; Carlsruhe, which has its streets arranged like the sticks of an open fan; Dresden, which is famous for the beautiful country around it; and Frankfort, which is encircled by a belt of fine gardens and public walks.

4. I could easily write a book about Germany, for it is full of curious and interesting things. In the cities, there are a great many churches in the Gothic style, which excite the wonder and admiration of a traveller, on account of their grandeur, and the skill with which many parts of them are carved.

5. In many of the towns there are very curious manufactures, particularly of musical boxes, toys for children, and clocks of all kinds. The Germans are very ingenious in these matters, and sometimes they make clocks so cunningly contrived, that at every hour a little bird will come out, flutter his wings, and sing a song, or perhaps tell you the time of day.

6. If you ever travel in Germany, you will find that the people are very fond of music. All the boys and girls are taught music as a part of their education. Most of them can play upon some instrument. The people are fond of learning languages, too, and a great many of them speak not only German, but also English and French. German is so difficult that English seems very easy to them.

7. In passing through Germany, you will often notice the ruins of castles, some of which were built a thousand or twelve hundred years ago. These belonged to the barons who occupied the country in the old feudal times, of which I have told you in the history of France.

About the Ancient Tribes of Germany, Charlemagne, &c.

1. IN ancient days, Germany, as I have told you, was inhabited by numerous tribes of barbarians. Among these were the Goths, Visigoths, Vandals, Suevi, Cimbri, Teutones, Heruli, Allemanni, and many others. As there was no Peter Parley among them to write their history in early times, we know little or nothing of them till two or three hundred years before Christ.

2. At this time they were numerous, but they were mere savages. They were clothed in the skins of wild beasts, and seemed to delight only in war and plunder. In the time of Cæsar, they were very powerful, but that famous conqueror marched against them, and after many bloody battles, reduced them to submission.

3. I have already told you that wherever the Romans extended their arms, they carried their arts. Thus the rude tribes of Germany became partially civilized; many of the people exchanged their skins of beasts for the Roman toga or gown. They also learnt how to make better weapons of war, how to build better houses, and how to live more comfortably.

4. But you remember that four or five hundred years after Cæsar, poor old Rome was tottering to decay. It was therefore unable to keep these restless tribes of CHAPTER CXXII.—1. How was Germany anciently inhabited? Mention some of the barbarian tribes. 2. What of them in ancient times? In the time of Cæsar? 3. What of the arts of the Romans? the north in subjection ; nay, Rome was now incapable even of defending herself.

5. The Germans soon discovered how matters stood. They saw that in Spain, Italy, and Greece, there were a great many rich cities, and pleasant towns, and fruitful valleys. They saw that in these countries the Romans had collected the wealth of the whole world, and these shrewd barbarians thought it would be a good speculation to go to these countries and live there.

6. They thought it would be much better to go and live in palaces and fine houses, and have a plenty of wine, and plenty of gold, silver, and jewels, than to live in their own less fruitful country, and earn their bread by toil, or by plundering each other.

7. Accordingly, some of them set out under their daring leaders, and marched into Italy. Others soon followed, and in the course of a few years, these hordes had settled like swarms of bees in all the southern countries of Europe.

8. But still many remained behind in Germany, and thus increased, so that in the time of Charlemagne they were numerous and powerful. But he conquered them, as I have said in the history of France. Thus,

5. What did the Germans soon discover ? 6. What did they think ? 7. What did some of them do ? What happened in a few years ? 8. What of the barbarians who remained in Germany ? What of Charlemagne and his empire ?

having made himself master of Germany, he became its emperor, and resided there. You will recollect that his empire included France, Germany, and other countries.

9. The empire of Germany, thus established, was, however, composed of many separate sovereignties, each of which had its own ruler. In the year 912, it became the custom for these rulers to make choice of one of their number, and declare him emperor. He then presided over the whole of Germany. Thus Germany was what is called an elective monarchy, and so it continued, even so late as the year 1806.

10. In 1056, Henry the Fourth was emperor. He had a sharp quarrel with pope Gregory the Seventh. The pope's power was so great, that he compelled the emperor to come to Italy to ask his pardon.

11. When Henry arrived at the gate of the pope's palace, the weather was exceedingly cold, and there was snow on the ground. Pope Gregory was sitting by a comfortable fire. He sent the emperor word that he would have nothing to say to him, till he had stood three whole days barefooted in the snow, without tasting a mouthful of food.

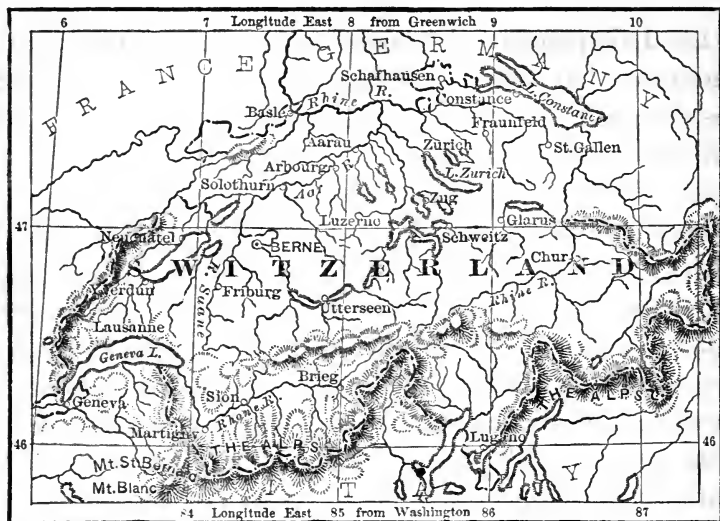

9. What of the sovereignties of Germany? What was the custom in 912? What of the emperor? What was the government of Germany? 10. When was Henry IV. emperor? What of the pope?

12. This penance the poor emperor was compelled to undergo. On the fourth day, pope Gregory gave him absolution for his sins, and allowed him to warm himself and eat his dinner.

13. Another emperor, also named Henry, who reigned about a hundred years afterward, quarrelled with pope Celestinus. In order to make peace, he was persuaded to kneel down and kiss the pope's toe. But no sooner had his lips touched the toe, than pope Celestinus drew back his foot, and gave the emperor's crown a kick, which sent it half-way across the room. This anecdote will give you some idea of the spirit and manners of these pretended successors of St. Peter.

14. In 1273, Rodolph of Hapsburgh, a native of Switzerland, was elected emperor of Germany. He was the ancestor of the present sovereigns of Austria. Most of the German emperors, since his reign, have been his descendants.

11, 12. What of the penance laid by the pope upon the king? 13. Relate the anecdote of Henry and pope Celestinus. 14. Who was king of Germany in 1273? What of him?

Affairs of Switzerland.

1. UNTIL the year 1307, Switzerland was under the government of Germany. Switzerland, as you know, is a mountainous little country, which is hemmed in between Germany, France, and Italy.

QUESTIONS ON THE MAP OF SWITZERLAND.—How is Switzerland bounded? Where is Geneva? Neuchatel? Lausanne? Friburg? Zurich? Constance? Luzerne? Lugano? Berne? Where are the Alps? Where is Mount Blanc? Mount St. Bernard? Lake of Constance? Lake of Zurich? Lake of Geneva?

CHAPTER CXXIII.—1. What of the government of Switzerland? Where is Switzerland?

2. As I have many kind wishes for my young readers, I hope it may be their pleasant fortune some day or other to visit Switzerland. When you go there, you will find good roads, but I advise you to travel on foot. There are so many pleasant things to see, so many tall mountains looking like white clouds up in the sky, so many little blue lakes, seeming like mirrors encircled with frames made of hills, so many bright green valleys, so many old ruinous castles—in short, so many interesting things to see, that you will be stopping every moment, and a carriage would therefore be a great trouble.

3. I have been over this country myself, and I went on foot. Switzerland seemed to me like a little world of itself. Every thing was strange, but still interesting. Among such wild mountains, you would perhaps expect to meet with a wild and fierce people. Yet the Swiss are a gentle and honest race. I should like to visit the country again, but my old limbs will never more toil up and down those hills.

4. But I must now proceed with my brief account of the history of Switzerland. When Albert the First became emperor, in 1298, he acted like a tyrant toward Switzerland. He appointed governors, who were worse tyrants than himself. One of them, named Gesler, set his cap upon a pole, and ordered all the people to bow down to it.

2. Describe the appearance of the country there. 3. What of the people? 4. What of Albert I.? What of Gesler?

5. The famous peasant, William Tell, would not bow down to Gesler's cap. My readers have heard the story, how Gesler commanded Tell to shoot at an apple on his own son's head, and how Tell hit the apple without hurting his son.

6. When the Swiss rebelled against the emperor of Germany, Tell was their principal leader. After sixty pitched battles with the emperor's troops, the liberty of Switzerland was established, and it became a free and independent republic.

7. It is said that some of the Swiss still believe that William Tell is not yet dead, though it is nearly five hundred years since he was seen on earth. They suppose that he lies asleep in a cavern near the lake of Lucerne, with two other men who assisted in founding the republic.

8. These three slumberers are called the Men of Rutli. If ever Switzerland shall be enslaved, it is fancied that they will start from their sleep, and come forth with their ancient garb and weapons, and rouse up the people to fight for their freedom.

5. What of William Tell? 6. How did Switzerland obtain her liberty? 7, 8. What legend have the Swiss concerning William Tell and his two companions?

9. Since the time of William Tell, who died in the year 1534, Switzerland has generally been a free country. But during the French Revolution it was conquered; it has since been restored to independence, yet the people are overawed by the kings that reign in the neighboring countries.

SCENE IN SWITZERLAND.

10. Many of the Swiss leave their beautiful, but poor country, to seek their fortunes in other lands. Some enter foreign armies as soldiers, and some go to Paris and London to sing songs, or carry about shows, and thus get a little money. You often find a Swiss

Sequel of German History.

1. I WILL now proceed with the history of Germany. Charles the Fifth was the most renowned of the emperors of Germany. He was likewise king of Spain, and ruler of the Netherlands, and part of Italy.

2. When this great potentate was fifty-seven years old, he grew weary of pomp and power. He therefore took off his crown, and gave it to his son Philip, and went to live in a monastery in Estramadura, in Spain. He dressed very plainly, and busied himself in saying his prayers and working in a garden.

3. One day, he wrapt himself in a shroud and lay down in a coffin, stretching himself out as if he were dead. He then ordered his attendants to carry him to the tomb. The reader must not suppose that the emperor meant to be buried alive. He merely wished to remind himself that his life must soon close. But the ceremony hastened his end; for it brought on a fever, of which he died, in 1588.

4. Ferdinand the Second, who began to reign in 1619, was called by the Catholics the Apostolic emperor, because he was a bitter persecutor of the Protestant inhabitants of Germany. His cruelties forced them to ask the aid of the Swedish king, Gustavus Adolphus, who accordingly invaded Germany, and gained many victories.

5. The subsequent history of Germany does not abound with the sort of events which my young readers would be desirous of knowing. Few or none of the later emperors performed any remarkable actions. But they appear to have been better than most sovereigns, for they cannot be accused of great crimes.

6. The emperor of Germany, as I have mentioned above, was generally a prince of the Hapsburgh family. The kingdom of Austria was enlarged by the successive emperors, and finally became great and powerful.

7. It was now able to carry on war by itself, and was at different times engaged in struggles with Turkey, with France and Spain, with Prussia, and sometimes with several of the sovereign states of Germany.

8. In 1792, Francis the Second became emperor of Germany. He undertook a war against Napoleon Bonaparte, but his armies were routed, and, in 1806, he was compelled to resign the title of emperor of Germany. He was afterward called emperor of Austria. His empire at the time of his death, which took place in 1836, was one of the most powerful sovereignties of Europe, and deserves a separate chapter.

7. With what countries has Austria waged war? 8. Who became emperor of Germany in 1792? What took place in 1806? What of the Austrian empire?

WILD BOAR HUNT IN AUSTRIA.

About Austria, Hungary, &c.

1. AUSTRIA is an extensive and powerful empire, lying south of Russia and Poland, and north of Turkey. On the west, it is bounded by the German states, Switzerland, and Italy.

2. Austria formerly belonged to Germany, and is still considered as belonging to it. But of late years other countries have been added to it which do not belong to Germany. It now includes Hungary, Bohemia, a part of Poland, the Tyrol, and a number of other states which were formerly independent. Its present population is about thirty-two millions, including all these places.

3. Vienna is the capital of the German part of Austria, and is one of the most splendid cities in Europe. It is situated on the Danube, which is a large river. In winter, this is frozen over, and the people amuse themselves by sliding, skating, and driving upon it with various kinds of sledges or sleighs. The scene presented at such a time is very gay and pleasant.

4. In summer, the inhabitants resort to the public gardens, which are extensive and beautiful. Here are fine walks, where you may see people of all kinds. There are ladies and gentlemen taking the air, boys and girls scampering about, men with monkeys taught to dance, and a multitude of curious sports. The gentlemen of Austria are much addicted to hunting wild boars, which are common in that country.

5. In the German part of Austria, which is the eastern portion, the inhabitants speak the German language, and have the manners and customs of Germany. The history of this country has been partly told. In early times it was occupied by tribes of barbarians. At a later period it formed one of the states of the German empire.

6. At this time it was called an archduchy, and was governed by an archduke, who was, however, subject to the emperor. Rodolph of Hapsburg succeeded to the government of the empire in 1273, as I have told you, and from him the sovereigns of Austria have since descended. After his time, Austria rapidly increased in power, and its archduke was at length considered as of course the emperor of all Germany.

7. It has since been engaged in many wars, particularly with Sweden, Turkey, and France. In 1688, the Turks pushed their arms into the heart of the empire, and laid siege to Vienna, but were finally driven back.

8. In 1809, Austria was involved in a war with Bonaparte. She had well-trained soldiers and able generals, but the French emperor beat them in several pitched battles, and finally entered Vienna. Here he made peace with the emperor, but took from him a large portion of his dominions.

9. These, however, were afterward restored, and at the present day, Austria may be considered as one of the leading kingdoms of Europe. It is a curious fact, that the emperors of Austria have had a great many beautiful daughters. Many of these have been married to the kings and princes of Europe, and it is owing to this, more than to success in war, that Austria has been able to acquire its vast possessions and extensive dominions. Francis Joseph II. is now (1874) emperor of Austria.

BOHEMIAN GYPSIES.

About Hungary, Bohemia, the Tyrol, &c.

1. I MUST now give you a very brief account of some of the dependencies of Austria. Hungary is an extensive country, and includes several provinces. Buda, the capital, is a fine city, situated upon the Danube.

2. The climate of Hungary is pleasant, and the soil yields very fine grapes, of which some choice wines are made. The mountains afford considerable quantities of gold and silver. The inhabitants are divided into two classes, the rich and the poor. The former live in splendid palaces, and the latter are but little better than their slaves.

3. The original inhabitants of Hungary consisted of several fierce tribes, who appear to have come from Asia into Europe at a very early date, by crossing the Altai Mountains. They probably resembled those Tartar tribes called Turks, who fell upon the Saracen empire, and established the empire of Turkey.

4. The principal of the Hungarian tribes were called Huns. An army of these, you will recollect, was led into Italy by the fierce and bloody Attila, about 450. He had already fought many battles, and made the Greek empire a tributary. He now crossed the Alps, and pouring down upon the plains of Italy, spread terror and desolation among the inhabitants. He approached the city of Rome, but was compelled to retire. He died in 451.

5. For many years, Hungary was the scene of perpetual wars. Its rulers did not acquire the title of king till the time of Stephen, who died in 1038, after a reign of forty-seven years. In 1563, Hungary became attached to the Austrian empire, and continues so to the present day. In 1848, it made a desperate attempt, under Kossuth, to recover its liberty, but was unsuccessful.

6. Bohemia is a country surrounded by mountains, containing about five millions of inhabitants. It is rich in mines of silver, tin, and precious stones. Many of the present inhabitants are Jews. There are also a great many of those strange, wandering people, called Gypsies.

7. This country derives its name from a tribe of Celts from Asia, who settled there about 600 years B. C. About 450 after Christ, it appears that the Celts had been driven out, for the people at that time were Germans, under the government of a duke.

5. What of Hungary for many years? What of Stephen? What took place in 1563? In 1848? 6. What of Bohemia? Population? Mines? Inhabitants? 7. What of a tribe of Celts? Who occupied the country in 450? What of Charlemagne? What took place in 1526?

Charlemagne rendered the country tributary, but it afterward became a kingdom. In 1526, it was attached to the house of Austria, and has continued so from that day.

8. I need not proceed to tell you more about the provinces belonging to the empire of Austria. I have already given you some account of Venice, and if I had room, I could tell you of the brave Tyrolese who live in the mountains between Italy and Germany, and many other tribes under the government of Austria.

9. But I am afraid you are weary of these dull stories; we will therefore proceed to the history of Prussia. I must, however, remark, that the geography, as well as the history, of Germany, is a great puzzle, and demands much study in order to be understood.

About Prussia.

1. THOUGH Prussia is now part of the German Empire of which I have already told you, its history is so important that I must speak of it separately. It was considered, even before the war with France, in 1870, one of the five great powers of Europe, and now that it is united with Germany, its importance is of course largely increased.

8. Where do the Tyrolese live?

2. The kingdom of Prussia consists of two separate tracts of territory. The larger of the two is bounded north by the Baltic, east by Russia, south by Austria, and west by Germany. The smaller portion is a part of Germany, and is bounded on the north and east by the Netherlands and Belgium.

3. The capital of Prussia is Berlin, situated on the river Spree; a river, by the way, with a very merry name. It is, however, a sober stream. The city is twelve miles in circumference, and is surrounded by a wall. It has a splendid palace, where the king resides, a fine university, where a great many young men are educated, and several places of public amusement. It is, on the whole, one of the most splendid cities in Europe.

4. Besides Berlin, there are many other fine cities in Prussia. Among these are Potsdam, where there is a royal palace, and Dantzic, a wealthy town and the chief seaport of Prussia. At this place, there is a powerful fortress, with immense stone walls, and a multitude of cannon. It is defended by a large number of soldiers, who always remain in it.

5. The inhabitants of Prussia are chiefly of German origin, and speak the German language. These are industrious, and a multitude of schools having been established by the emperor among them, they are tolerably well educated. But they are not a free people, and without freedom, even education cannot make a nation happy.

6. Besides the German population, Prussia has a good many Jews. There are also the remains of tribes that settled in the country long ago, who speak their original languages. These people are generally ignorant, and appear unwilling to be taught.

More about Prussia.—Frederic the Great.

1. PRUSSIA did not become a kingdom till the year 1701. Previous to that time it was governed by dukes.

4. What of Potsdam? Dantzic? What of the fortress? 5. What of the inhabitants of Prussia? Schools? Of what blessing are the people in want? 6. What of Jews? Ancient tribes?

Its ancient inhabitants were called Borussi, from whom the country took the name of Prussia.

2. Frederic William the First, who ascended the throne in 1713, was a very odd sort of king. He used to wear an old blue coat, which was ornamented with rows of copper buttons, reaching from his chin half-way down his legs. Whenever he got a new coat, he made the tailor sew on these same old copper buttons.

3. He prided himself greatly on a regiment of his guards which consisted of very tall men, many of whom were seven feet high. These gigantic fellows came from all parts of Europe, and if they would not come of their own accord, the king hired people to bring them by force.

4. Frederic William was in the habit of walking about the streets of Berlin, with a big cane in his hand, and if he happened to see any idle people, he would give them a sound thrashing. He beat his own son oftener than any body else. The princess, his daughter, got likewise a good many hard knocks.

5. When this ill-tempered old king was dead, his son Frederic came into possession of an enormous quantity of treasure, as well as an army of sixty thousand men. He soon found uses enough for his money and soldiers, in a war with Austria, Russia, and France.

CHAPTER CXXVIII.—1. When did Prussia become a kingdom? How was it previously governed? Its ancient inhabitants? 2. What of Frederick William I.? When did he ascend the throne? 3, 4. Give an account of him.

6. The war between Prussia and these three kingdoms began in 1756, and was called the Seven Years' War. Saxony and Sweden joined the enemies of Frederic. At one time, he seemed on the point of losing all his dominions. But he finally brought the war to an honorable close. He was then the most celebrated sovereign of his time, and is known in history by the title of Frederic the Great.

7. He was almost as peculiar in his dress as his father had been. He always wore a uniform, consisting of a blue coat faced with red, and a yellow waistcoat and breeches. But his clothes were often torn, and generally soiled with snuff. On his head was a very large cocked hat, and he wore a long cue behind.

8. When Frederic the Great was grown an old man, he used to sit in an easy chair, wrapt in a large cloak. He appeared to take no pleasure in his palace, nor in all the pomp and power of his kingdom.

9. He looked very sad and wo-begone, and might be heard muttering to himself—"A little while longer, and I shall be gone!" He died in 1786, at the age of seventy-five.

10. He was succeeded by his nephew, Frederic William the Second, who reigned eleven years. The next king was Frederic William the Third. He had a large army, and thought himself powerful enough to withstand the emperor Napoleon.

11. But at the battle of Jena, in 1806, Napoleon wasted the Prussian army, and killed or wounded twenty thousand men. About forty thousand were taken prisoners. Frederic William was then deprived of a great part of his territories.

12. After the battle of Waterloo, and the final defeat of Napoleon, the losses of Prussia were repaired, Frederic William then showed himself a well-meaning man. He declared that there should be a Bible in every cottage in his kingdom, and I believe he tried to keep his word.

13. He took more pains than any other king that ever lived to have all the children sent to school, and the good state of education in the country is partly owing to his efforts. If he had ceased to govern the people against their will, and allowed them to govern themselves, according to their wishes, he would have set an example worthy of being followed by all kings.

14. Frederic William IV. came to the throne in 1840. The people revolted in 1848, and gained some slight advantages, but things speedily returned to their former condition. I have told you how France made war on Prussia in 1870, and how many German states joined together to assist the latter. The German Empire was thus formed, William I. being the first emperor. His prime minister, Otto Von Bismarck, a very able statesman, contributed largely to bring about this result.

SCENE IN RUSSIA.

Description of Russia.

1. THE Russian empire, like that of Turkey, lies partly in Europe and partly in Asia. The whole of the northern part of Asia belongs to Russia. This is thinly scattered over with a great number of different tribes, who chiefly wander about from place to place in search of food for their cattle.

2. Siberia is a name given to nearly all the northern part of Asia. It is a bleak, cold region, and almost makes one shiver to think of it. The people are poor, and dress in the skins of wild animals, and for the most part live in poor huts. It is to this country of winter and poverty that the Russian emperor banishes those of his subjects whom he does not like.

3. I will now tell you of that part of Russia which lies in Europe. It is a vast territory, about equal in extent to all the United States, and embraces more land than all the other kingdoms of Europe. The population is nearly seventy millions!

4. You will see by this that the emperor of Russia is a very powerful king. He reigns over his subjects pretty much as he pleases, there being no law superior to his will. He is not only a despot in his own country, but he is a terror to all Europe.

5. He has a great many palaces in different parts of CHAPTER CXXX.—1. What of the Russian empire? What of northern Asia? Tribes? 2. To what country is the name of Siberia given? What of the country? People? Russian emperor? 3. What of Russia in Europe? Its population? 4, 5. What can you say of the emperor of Russia?

his kingdom, but he resides chiefly at St. Petersburg. He has an immense army, and is always surrounded with a great many soldiers.

6. By looking on a map, you will see that Russia in Europe extends from the Northern or Frozen Ocean on the north, to the Black Sea on the south, a distance of nearly two thousand miles. On the east, it is separated from Asia by the Ural mountains; on the west, it is bounded by the Gulf of Finland, the Baltic sea, Prussia, Austria, and Turkey.

7. In such a vast territory as this, you may well suppose that the climate is various. Along the borders of the Frozen Ocean, the lakes are covered with ice for nine months in the year. In the middle parts of Russia, the winter is about as severe as in Canada; in the southern parts, the climate is very warm and pleasant. Here grapes grow in abundance, with many other nice fruits.

8. The capital of Russia is St. Petersburg, situated on the river Neva, which flows into the Gulf of Finland. It is a splendid city, and contains half a million inhabitants. There is no place in the world where you would see more strange sights than in St. Petersburg. Here are a great many palaces, inhabited by people so rich, that some of them keep two or three hundred servants.

9. In the streets, you see a great many soldiers gaily dressed, gilt coaches, drawn by three or four horses, beggars covered with rags, and people dressed in all the strange fashions you can think of.

RUSSIAN PEASANTS.

1. Moscow is next to St. Petersburg in size, and contains 350,000 inhabitants. It is a famous old city, where the kings of Russia used to live. But in 1812, a great part of it was burnt, in order to drive out Napoleon and his soldiers, pretty much as people in our country sometimes set fire to a heap of brush in order to drive out a rabbit or a woodchuck. In this way, Moscow was nearly destroyed, but it has since been rebuilt.

9. What may you see in the streets?

2. St. Petersburg carries on a great deal of commerce by sea, and many of our ships go there to get hemp, iron, hides, and other things. But Moscow is situated far inland, and therefore carries on no trade by sea.

3. There is no king in the world who reigns over so many kinds of people as the czar, or emperor of Russia. In his European dominions, he has at least sixty different tribes or nations under his sway, who speak different languages, and have different modes of life. In his Asiatic dominions he probably has as many more.

4. In the northern part of European Russia, there are a good many tribes of short, swarthy people, called Laplanders, Samoiedes, etc. These live almost in a savage state. Those that dwell near the sea live so much upon fish, that they always carry about with them a fishy smell. These races resemble the Esquimaux Indians that occupy the northern parts of our continent.

5. It would seem that these people would have a very dull time of it, up in their cold country, where three-fourths of the time it is winter, and where the nights are sometimes six months long. But they appear to enjoy themselves pretty well. They have no books, but they tell long stories and crack their jokes as well as other people.

6. They have no history, for they seem to keep no more record of what passes among them than a hive of bees. One generation succeeds another, and so things pass from age to age. They are not warlike, and have no great events to tell. Thus they go on, living now as their great-grandfathers lived before them. They acknowledge the authority of the emperor, but the country is so cold that he never comes among them, so they do pretty much as they please.

7. In the southern and western portion of European Russia are a good many Tartars, who are very fond of riding about on swift horses. Along the river Don, there is a race of Cossacks. These, too, are fond of horses, and in battle fight terribly with long spears, which they hurl to the distance of two hundred feet.

8. Besides these tribes, there are many Jews, several millions of Poles, a good many Germans, and some Gypsies in Russia. In the cities, the people generally live pretty much as they like, each man pursuing what occupation he pleases.

9. Russia has made astonishing progress in civilization within the last forty years. Railroads have been extensively introduced, and now connect the great cities. Arts and manufactures are encouraged, and a general state of improvement exists throughout the empire.

10. The country people who till the land and who were called serfs, were set free in 1861. They are still, however, in a sad state of ignorance and poverty. Their condition is similar to that of the vassals in old feudal times.

8. What of other inhabitants? 9. What of the progress of Russia? 10. What of the serfs?

The Reign of Peter the Great.

1. ALTHOUGH Russia is such an immense empire, its history will not detain us long. It was a country of barbarians, till within a little more than a hundred years. It cannot be said to have taken a rank among civilized nations till Peter the Great ascended the throne, in 1696.

2. Peter was a very strange man, and though he began the work of civilizing his empire, he found it a more difficult task to civilize himself. In fact, he was somewhat of a barbarian all his life.

3. The emperors of Russia are called czars. When the czar Peter was twenty-five years old, he left his throne, and travelled over Europe in search of knowledge. He did not go to any of the learned universities, nor apply himself to the study of the dead languages.

4. That was not the sort of knowledge which Peter wanted. The first thing he did was to go to Holland, and put himself apprentice to a ship-carpenter. The house is still standing where he used to live while there. He afterward went to England, and followed the same trade as in Holland.

5. Besides learning the business of ship-carpentry, he took lessons in other branches of mechanics, and also in surgery. In short, he neglected no kind of knowledge which he thought would be useful to himself or his subjects.

6. In a little more than a year, he heard that his sister was endeavoring to make herself empress of Russia. This intelligence compelled him to break off his studies and labors, and hasten back to the city of Moscow. On arriving there, he put some of the conspirators to death, and confined his sister in prison.

7. His time was afterward so much occupied in war, and in taking care of the empire, that he never had leisure to finish his education. But he had already learnt a great deal, and the effect of his knowledge was soon seen in the improvement of Russia.

8. Peter used to rise at five in the morning, and busy himself all day about the affairs of the empire. But in the evening, when his work was over, he would seat himself beside a big round bottle of brandy, and drink till his reason was quite gone.

4, 5. Describe the manner in which the czar Peter succeeded in acquiring knowledge. 6. What now happened? 7. What of his time?

9. This habit, together with the natural violence of his temper, rendered him almost as dangerous to his friends as to his enemies. He often said that he had corrected the faults of Russia, but that he could not correct his own.

10. Peter was in the habit of beating those who offended him, with his cane. The highest noblemen in Russia often underwent this punishment. Even the empress Catherine, his wife, sometimes got soundly beaten; but perhaps not oftener than she deserved it.

11. It is supposed that the czar Peter ordered his own son to be put to death, and that he was himself privately executed in prison. He had many faults, and was guilty of some great crimes, but his name stands high on the list of sovereigns; for he was one of the very few who have labored hard for the welfare of their subjects. He did more for the good of Russia than all the czars who went before and have come after him.

8, 9. In what vice did Peter indulge? 10. What habit had he? 11. What is supposed to have been the fate of Peter's son? His own fate? The character of the czar Peter?

The Successors of Peter the Great.

1. PETER died in 1725, at the age of fifty-three, and was succeeded by his wife, the empress Catherine. She had been a country girl, and the czar Peter had married her for the sake of her beauty. In some respects, Catherine was a good sort of woman; but, among other faults, she was rather too fond of wine.

2. She reigned only about two years, and was succeeded by her husband's grandson, named Peter the Second. He died in 1730, and left the throne to Anne Jwanowna, his niece. The empress Anne was a good sovereign, and performed many praiseworthy acts. None of her deeds, however, have been more famous than the building of a palace of ice.

3. This stately and beautiful structure was built on a frozen lake. Instead of wood or hewn stone, it was composed entirely of blocks of ice. The furniture was likewise of ice; and even the beds were of the same material. When it was illuminated within, the whole edifice glittered and sparkled as if it were made of diamonds.

4. Bright as it was, however, I would far rather dwell in the meanest mud-cottage, than in so cold a mansion. Yet, my dear readers, any other palace is almost as uncomfortable as the empress Anne's palace of ice. There is little in them but cold and glittering grandeur.

5. The successor of Anne was the princess Elizabeth, a daughter of Peter the Great. She mounted the throne in 1740, and reigned twenty-two years. Her successor was Peter the Third, who began to reign in 1762.

6. He, like Peter the Great, had a wife named Catherine. They had not long sat together on the throne, when she contrived to depose Peter, and made herself sole ruler of Russia. It is supposed that she afterward caused him to be murdered.

7. But although so wicked a woman, Catherine was endowed with admirable talents, and she became one of the most illustrious sovereigns in the world. Some people called her Catherine the Great Man; for many of her great qualities would have been more becoming in a man than a woman.

8. In 1796, when she died, Catherine was on the point of driving the Turks from their territories. If she had succeeded in doing so, she would have governed the whole of the vast region between the Mediterranean sea and the Arctic ocean.

9. But death hurried the great empress away, to answer for the murder of her husband, and many other crimes. She was succeeded by her son Paul, who was then forty-three years old.

10. The czar Paul possessed none of his mother's talents, and was of a very stern and unamiable disposition. People suspected him of being insane. His conduct grew so intolerable, that some of his principal nobles conspired to kill him.

11. Paul was succeeded by Alexander, his eldest son. This emperor reigned from 1801 till 1825. He was engaged in war with the emperor Napoleon, who penetrated with his army to the city of Moscow. But the Russians burnt that ancient capital of their country; and its destruction ruined the French army.

12. The next czar of Russia was named Nicholas.

8. What plan had Catherine the Great before her death? When did she die?
9. Who succeeded her? 10. What of the czar Paul? 11. Who succeeded him?
What of Alexander? How was the French army ruined?

He succeeded his brother Alexander in 1825. His tyranny drove his Polish subjects to revolt a few years after his accession, but they were subdued. Thousands of them fled to other countries, thousands were slain, and thousands were imprisoned, or banished to Siberia.

13. In 1854, Nicholas endeavored to take a part of the Turkish dominions from the sultan, and thus became involved in a war with England, France, and Turkey. The czar was defeated in the struggle, which was brought to a close by the capture of the Russian stronghold, Sebastopol, in 1856.

14. Nicholas died during this contest, and was succeeded by his son, Alexander III. Russia, though still partly barbarous, is an empire of immense power, and is constantly improving in every thing which contributes to the civilization of a people. It is now (1874) at peace with every nation of Europe.

12. Who was the next czar of Russia? What of him? 13. What happened in 1854? What was the result? 14. Who succeeded Nicholas? What of Russia at the present day?

About Sweden.

1. THE Swedish territories at present comprise Sweden, Norway, and part of Lapland. These are bounded north by the Arctic Ocean; east by Lapland, the Gulf of Bothnia, and the Baltic; south by the Baltic, the Kattigat, and the Skager Rack; and west by the Atlantic.

2. Sweden is a cold and mountainous country, celebrated for its iron, of which large quantities are brought to this country. The people are industrious, CHAPTER CXXXIV.—1. What do the Swedish territories comprise? Bound them.

2. What of Sweden? The people?

bold, frank, and independent. A large part of the inhabitants live upon milk, cheese, and fish. In winter they clothe themselves in furs and sheepskins.

3. The Swedes are a sensible people, and are disposed to make the best of every thing. When their long winter goes away, they celebrate the return of spring by dancing around a May-pole. They love their country, and insist that it is the pleasantest part of the world.

4. Though they dress in sheepskins, and live in a homespun sort of way, they are still very polite. They are, in short, much more amiable, respectable, and well-behaved, than many of the kings and princes about whom I have been telling you.

5. Not much is known about the early history of Sweden. In ancient times it was under the government of Denmark. A Danish queen, called Margaret, ruled over Denmark, Sweden, and Norway, in 1387.

6. In 1518, the Danish king Christian caused ninety-four Swedish senators to be massacred in the city of Stockholm. Gustavus Vasa, the son of one of these senators, incited the Swedes to revolt against Denmark.

7. The king of Denmark sent an army to put down the rebels. But the ships in which the Danish soldiers had embarked, got embedded in the ice, on the coast of Sweden. The inhabitants skated off from the shore, and set the ships on fire.

8. Gustavus Vasa succeeded in freeing his country, and was elected king. The next sovereign of Sweden who is worth mentioning, was Gustavus Adolphus. He began to reign in 1611, at the age of eighteen.

9. This king was a great warrior, and vanquished the best generals in the service of the emperor of Germany. In 1633, he won the battle of Lutzen, but was killed at the moment of victory.

10. Gustavus Adolphus left a daughter named Christina, who was then only six years old. She was thought to possess remarkable talents, and great pains were taken with her education. But she was neither a good woman nor a good queen.

11. After reigning a considerable time, queen Christina became weary of the cares of government. She therefore abdicated the throne, and set out to seek a residence in some pleasanter country than Sweden.

12. But her conduct was so bad, that all the kings of Europe were ashamed to have such a woman in Charles the Twelfth and his successors.

1. THE most famous sovereign that Sweden ever had, and one of the most famous in the world, was Charles the Twelfth. But my readers must have become tired of hearing about conquerors; so that I shall speak very briefly of Charles.

2. He began to reign in 1697, at fifteen years of age. From his youth upward, he thought of nothing but being a soldier. When he was only about seventeen years old, the czar of Russia, and the kings of Poland and Denmark, made war upon him.

3. Charles beat them all in the first campaign. When he heard the bullets whistling by his ears, he showed great delight, and exclaimed—"That shall be my music!" And, as long as he lived, he never wished for any other music.

4. But it is a sad thing for a people when their king loves the whistling of bullets. Charles the Twelfth was a scourge to all Europe, and to his own kingdom more than to any other. He delighted in war for its own sake, and not for any good which he expected to gain by it.

5. During the first few years of his reign, Charles was constantly successful, but in 1709, the czar of Russia gained a great victory over him, at Pultowa. Charles made his escape into Turkey.

6. He continued in that country five years, although he might safely have returned home. He seemed to care nothing about his own dominions. When the Swedes sent to inquire what they should do in his absence, Charles answered, that he would send one of his old boots to govern them.

7. At last, in 1714, he left Turkey and returned to Sweden. His first business was to make war again. But his warfare was now drawing to a close.

- 4. What can you say of him? 5. What of Charles XII. for the first few years of his reign? When was the battle of Pultowa? Where did Charles fly? 6. How long did he stay in Turkey? What answer did he send to a message from the Swedes? 7. When did Charles return to Sweden? What of him when there?

8. One night, while besieging a fortress in Norway, he advanced in front of his troops to see how the siege was going on. A cannon-shot struck him on the head, and killed him. He was found grasping his sword, which was half drawn from the scabbard. Historians seem hardly decided whether to call Charles the Twelfth a hero or a madman.

9. One of his successors, named Gustavus the Third, was shot at a masquerade, in 1792. Gustavus the Fourth behaved in such a manner that his subjects were compelled to dethrone him. This took place in 1809.

10. The next king was Charles the Thirteenth. The emperor Napoleon caused a French general, named Bernadotte, to be declared Crown-prince of Sweden, and heir to the throne. In 1818, when Charles the Thirteenth died, Bernadotte succeeded him, with the title of Charles John, and reigned prosperously several years.

11. Though he had originally been only a common soldier, Bernadotte proved to be a better king than most of the other European sovereigns, whose forefathers had worn crowns for a thousand years. In 1844, he was succeeded by his grandson, Oscar I., who was succeeded in 1860 by his son, Oscar II. The population of Sweden, with that of Norway, is five millions.

LAPLANDERS TRAVELLING IN SLEDGES.

About Lapland, Norway, and Denmark.

1. LAPLAND is the most northern country of Europe and is divided between Russia and Sweden. The country is so cold that the hot liquor we call brandy sometimes freezes there. I am afraid, however, that

11. What of Bernadotte? Who is the present king?

CHAPTER CXXXVI.—1. Where is Lapland? What of the climate?

the Lapps find means of thawing more of it than is good for them.

2. I have already told you something about the Laplanders. The men are about four feet high, and the women not much taller than a cider-barrel. The people have a great many reindeer, whose flesh supplies food, and whose skins furnish clothing. They also take the place of horses, and drag the people over the snow in sledges, at a rapid rate. These people have no history that is worthy of being related here.

3. Norway is an extensive country, bounded on the west by the Atlantic ocean, and on the east by Sweden. It is a cold, bleak, and barren region, but the inhabitants live pretty comfortably. They have very fine cows, from which they make the best butter in the world.

4. Bergen is the largest city, and has twenty thousand inhabitants. The houses are small, and generally built of wood. Fires sometimes do great damage, and therefore there are a good many watchmen, who walk about the streets at night, muffled up in thick great-coats. Every hour they cry out, "God preserve our good city of Bergen!"

2. What of the Laplanders? Reindeer? History? 3. Where is Norway? What of the country? The people? Butter? 4. What of Bergen? Its population? What of the houses? Are fires frequent? What of the watchmen?

5. Norway was early inhabited by rough tribes, who were adventurous seamen. There seems to have been now and then a pirate among them, for in 860, a pirate, named Nadodv, discovered Iceland, which was afterward settled by the Norwegians.

6. Norway was conquered by Canute, king of Denmark, in 1030; but six years after, it became independent, and for many years it was governed by its own king. In 1397, it was incorporated with Denmark, and continued a part of that kingdom till 1814, when it was transferred to Sweden.

7. Denmark is a little kingdom lying between Sweden and Germany. It is a level country, nearly surrounded by the sea. The people have light complexions, and the skin of the ladies is said to be exceedingly white. The people have a great many cattle, and they seem very fond of tilling the soil. Copenhagen, the capital, has one hundred and twenty thousand inhabitants. The whole population of the kingdom is two and a quarter millions. The Danish language is spoken both in Denmark and Norway.

8. The three kingdoms of Denmark, Sweden, and Norway were anciently called Scandinavia. In very early times they were occupied by tribes of Finns and Germans; afterward the Goths conquered these countries. They were led by Odin, of whom many marvellous tales are told, and who seems to have been worshipped as a kind of Jupiter among these northern tribes. Skiold, the son of Odin, is said to have been the first king of Denmark.

9. All that we really know of Denmark at this early period, is, that the people were composed of wild, adventurous warriors, who were generally considered by the more southern nations of Europe as pirates. About the time that the Roman empire fell, the Danes, Swedes, and Norwegians were known by the general name of Normans.

10. These bold freebooters sallied forth in their little vessels, and made conquests in different countries. Some of them settled in England, some in that part of France called Normandy, and some of them reached Spain and Italy.

11. In 920, the several Danish tribes appear to have been united under one government. Canute conquered England and a part of Scotland in 1016, and subdued Norway in 1030. Since his time, Denmark has had a great many sovereigns, and been engaged in several wars, but its history offers but little that is interesting.

Brief Notices of several Kingdoms and States.

1. THERE are several countries of Europe, of which my limits will not permit me to give a separate history. Some of them have been spoken of in connection with other kingdoms. The rest must be briefly noticed in one chapter.

2. If I had time, I could make a long story about Holland, a country once covered by the sea, which is now walled out by a vast dyke. The people of Holland, who number near three millions, are called Dutch, and are known all the world over as great smokers. They are, however, an industrious people, and I know of nothing more comfortable than the inside of a thrifty Dutchman's house in his own country. Amsterdam, the capital, contains two hundred and fifty thousand inhabitants.

3. In Belgium, the people, strange as it may seem, appear to have a mixture of Dutch and French manners. They smoke a great deal of tobacco, yet speak the French language. The country is pleasant, and some parts are beautiful. Many of the cities are very interesting. The population is four and a half millions.

4. The Netherlands, or Holland and Belgium, were formerly one country. The whole territory is bounded on the north by the North Sea, east by Germany, south by France, and west by the British Channel and the North Sea. These territories belonged at one time to Rome, afterward to Germany, and finally to Spain.

5. In 1581, the seven northern provinces revolted against Philip of Spain, and formed themselves into a republic, which was then called Holland. During the seventeenth century it was a very powerful nation, especially by sea. At this time its ships often fought, and sometimes successfully, with the British fleets.

3. What of the people of Belgium? The country? The cities? Population?
4. What of Holland and Belgium? How is the territory bounded? To whom has it belonged at different times? 5. What took place in 1581? When was Holland very powerful?

6. The remaining provinces of the Netherlands were long under the government of Austria. In 1810, the whole of the Netherlands were united to France, but were afterward formed into a separate kingdom. In 1830, there was a revolution, and the southern provinces now compose the kingdom of Belgium.

7. Poland was once a nation of Europe, but it is now no longer so. It was bounded north and east by the Russian dominions, south by the river Dneister, and west by Prussia. In 1772 the sovereigns of Russia, Prussia, and Austria seized upon Poland, and divided the greater part of its territories among themselves. In 1795 they seized the remainder. The inhabitants struggled bravely for their freedom, but in vain. They were cruelly treated by Nicholas, the emperor of Russia, who sent thousands into exile, and banished thousands to other countries. Some of the Poles have fled from oppression to this country.

6. What of the remaining provinces of the Netherlands? What took place in 1810? In 1830? 7. What of Poland? Its boundaries? What took place in 1772? In 1795? What of the Poles?

Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland.

1. I HAVE NOW come to the most interesting country in Europe; the country where there is more comfort, more good sense, more thorough civilization, more true religion, than in any other place in Europe, Asia, or Africa.

2. The kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland embraces England, Wales, Scotland, and Ireland. The three first countries are upon the island of Great Britain. This island is on the western coast of Europe, and is separated by the British Channel from France. At the narrowest part, this channel is twenty-five miles wide. Ireland lies west of Great Britain, at the distance of about sixty miles.

QUESTIONS ON THE MAP OF GREAT BRITAIN.—How are the British Islands bounded? Where is London? Give the direction of the following places from London: Plymouth; Dublin; Birmingham; Liverpool; Bristol; Leeds; Aberdeen; Glasgow; Cork; Edinburgh; Londonderry; Dumfries. Where are the Orkney Islands? The Shetland Islands? The Hebrides? Where is the English Channel? The Isle of Wight? Cape Clear? St. George's Channel? Land's End? The Frith of Forth? The River Dee? The Trent? The Severn? The Boyne? The Derwent? The Humber? The Tweed? By what are England and Ireland separated? Where is Wales?

CHAPTER CXXXIX.—1. Which is the most interesting country in Europe? 2. What is embraced in the kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland? What of the island of Great Britain? What of the British Channel? Ireland?

3. These two islands are small in extent, but they contain over twenty-nine millions of inhabitants. Besides this, the kingdom has colonies in various parts of America, Africa, and Asia, so that the king rules over nearly two hundred and sixty millions of people. Great Britain may be considered the richest and most powerful kingdom on the face of the globe.

4. I suppose you know that the first settlers of our country came from England. They brought with them the manners and customs of the country where they lived. Thus the United States became very much like England; the houses, the churches, the dress of the people in the two countries, are nearly the same. Besides this, the people speak the same language.

5. But you must remember that England is an older and richer country than ours. It has larger cities, more splendid churches, more beautiful roads, finer gardens, and many other things superior to what can be found in this country.

6. Besides all this, England has a king or a queen, who has several magnificent palaces. England, too, has a great many noblemen, who live in costly country.

seats. These ride about in coaches, some of which cost ten thousand dollars. Thus there is a great deal more splendor in England than we find here.

7. But, as an offset to this, there is more poverty there than in our happier country. Beggars throng the streets, even in London, and they are to be found in all parts of the kingdom. Thousands of people, too, who are not beggars, labor very hard, and yet are scarcely able to live. Sometimes a great many people die for want of food. Thus England is a country which is wonderful for its magnificence and power, yet with all its wealth, a large portion of the people suffer the pangs of poverty.

6. What of the king? Noblemen? 7. What of poverty in England? What can you say of England?

VIEW IN LONDON.

About London and other cities of England, Wales, Scotland, and Ireland.

1. LONDON is the largest and finest city in Europe, and contains about three millions of inhabitants. The Thames, a considerable river, runs through it. Across this there are a number of handsome stone bridges, and beneath it is a tunnel, so that people may walk under the water! London has no wall around it like Paris, Berlin, and most large cities of the continent, but it is encircled by a beautiful country, dotted with villages, villas, and country-seats.

2. London seems like a world of itself; you might walk about for a year, and go into some new street every day. In some parts of the city there are such streams of people, that it always seems there like the Fourth of July, or Election day. The shops are filled with beautiful things, and the streets are crowded with coaches and carriages of all sorts.

3. The palace of St. James is a dark old building, but the late king had a new one built for him, which is very fine. Westminster Abbey is an old Gothic church, which strikes every beholder with admiration and wonder. St. Paul's is a more modern church, and is very handsome.

4. I have not time to tell you of the other wonderful things in London, nor can I tell you of the other beautiful towns and cities in England. You must read about them in some larger book, or come and see me of a long winter night.

5. I will then tell you of Manchester, where they make beautiful ginghams, calicoes, and other goods; of Birmingham, where they make guns, pistols, swords, locks, and lamps; of Sheffield, where they make knives, forks, and scissors; and of other places, where they make a great variety of articles.

6. Wales is a country of mountains, lying on the west of England. Most of the people talk the Welsh language, which you could not understand. They are very industrious, and live in a comfortable manner. Their mountains are celebrated for producing coal, tin, iron, and copper.

7. Scotland is also a land of mountains. In the southern part, the people speak the Scotch language, which perhaps you could partly understand. But in the highlands of the north, the inhabitants speak Gaelic, which would be as strange to you as the language of an Arab.

8. The capital of Scotland is Edinburgh, a fine, smoky old city, with an immense high castle in the midst of it. Besides this, there are many fine towns in Scotland. Glasgow is a large place, celebrated for its manufactures.

9. Ireland is a bright green island, containing five millions of people. It is the native land of those cheerful, witty Irishmen, who come out to this country in such abundance. If their country was happily governed,

6. Where is Wales? What of the people? Mountains? 7. What of Scotland? Language? 8. What of Edinburgh? Glasgow? 9. What of Ireland? Government?

they would not come here; but the truth is that Ireland has felt the miseries of bad government for many years, and a large part of the people are therefore kept in a state of distressing poverty.

10. The Irish, however, are a very interesting people. At home or abroad, they seem to be full of wit and hospitality. It is by their lively disposition and cheerful turn of mind, that they seem to soften the evils which so often pursue them.

11. Dublin is the capital of Ireland, and some of its streets are magnificent, but many portions of it are filled with inhabitants who present the most woful aspect of raggedness and misery. Beggary is common in all parts of the kingdom.

10. What of the Irish people? 11. What of Dublin?

CELTIC INHABITANTS OF BRITAIN.

Origin of the British Nation—The Druids.

1. It is supposed that Great Britain and Ireland were originally settled by a colony from Gaul. These were called Gaels, or Celts. Their descendants are found at this day in Ireland and Wales, and the highlands of Scotland. Some of these still speak the ancient Gaelic or Celtic language.

2. Very little is known about these islands till the time of Julius Cæsar. He invaded England in the year

55 before the Christian era. The country was then called Britannia, or Britain. It was inhabited by barbarians, some of whom wore the skins of wild beasts, while others were entirely naked. They were painted, like the American Indians. Their weapons were clubs, spears, and swords, with which they fiercely attacked the Roman invaders.

3. The ancient Britons, like the other northern nations of Europe, were idolaters. Their priests were called druids. Their places of worship were in the open air, and consisted of huge stone pillars, standing in a circle. A large stone in the middle was used as an altar, and human victims were sacrificed upon it. The ruins of one of these temples still remains at Stonehenge, and is very wonderful.

4. The druids considered the oak a sacred tree. They set a great value on the misletoe, a sort of plant which sometimes grows on the oak. Wherever they found the misletoe, they held a banquet beneath the spreading branches of the oak on which it grew.

5. The druids incited the Britons to oppose the Roman power. They fought fiercely, and the country was not entirely subdued till sixty years after the Christian era. Suetonius, a Roman general, then cut down the sacred groves of oak, destroyed the temples, and threw the druids into the fires which they had themselves kindled to roast the Romans.

6. The Scots, who inhabited the northern part of the island, were a fierce people, and were still unconquered. To prevent them from making incursions into Britain, the Romans built a wall from the river Tyne to the Frith of Solway.

7. The Britons remained quietly under the government of Rome for nearly five centuries after the Christian era; adopting during this period, many of the Roman customs. They never attempted to free themselves. But, at last, the Roman empire became so weak that the emperor Valentinian withdrew his troops from Britain.

8. The inhabitants had grown so unwarlike, that, when the Roman soldiers were gone, they found themselves unable to resist the Scots. They therefore asked the assistance of two tribes of people from Germany, called Saxons and Angles.

5. When was the country entirely subdued? What of Suetonius? 6. What of the Scots? What did the Romans do? 7. How long did Rome govern Britain? What of the emperor Valentinian? 8. Whose aid did the Britons ask against the Scots?

9. These people drove back the Scots into their own part of the island. Then, instead of returning to Germany, they took possession of Britain by the right of the strongest. It was divided by them into seven small kingdoms, called the Saxon Heptarchy.

A SAXON KING.

Saxon and Danish kings of England.

1. In the year 827 of the Christian era, all the seven kingdoms of the Saxon Heptarchy were united into one, under the government of Egbert. He was therefore the first king of England.

9. What did these two tribes do? How was Britain then divided?

CHAPTER CXLII.—1. Who was the first king of England? What kingdoms did he govern?

2. Egbert was a native of England, but had been educated in France, at the court of Charlemagne. He was therefore more polished and enlightened than most of the Saxon kings. During the reign of Egbert, and for many years afterward, the Danes made incursions into England. They sometimes overran the whole country.

3. Alfred, who ascended the throne in 872, fought fifty-six battles with them, by sea and land. On one occasion, he went into the camp of the Danes in the disguise of a harper. He took notice of every thing, and planned an attack upon the camp. Returning to his own men, he led them against the Danes, whom he completely routed.

4. This king was called Alfred the Great; and he had a better right to the epithet of Great than most other kings who have borne it. He made wise laws, and instituted the custom of trial by jury. He likewise founded the university of Oxford. Nearly a hundred years after his death, the Danes again broke into England. There was now no Alfred to oppose them. They were accordingly victorious, and three Danish kings governed the country in succession.

2. What of Egbert? What of the Danes? 3. When did Alfred ascend the throne? What did he do? 4. Why was he called Alfred the Great? What of the Danes after his death?

5. Canute the Great was one of them. He appears to have been an old pirate, or, as they were called in those days, a sea-king. One day, when he and his courtiers were walking on the shore, they called him king of the sea, and told him that he had but to command, and the waves would obey him.

6. Canute desired a chair of state to be brought and placed on the hard, smooth sand. Then, seating himself in the chair, he stretched out his sceptre over the waves, with a very commanding aspect.

7. "Roll back thy waves, thou sea!" cried Canute. "I am thy king and master! How darest thou foam and thunder in my presence?" But the sea, nowise abashed, came roaring and whitening onward, and threw a sheet of spray over Canute and all the courtiers. The giant waves rolled upward on the beach, far beyond the monarch's chair. They would soon have swallowed him up, together with his courtiers, if they had not all scampered to the dry land.

8. In the year 1041, the Danes were driven out of England, and another Saxon king, called Edward the Confessor, was placed upon the throne. At his death, in 1066, Harold, who was also a Saxon, became king.

9. But he was the last of the Saxon kings. No sooner had he mounted the throne, than William, duke of Normandy, in France, invaded England, at the head of sixty thousand men.

10. Harold led an army of Saxons against the Norman invaders, and fought with them at Hastings. In the midst of the battle, an arrow was shot through his steel helmet, and penetrated his brain. The duke of Normandy gained the victory, and became king of England.

Norman kings of England.

1. WILLIAM the Conqueror (as the duke of Normandy was now called) reigned about twenty years. He was succeeded by his second son, William Rufus, or the Red, who was so named from the color of his hair.

2. The Red king was very fond of hunting. One day, while he was chasing a deer in the forest, a gentleman by the name of Walter Tyrrel let fly an arrow. It glanced against a tree, and hit the king in the breast; so that he fell from his horse and died.

CHAPTER CXLIII.—1. Who succeeded William the Conqueror?

3. This took place in the year 1100, and William Rufus was succeeded by his brother Henry. This king was called Beauclerk, or Excellent Scholar, because he was able to write his name. Kings were not expected to have much learning in those days. On the death of king Henry Beauclerk, in 1135, the throne was usurped by Stephen of Blois. But he died in 1154, and was succeeded by Henry the Second, who was son to the former Henry.

4. This monarch had a violent quarrel with Thomas Becket, archbishop of Canterbury. Hoping to please the king, four knights went to Canterbury, and murdered Becket at the foot of the altar. But this bloody deed was a cause of great trouble to king Henry; for the pope threatened to excommunicate him.

5. In order to pacify his holiness, the king set out on a pilgrimage to the tomb of Becket. When he entered the abbey where the tomb was situated, the whole community of monks assaulted him with rods. The king, being afraid to resist them, was soundly whipped, and, as a reward for his patience, he received the pope's pardon.

6. During the reign of this king, Ireland was conquered and annexed to the realm of England. It had previously been divided into several separate kingdoms.

7. Richard the lion-hearted was crowned king of England in 1189. He was a valiant man, and possessed prodigious strength; and he delighted in nothing so much as battle and slaughter. After gaining great renown in Palestine, he was, on his way back, taken and imprisoned for two years by the duke of Austria.

8. The English obtained Richard's release by paying a heavy ransom; but soon afterward, while besieging a castle in Normandy, he was killed by an arrow from a cross-bow. The next king was Richard's brother John, surnamed Lackland, or Loseland.

9. This epithet was bestowed on John because he lost the territories which the English kings had hitherto possessed in France. John was one of the worst kings that ever England had. Among other crimes, he murdered his nephew, Arthur of Bretagne, who was rightful heir to the crown.

6. What of Ireland? 7. When was Richard made king of England? What of him? 8. How was he killed? 9. Why was John called Lackland? What of him? His crimes?

10. The barons of England were so disgusted with the conduct of John, that they assembled at Runnymede, and compelled him to sign a written deed, called Magna Charta. This famous charter was dated the 19th of June, 1215. It is considered the foundation of English liberty. It deprived John, and all his successors, of the despotic power which former kings had exercised.

11. King John died in 1216, and left the crown to his son, who was then only nine years old. He was called Henry the Third. His reign continued fifty-five years; but, though he was a well-meaning man, he had not sufficient wisdom and firmness for a ruler.

English Wars and Rebellions.

1. THE next king, Edward the First, was crowned in 1272. The people gave him the nickname of Longshanks, because his legs were of unusual length. He was a great warrior, and fought bravely in Palestine, and in the civil wars of England.

2. Edward conquered Wales, which had hitherto been a separate kingdom. He attempted to conquer Scotland likewise, but did not entirely succeed. The illustrious William Wallace resisted him, and beat the English troops in many battles. But, at last, Wallace was taken prisoner and carried in chains to London, and there executed.

3. Robert Bruce laid claim to the crown of Scotland, and renewed the war against Edward. But old Longshanks was determined not to let go his hold of poor Scotland. He mustered an immense army, and was marching northward, when a sudden sickness put an end to his life.

4. His son, Edward the Second, ascended the throne in 1307. He led an army of a hundred thousand men into Scotland. But he was not such a warrior as old king Longshanks. Robert Bruce encountered him at Bannockburn, with only thirty thousand men, and gained a glorious victory. By this, Scotland was set free. Edward the Second reigned about twenty years. He was a foolish and miserable king. His own wife made war against him and took him prisoner. By her instigation, he was cruelly murdered in prison.

2. What of Wales? Who resisted Edward in Scotland? Fate of William Wallace? 3. What of Robert Bruce? Death of Edward Longshanks? 4. What of Edward II.? Battle of Bannockburn? How was Scotland set free? What happened to Edward II.?

5. His son, Edward the Third, began to reign in 1327, at the age of eighteen. He had not long been on the throne, before he showed himself very unlike his father. He beat the Scots at Halidown Hill, and afterward invaded France. I have spoken of his French wars, in the history of France.

6. The king's son, surnamed the Black Prince, was even more valiant than his father. He was also as kind and generous as he was brave. He conquered king John of France, and took him prisoner, but he did not exult over him. When they entered London together, the Black Prince rode bareheaded by the side of the captive monarch, as if he were merely an attendant, instead of a conqueror.

7. This brave prince died in 1376, and his father lived only one year longer. The next king was Richard the Second, a boy of eleven years old. When he grew up, Richard neglected the government, and cared for nothing but his own pleasures.

8. During his reign, a rebellion was headed by a blacksmith named Wat Tyler. The rebels had also other leaders, nicknamed Jack Straw and Hob Carter.

They marched to London with a hundred thousand followers, and did a great deal of mischief.

9. The king, attended by a few of his nobles, rode out to hold a conference with Wat Tyler. The blacksmith was very rude, and treated king Richard as if he were no better than a common man, or perhaps not quite so good. He even threatened the king with a drawn sword.

10. William Walworth, the Lord Mayor of London, was standing near the king. He was so offended at Wat Tyler's insolence, that he uplifted a mace, or club, and smote Wat to the ground. A knight then killed him with a sword.

11. When the rebels saw that the valiant blacksmith was beaten down and slain, they gave an angry shout, and were rushing forward to attack the king's party. But king Richard rode boldly to meet them, and waved his hand with a majestic air.

12. "Be not troubled for the death of your leader!" he cried. "I, your king, will be a better leader than Wat Tyler!" The king's words and looks made such an impression, that the rebels immediately submitted, and Wat Tyler's murder was unavenged.

The Lancastrian Kings of England.

1. NOTWITHSTANDING his promise to the rebels, king Richard was not half so good a ruler as the blacksmith would probably have been. His subjects grew more and more discontented, and his cousin, the duke of Lancaster, formed the project of making himself king. Richard was dethroned, and imprisoned at Pontefract castle, where he was either killed or starved to death. The duke of Lancaster began to reign in the year 1400, and was called Henry the Fourth.

2. There were two rebellions against this king. One was headed by the earl of Northumberland, and the other by the archbishop of York; for, in those times, bishops often put on armor, and turned soldiers. Henry conquered the rebels, and reigned several years in peace.

3. As long as his father lived, the king's eldest son was a wild and dissipated young man. But no sooner was the old king dead, than his character underwent a complete change. He now threw off his dissipation, and devoted himself carefully to the business of governing his kingdom. He was crowned, as Henry the Fifth, in 1413. Two years afterward he invaded France.

4. I have already told, in the history of France, how Henry vanquished the French in the famous battle of Agincourt, and how he afterward became master of the whole kingdom of France. His death took place in 1422, in the midst of his triumphs, at the age of thirty-four.

5. The new king of England, Henry the Sixth, was a baby, only nine months old. At that tender age, while he was still in his nurse's arms, the heavy crowns of England and France were put upon his head. The ceremony of this poor child's coronation was performed in the city of Paris. He soon lost the crown of France. But the crown of England continued a torment to him as long as he lived, and it caused his death at last.

6. When he grew up, he turned out to be a mild, quiet, simple sort of man, with barely sense enough to get along respectably as a private person. As a king he was an object of contempt. His wife had far more manhood than himself, and she governed him like a child.

7. During this king's reign began the war of the Roses. The reader will recollect that the duke of Lancaster had unlawfully taken the crown from Richard the Second. But he and his son reigned without much opposition, because they were warlike men, and could have defended the crown with their swords.

8. Henry the Sixth, on the contrary, was soft, meek, and peaceable, without spirit enough to fight for the crown which his father left him. The heirs of Richard the Second therefore thought this a proper time to get back their lawful inheritance. The duke of York was the nearest heir.

9. He began a war in 1455. If there had been nobody but Henry the Sixth to resist him, he might have got the crown at once. But Henry's wife, whose name was Margaret, and many of the nobility, took up arms for the king. Other noblemen lent assistance to the duke of York.

10. All the Yorkists, or partisans of the duke of York, wore white roses, either in their hats or at their breasts. The Lancastrians, or those of the king's party, wore a red rose in the same manner. Whenever two persons happened to meet, one wearing a red rose and the other a white, they drew their swords and fought.

11. Thus the people of England were divided into two great parties, who were ready to cut each other's throats, merely for the difference between a red and white rose.

Wars of the Roses.

1. THE wars of the roses lasted thirty years. Sometimes the white rose was uppermost and sometimes the red. The most celebrated general in these wars was the earl of Warwick. It was chiefly by his means that the soldiers of the white rose gained a decisive victory at Towton, in which thirty-six thousand of the red rose men were killed. The young duke of York was then proclaimed king, under the name of Edward the Fourth.

10. What did the followers of the duke of York wear? Those of the king? What often happened? 11. How were the English people now situated?

CHAPTER CXLVI.—1. How long did the wars of the roses last? What of the earl of Warwick?

2. This was in 1461. But, not long afterward, the earl of Warwick quarrelled with king Edward, and quitted the party of the Yorkists. He took king Henry the Sixth out of prison, and placed him on the throne again, and Edward was compelled to flee over to France.

3. As the earl of Warwick showed himself so powerful in pulling down kings and setting them up again, he gained the name of the King-maker. But he was finally killed in battle, while fighting bravely for the Lancastrians; and then the white rose flourished again.

4. Henry the Sixth and his son were murdered in 1464, and Edward the Fourth became the undisputed king of England. He had fought bravely for the crown, but now that he had got firm possession of it, he became idle and voluptuous.

5. He was a cruel tyrant, too. Having resolved to put one of his brothers to death, he gave him the choice of dying in whatever manner he pleased. His brother, who was a great lover of good liquor, chose to be drowned in a hogshead of wine.

6. Edward the Fourth died in 1483. He left two young children, the eldest of whom now became king Edward the Fifth. But these poor children had a wicked uncle for a guardian. He was called Richard Crookback, duke of Gloucester. Most historians say that he was a horrible figure to look at, having a hump-back, a withered arm, and a very ugly face. This frightful personage was determined to make himself king.

7. He took care that the little king Edward and his brother should lodge in the tower of London. One night, while the two children were sound asleep in each other's arms, some villains came and smothered them with the bolsters of the bed. They were buried at the foot of a staircase. So Richard Crookback, the murderer, became king of England. He committed a thousand crimes for the sake of getting the crown, but he did not keep it long.

8. Henry Tudor, the young earl of Richmond, was now the only remaining heir of king Henry the Sixth. The French supplied him with the means of making war against Richard Crookback. He landed in England, and gained a victory at Bosworth.

9. When the soldiers of Richmond examined the dead bodies that lay in heaps on the battle-field, they found the hump-backed Richard among them, with the golden crown upon his head. They put it on the head of Richmond, and hailed him King Henry the Seventh.

10. The new king married a daughter of Edward the Fourth; and at their wedding they each wore a red rose intertwined with a white one; for the wars of the roses were now over at last.

Reigns of the Tudor Princes.

1. HENRY the Seventh (the late earl of Richmond) began his reign in 1485. He was a crafty king, and cared much more for his own power and wealth than for the happiness of his subjects. But, for his own sake, he desired to reign peaceably, without foreign wars or civil commotions.

2. During his reign, two impostors appeared in England, each of whom pretended that he had a better right to the crown than Henry the Seventh had. One was Lambert Simnel, the son of a baker; but he called himself a nephew of Edward the Fourth. The other was Perkin Warbeck, the son of a Flemish butcher. He pretended to be one of the little princes whom Richard Crookback had smothered in the tower.

3. Many knights and noblemen of England were led into rebellion by each of these impostors. But finally they were both taken prisoners. Perkin Warbeck was hanged, and Lambert Simnel was set to washing dishes in the king's kitchen.

4. Henry the Seventh died in 1509. He had been a great lover of money, and put all that he could lay his hands on into his own purse. A sum equal to fifty millions of dollars was found in his palace, after his death.

5. His son, Henry the Eighth, began to reign at the age of eighteen. He was a haughty, stern, hard-hearted, and tyrannical king. Whenever he got angry, and that was not seldom, the heads of some of his subjects were sure to be cut off. This royal villain had six wives. One died a natural death; he was divorced from two, cut off the heads of two others, and one outlived him.

6. The reign of Henry the Eighth was chiefly remarkable on account of the Reformation in England. By this term is meant the substitution of the Protestant religion for the Roman Catholic. Until this period, the pope of Rome had claimed authority over England.

7. But Henry the Eighth took all the power to himself. If any of his subjects dared to have a religion unlike the king's, they were either beheaded or burnt. The king was so proud of his religious character that he called himself Defender of the Faith!

8. The old tyrant died in 1547, at the age of fifty-six. One of his last acts was to cause the earl of Surrey to be beheaded, although he was guilty of no crime; and with that innocent blood upon his soul, king Henry the Eighth was summoned to the judgment-seat.

9. His son, Edward the Sixth, was but nine or ten, years old when he ascended the throne. He was a fine and promising boy, but lived only to the age of sixteen. His sister Mary succeeded him, in 1553.

6. What great event occurred in this reign? What is meant by the Reformation? Who had claimed authority over England? 7. Why was the king called Defender of the Faith? 8. When did Henry VIII. die? What was the last act of his reign? 9. What of Edward VI.? When did Mary begin to reign?

10. She bears the dreadful title of Bloody Queen Mary. Being a Roman Catholic, she caused persons to be burnt alive who denied the authority of the pope. Many bishops and godly ministers thus perished at the stake.

11. But, even in the midst of the flames, they were happier than the Bloody Queen Mary. It seemed as if a fire were consuming her miserable heart. She knew that everybody hated her, and, after a reign of only five years, she died of mere trouble and anguish.

QUEEN ELIZABETH AND HER COURT.

The reign of Elizabeth.

1. THE famous Elizabeth, sister to the Bloody Mary, became queen in 1558. She was a Protestant, and therefore there were no more martyrdoms in England.

2. Elizabeth was truly a great queen, and England was never more respected than while this mighty woman held the sceptre in her hand. But she possessed hardly any of the kind of virtues that a woman ought to have. Yet she prided herself greatly on her beauty.

CHAPTER CXLVIII.—1. When did Elizabeth ascend the throne? What was her religion? 2. What of her?

3. Many princes and great men desired to marry Elizabeth; but she chose to remain sole mistress of her person and her kingdom. And as she herself refused to take a husband, it made her very angry whenever any of the ladies of her court got married.

4. Philip the Second of Spain asked her hand in marriage. On her refusal, he sent his Invincible Armada to invade England. But a storm destroyed part of the ships, and the English fleet conquered the remainder, as I have already told you.

5. Some of the actions of queen Elizabeth were almost as bad as those of old Harry, her father. When Mary, the beautiful queen of Scots, fled into England for protection, she caused her to be imprisoned eighteen years. And after those long and weary years, the poor queen was tried and condemned to die.

6. Elizabeth was resolved upon her death, but she was loth to incur the odium of such a crime. She therefore endeavored to persuade the jailer to murder her. But as he steadfastly refused, Elizabeth signed the death-warrant, and the unfortunate Mary was beheaded.

7. When queen Elizabeth grew old, she could not bear to look at her gray hairs, and withered and wrinkled visage, in a glass. Her maids of honor, therefore, had all the trouble of dressing her. Part of their business was to paint her face. The queen, of course, expected them to make her cheeks look red and rosy.

8. But, instead of putting the red paint on her cheeks, these mischievous maids of honor used sometimes to put it all upon her nose. So they set this great queen on her throne, in the presence of her court, with her nose as bright as if it had caught fire.

9. The courtiers often made a fool of Elizabeth by pretending to be in love with her, even when she was old enough to be their grandmother. Among others, the earl of Essex paid his addresses to her, and became her chief favorite. But, at last, he offended her, and was sentenced to lose his head.

10. When the earl of Essex was dead and gone, queen Elizabeth bitterly repented of her cruelty. She was now very old, and she knew that nobody loved her, and there were none that she could love. She pined away, and never held up her head again; and in her seventieth year she died.

11. The bishops, and the wise and learned men of her court, came to look at her dead body. They were sad, for they doubted whether England would ever be so prosperous again, as while it was under the government of this mighty queen. And, in truth, of all the monarchs who have held the sceptre since that day, there has not been one who could sway it like the gray-haired woman, whose spirit had now passed into eternity.

11. How did the great men of the court feel when they saw Elizabeth's dead body? What may be said of her government?

Accession of the House of Stuart.

1. ELIZABETH was succeeded by James Stuart, king of Scotland. He was the sixth James that had ruled over that kingdom, but was James the First of England. He began to reign in 1603. James inherited the English crown, because he was the grandson of a daughter of Henry the Seventh. His mother was Mary, queen of Scots, whom Elizabeth had beheaded.

2. The whole island of Great Britain was now under the same government. This event put an end to the wars which had raged between England and Scotland during many centuries. But it was a long time before the English and Scotch could live together like brethren.

3. As for king James, he was much fitter for a schoolmaster than for a king. He had a good deal of learning, and wrote several books. He delighted to talk Hebrew, and Greek, and Latin; and his courtiers were often puzzled to understand him.

4. James thought himself as wise as Solomon; and it must be owned that he possessed a sort of cunning, which greatly resembled wisdom. This was seen in his discovery of the Gunpowder Plot. The Roman Catholics had laid a plan to blow up the parliament house, at a time when the king, the lords, and all the members of parliament, would be assembled there. If it had succeeded, the whole government of England would have been destroyed.

5. But king James smelt out the plot. He set people on the watch, and they caught a man by the name of Guy Fawkes, in a cellar, where thirty-six barrels of gunpowder were concealed. Fawkes told the king the names of eighty of his accomplices. He and they were all put to death.

6. James had one good quality which kings have not very often possessed. He hated war. His reign was therefore peaceable. He died in 1625, and was succeeded by Charles the First, his son.

7. It was easy to foresee that this king would have a more troublesome reign than his father. There were now many Puritans in England. These people were opposed to the Church of England, to the bishops, and to all the ceremonies which had not been cast off when the Roman Catholic faith was abolished.

8. They likewise thought that the kings of England had too much power. They were determined that, thenceforward, the king should not reign merely for his own pleasure and glory, but for the good of the people. Charles, on the other hand, seemed to think that the common people were created only that kings might have subjects to rule over.

9. In the early part of his reign, the king persecuted the Puritans. He would not allow the Puritan ministers to preach, nor the people to attend their meetings. Their sufferings were great, although the king dared not burn them, as the bloody queen Mary would have done.

10. Many of them crossed the ocean, and sought religious freedom in New England. John Hampden, John Pym, and Oliver Cromwell, were once on the point of coming to this country. But the king prevented them, and these three persons afterward became his most powerful enemies.

Wars of the King and Parliament.

1. TILL the reign of Charles the First, the English parliament had hardly ever dared to oppose the wishes of the king. But now there were continual disputes between the king and parliament; and if Charles dissolved one parliament, the next was sure to be still more obstinate.

2. Matters went on in this way, till at length the quarrel grew too violent to be settled by mere words. Both parties then betook themselves to their weapons. The king was supported by a great majority of the lords and gentlemen of England and Scotland, and by all the bishops and clergy of the English church. All the gay and wild young men in the kingdom likewise drew their swords for the crown. The whole of king Charles' party were called cavaliers.

3. Some of the noblemen and gentry took the side of the parliament; but its adherents were chiefly mechanics, tradesmen, and common people. Because their hair was cropped close to their skulls, their enemies gave them the nickname of roundheads. The cavaliers dressed magnificently, and wore long hair, hanging in love-locks down their temples. They drank wine, and sang songs, and rode merrily to the battle-field.

4. The roundheads wore steeple-crowned hats and sad-colored garments. They sang nothing but psalms, and spent much of their leisure time in praying and hearing sermons. They were a stern and resolute set of men, and when once they had made up their minds to tear down the throne, it must be done, though the realm of England should be rent asunder in the struggle.

5. The civil war between the cavaliers and roundheads began in 1642. Many battles were fought, and rivers of English blood were shed on both sides.

6. It was not long before Oliver Cromwell began to be a famous leader, on the side of the parliament. He pretended to fight only for religion and the good of the people. But he was an ambitious man, and meant to place himself in the king's seat when it became empty.

7. Cromwell gained one battle after another, and rose from step to step, till there was no man so powerful and renowned as he. Finally, in 1645, he defeated the king's army at the bloody battle of Naseby. King Charles afterward surrendered himself to the Scots, and they delivered him to the parliament.

8. The parliament brought the king to trial as a traitor. The court that tried him consisted of a hundred and thirty-three persons. They declared him guilty, and sentenced him to lose his head. When the people of England heard the sentence, they trembled.

9. For it was a great and terrible thing, that their anointed sovereign should die the death of a traitor. Many kings, it is true, had died by the hands of their enemies, but it had always been in darkness and secrecy. But king Charles was tried and condemned in the face of all the world.

10. On the thirtieth of January, 1649, they brought the king from his palace to the scaffold. It was covered with black cloth. In the centre of the scaffold stood a block, and by the block stood an executioner, with an axe in his hand, and a black mask over his face.

11. The steel-clad soldiers of Cromwell surrounded the scaffold. But the king walked to his death with as firm a step as when he went to his coronation. "They have taken away my corruptible crown," said he, "but I go to receive an incorruptible one."

12. When king Charles had knelt down and prayed, he cast a pitying glance upon the people round the scaffold; for he feared that direful judgments would come upon the land which was now to be stained with its monarch's blood.

13. But, as he saw that his enemies were resolved to slay him, he calmly laid his head upon the block. The executioner raised his axe, and smote off the king's head at a single blow. Then, lifting it in his hand, he cried aloud—"This is the head of a traitor!" But the people shuddered; for they doubted whether it was the head of a traitor, and they knew that it was the head of a king.

The Protectorate and the Restoration.

1. AND now the throne of England was empty. The king, indeed, had left a son, but if he had shown himself in London, he would soon have died the same death as his father. The young prince was defeated in battle, and compelled to flee. At one time, his enemies pressed him so hard, that he climbed up among the thick branches of an oak, and thus saved his life.

2. The government, at this period, was called a republic. There was no king, no lords, no bishops, nothing but the House of Commons, or the lower house of parliament. All the real power of the kingdom was possessed by Oliver Cromwell, because he was at the head of the army.

3. No sooner did the parliament dare to oppose Cromwell's wishes, than he led three hundred soldiers into the hall where they were sitting. He told the parliament men that they were a pack of traitors, and bade them get out of the house. When they were gone, he summoned another parliament. The principal man in it was called Praise-God Barebones. This name sounded so well that it was bestowed on the whole parliament.

4. But Praise-God Barebones' parliament did not keep together a great while. At the end of five months they besought Cromwell to send them about their business, and take the government into his own hands. This was just what Cromwell wanted.

5. In 1654, he was proclaimed Lord Protector of the Commonwealth of England. He held this high office four years. He was a sagacious and powerful ruler, and made himself feared and respected, both in England and foreign countries.

6. But he had no peace nor quiet as long as he lived. He constantly wore iron armor under his clothes, dreading that some of his enemies would attempt to stab him. He never enjoyed any quiet sleep, for the thought always haunted him, that conspirators might be hidden in the closet or under the bed.

7. Cromwell was released from this miserable way of life by a slow fever, of which he died in 1658, at the age of fifty-nine. His son Richard succeeded him in the office of Lord Protector; but he had not ability enough to keep the kingdom in subjection.

8. Richard Cromwell soon resigned his office, and the government then became unsettled. The people began to think that England would never be prosperous again, unless the hereditary sovereigns were re-established on the throne.

9. The man who had most influence in the army, after Oliver Cromwell's death, was General George Monk. He invited the eldest son of Charles the First to return to England, promising that the soldiers would assist in making him king.

10. The banished prince had been living in different parts of Europe, and was reduced to great poverty. He lost no time in coming to England, and entered London in triumph. At sight of their new king, it seemed as if the people were mad with joy. He was crowned in 1660, by the title of Charles the Second.

7. When did he die? Who succeeded him? 8. What of Richard Cromwell?
9. What did General Monk do? 10. What of the banished prince? When was Charles II. crowned?

11. Many of the persons who had assisted in de-throning and beheading the king's father were hanged. The body of Oliver Cromwell was taken out of the grave, and hung upon the gallows, and afterward buried beneath it. Yet it would have been well for England, if that stern but valiant ruler could have come to life again.

The Revolution of 1688, and other matters.

1. CHARLES the Second had lived a careless and vicious life during his banishment, and his habits did not improve, now that he was on the throne. He spent whole days and nights in drinking wine, and in all sorts of profligate pleasures.

2. In the year 1665, there was a great plague in London, of which nearly a hundred thousand persons died. The next year, a terrible fire broke out, which consumed a great part of the city. But neither of these calamities made any impression on the king.

11. What of the body of Cromwell?

CHAPTER CLII.—1. What of Charles II, during his banishment? 2. What of the plague? What of the great fire?

3. He suffered the nation to be ruled by unprincipled and wicked men. It was safer to be wicked, in those days, than to be virtuous and upright. Virtue and religion were looked upon as treason, in the reign of Charles the Second. This good-for-nothing monarch died, in the midst of his drunkenness and debauchery, in the year 1685. His brother succeeded him, and was called James the Second.

4. James was a Roman Catholic; and, from the moment that he ascended the throne, he thought of nothing but how to bring Great Britain again under the power of the pope of Rome. This project rendered him hateful to his subjects.

5. He had not been on the throne more than three years, when some of the greatest men in England determined to get rid of him. They invited William, prince of Orange, to come over from Holland and be their king.

6. This prince had no title to the crown, except that he had married the daughter of James II. But no sooner had he landed in England, than all the courtiers left king James, and hurried to pay obeisance to the prince of Orange. He and his wife were crowned in 1689, as king William and queen Mary. James made his escape into France. Some of his adherents endeavored to set him on the throne again, but without success.

7. This change of government of which I have been speaking, is generally called the glorious Revolution of 1688. Some regulations were now adopted, in order to restrain the royal power.

8. King William was very fond of hunting, and this amusement hastened his death. He was thrown from his horse, in the year 1702, and died in about a month. His queen had died some years before him.

9. Anne, another daughter of the banished James, now ascended the throne. The reign of this queen was a glorious one for England. The renowned duke of Marlborough gained many splendid victories over the French. But the chief glory of the age proceeded from the great writers who lived in her time.

10. Queen Anne reigned twelve years, and died in 1714, at the age of forty-nine. She was the last sovereign reign of England who belonged to the family of the

The Hanoverian Kings of Great Britain.

1. THE old banished king James had died in France, in the year 1701. He left a son, whom Louis the Fourteenth caused to be proclaimed king of England. But the English people called him the Pretender. They were determined not to have a Roman Catholic king. The nearest Protestant heir to the throne was the elector of Hanover, a German prince, whose mother was a grand-daughter of James the First. He was now about fifty-five years old.

2. This old German elector was proclaimed king of England, by the title of George the First. With him began the dynasty of the House of Hanover, the descendants of which still (1860) occupy the throne. He could not speak a word of English, and knew nothing about the kingdom which he was to govern.

CHAPTER CLIII.—1. When and where had James II. died? What did the English people call James' son? Who was the nearest heir to the throne? 2. Who was George I.? What of him?

3. He spent much of his time in his native country, for he dearly loved Hanover, and could never feel at home in the palace of the English kings. He died in 1727, and was succeeded by his son, George the Second, who was likewise a native of Germany.

4. During part of George the Second's reign, England was at war with Spain and France. The king commanded his army in person. The English were victorious in the battle of Dettingen, but they lost the battle of Fontenoy.

5. In 1745, the grandson of James the Second attempted to win back the crown of his ancestors. He landed in Scotland, and marched into England with a small army of Scottish mountaineers. But he was at last defeated, and forced to fly; and many of his adherents were beheaded or hanged.

6. In 1755, another war began between the French and English, and some of their principal battles were fought in America. The city of Quebec and the Canadas were conquered by the English during this war. Shortly after this event, George the Second died, at the age of seventy-seven.

3. When did George II. come to the throne? 4. With what countries was England at war during his reign? What battle did the English gain? What did they lose? 5. What took place in 1745? 6. What of the war in 1755? What of Quebec and the Canadas?

7. His grandson, George the Third, began to reign in 1760, when he was about twenty-one years old. No king ever ascended the throne with better prospects. Yet so many misfortunes befell him, that it would have been far better for him to have died on his coronation day.

8. George the Third was a man of respectable common sense. In his private conduct he was much better than the generality of kings. But he was very obstinate, and often would not take the advice of men wiser than himself. Had he done so, it is probable that the American Revolution would not have happened in his reign.

9. I shall speak of this great event hereafter. The loss of America, together with many other troubles, contributed to drive George the Third to madness. His first fit of derangement happened in 1788, and lasted several months.

10. In 1804, he had another turn, and a third in 1810. From this latter period, he continued a madman till his dying day. While the armies of England were gaining glorious victories, and grand events were continually taking place, the poor old crazy king knew nothing of the matter. Death released him from this miserable condition, in the eighty-second year of his age.

11. The son of the old king was very wild in his youth, and he never became a really good man. He had been declared Prince Regent in consequence of his father's insanity. In 1820, he was crowned as king George the Fourth.

12. Even when he was quite an old man, this king cared as much about dress as any young coxcomb. He had a great deal of taste in such matters, and it is a pity that he was a king, because he might otherwise have been an excellent tailor.

13. During his regency, England combatted the power of Bonaparte. By her gigantic power, aided by the other kingdoms of Europe, that famous conqueror was finally overthrown. The only event of George IV.'s reign worth recording here, was the admission of Catholics to sit in Parliament.

14. The king died in 1830, and was succeeded by his brother, William IV. This reign is remarkable in British history as having been the only one in which the country was not engaged in some foreign war.

11. When was George IV. crowned? 12. What of his taste in dress? 13. What events took place during his regency? His reign? 14. When did George IV. die? Who succeeded him? For what is this reign remarkable? When did William IV. die? Who succeeded him?

William IV. died in 1837, and was succeeded by his niece, Victoria I.

15. Queen Victoria, who is still (1874) upon the throne, has obtained the admiration of the world for her domestic virtues, and the honorable character of her administration. England has been prosperous during her reign, though wars in Afghanistan, China, India, the Crimea, Abyssinia, and a rebellion in Canada, have consumed immense sums of money, and sacrificed hundreds of thousands of lives. In 1860, Victoria's eldest son, the prince of Wales, visited Canada and the United States.

15. What of queen Victoria? What of wars? What of the prince of Wales?

CHAPTER CLIV.—1 What of the names in Wales?

Catesby ap Catesby? Yet such names are common in Wales.

2. Some of the people speak English, but most of them use the same language that was spoken by their ancestors. It is nearly the same as the original language of Ireland and the Highlands of Scotland. This seems to show that the people are of the same stock as the Irish and the Scotch Highlanders.

3. The early history of Wales is involved in obscurity. When the Romans came to Britain, the Welsh mountains were inhabited by a rough set of people, who gave terrible blows with their clubs. These defended their mountains so fiercely, that the Romans never got possession of the country.

4. When the Saxons came, they subdued all England, and a small portion of Wales; but the greater part held out against them to the last. Thus the Welsh princes maintained their independence, as well against the Roman as the Saxon invaders. These princes appear to have lived in strong stone castles, which, in time of war, were defended by the people around them. The ruins of some of these castles are still to be seen.

2. Their language? Of what stock are the Welsh people? 3. What of the early history of Wales? The ancient inhabitants? 4. What of the Saxons? What of the Welsh princes?

5. In these ancient times there was a strange set of men in Wales, called bards. These sang songs and told stories about the brave deeds of the Welsh princes and heroes. The people loved to listen to these men, for their tales related to fierce wars and bloody battles, of which such rude nations are ever fond.

6. Some of these bards had a wonderful gift for singing and story-telling. These were often taken into the castles of the princes, and here they led a merry life, between singing and feasting. In order to keep up their influence, they pretended to be prophets, and both the people and the princes believed they could foretell future events. Perhaps, too, the bards believed it themselves, for nothing is more easy than self-deception. At all events, the people paid them the greatest reverence.

7. There is nothing so troublesome to a king as a tribe of people maintaining their independence in his neighborhood. His pride is mortified, his indignation roused, by seeing people thus set up for themselves. He thinks everybody ought to bow to power, and feels toward them very much as an old hunter does toward a family of wolves or foxes, that persist in living among the rocks near him, in spite of all his efforts to kill them.

8. So it was with the kings of England with regard to Wales. With a view, therefore, to subdue these Welsh wolves and foxes of the mountains, they sent a great many armies against them. But the mountaineers were too cunning to be caught, until about the year 1285. Edward First was then king of England, and Llewellyn prince of Wales.

9. The bards were always great lovers of hard fighting, and therefore they incited the Welsh princes to the boldest deeds. Llewellyn had been told by one of these bards that he should become master of the whole island of Britain.

10. Accordingly, when the forces of Edward First came against him, he rashly led his little army against the English, and was defeated and slain. He was succeeded by his brother David, but he too was taken and hung on a gibbet, for the crime of bravely defending his country.

11. King Edward was very angry at the bards for stirring up the people to resist his arms. He therefore caused them all to be assembled and put to death.

8. What did the kings of England do? Who was prince of Wales in 1285?
9. What did the bards do? What did one of them tell Llewellyn? 10. What did Llewellyn do? His fate? Who defeated him? What of his brother David?

little better. From this time, the eldest son of the king of England has been called prince of Wales.

12. Thus, with the death of David, ended the line of Welsh princes, and thus ended the independence of Wales. Since that time, the Welsh have been a part of the British nation, and they now weave stockings, and dig coal and iron, instead of fighting, as their fathers did in the times of Llewellyn.

The Story of Scotland.

1. THE first inhabitants of Scotland appear to have been Celts, and probably were the same as the early Britons, Welsh, and Irish. They defended themselves against the Romans, who could never subdue the people of the Highlands. They were so troublesome that the Roman generals caused a wall to be built from the Solway Frith to the river Tyne.

2. Thus the Scots were shut up in their own country, like a herd of unruly cattle; but they contrived to get over the wall pretty often. Three or four hundred years after Christ, a tribe of Goths, called Picts, came over from the continent, and settled in this country. These inhabited the Lowlands, and lived by agriculture. The Scots dwelt in the mountains, carrying on war, and subsisting by the chase.

3. Thus the nation became divided into Highlanders and Lowlanders, and thus, to some extent, the people remain to this day. They live peaceably now, but in early days, they quarrelled with great fierceness. I cannot undertake to tell you of their battles, and indeed we know but little about them.

4. In 839, it is said that Kenneth the Second, who was a Highland leader, subdued the Picts, and became the first king of all Scotland. From his time to that of Edward the First of England, there were a good many sovereigns, but their story is not worth repeating.

5. I have told you in the history of England how Edward Longshanks, the same that subdued Wales, made war upon the Scotch, imprisoned Wallace, and had prepared a great army for the final subjugation of Scotland, when he died. I have told you how his son, Edward the Second, was beaten by Robert Bruce at the glorious battle of Bannockburn. This event occurred in 1313, and secured the freedom of Scotland, which had been threatened by the English kings.

6. From this time, the history of Scotland tells of little but civil wars and bloody battles with England, till the time of James the Fifth. He assumed the reins of government in 1513, at the age of thirteen years. He lost the confidence of his army, and they deserted him in the hour of need. This broke his heart, and he starved himself to death, at the age of thirty-one.

7. His daughter was the beautiful and unfortunate Mary, queen of Scots, as she is called, and whom I have mentioned in the history of England. She was educated in France, and was not only very handsome, but she was very accomplished. While she was yet a young lady, she was taken to Scotland and became queen.

8. But beauty, accomplishments, and power, cannot insure happiness. Mary's kingdom was in a state of great trouble; the people were divided among themselves, and Mary found it impossible to govern them. At length, she became afraid that they would kill her, and, to save her life, she set out for England, and placed herself under the protection of Elizabeth.

9. This was about as wise as it would be in a fly to seek protection of a spider. Elizabeth treated Mary very much as a spider would a fly that falls into his power. She caused her to be put in prison, and finally took her life.

10. The son of Mary, James Sixth of Scotland, succeeded his mother, and, after the death of Elizabeth, became king of England also, under the title of James First. Though he lived in England, he did not forget Scotland. He loved learning, and caused schools to be established in his native country, where all the boys and girls might learn to read and write. These schools are continued to this day, and therefore it is very uncommon to meet with a Scotchman who is not a fair match for a Yankee.

11. From the time of king James, in 1603, Scotland has been attached to the British crown. She has sometimes rebelled, and in the cause of the Stuarts she fought a good many battles. But for many years Scotland has been a peaceful portion of the British kingdom.

10. Who succeeded Mary? What did James do? 11. What of Scotland since 1603?

About Ireland.

1. THE history of Ireland, or “Green Erin,” as it is called, is full of interesting matter, and I am sorry that I can only bestow upon it one brief chapter. The first inhabitants, like the Britons, were hard-fisted Celts, who fought with clubs, and seemed to love fighting better than feasting.

2. They were divided into many tribes, and their leaders were called kings. These were constantly quarrelling with each other, and thus the people had plenty of their favorite sport. The early Irish, like the other Celtic tribes, were devoted to the religion of the druids, but about the year 550, a Christian missionary came into the country, whose name was Patrick.

3. He seems to have been a wise and good man, and the people liked him very much. So they adopted Christianity, and under its influence gradually became somewhat civilized. Patrick lived to a great age, but at length he was buried at Doune.

4. When he was gone, the people told pretty large stories about him, and finally they considered him more holy than any other man, and called him a saint. To this day, they consider St. Patrick as in heaven, watching over the interests of Ireland. They pray to him, and to do him honor, set apart one day in the year for going to church, drinking whiskey, and breaking each other's heads with clubs.

5. Among the curious notions still entertained by the Irish with regard to St. Patrick, is this. In Ireland there are no serpents, or venomous reptiles, and the people firmly believe that St. Patrick put an end to them, and freed the island from them all forever.

6. At the lake of Killarney, the peasants still preserve the following ludicrous tradition. When the labors of St. Patrick were drawing to a close, there was one enormous serpent who sturdily refused to emigrate, and baffled the attempts of the good saint for a long time.

7. He haunted the romantic shores of Killarney, and was so well pleased with his place of residence, that he never contemplated the prospect of removing, without a deep sigh. At length, St. Patrick, having procured a large oaken chest with nine strong bolts to secure its lid, took it on his shoulder one fine sun-shiny morning, and trudged over to Killarney, where he found the serpent basking in the sun.

8. "Good morrow to ye!" cried the saint. "Bad luck to ye!" replied the serpent. "Not so, my friend," replied the good saint; "you speak unwisely; I'm your friend. To prove which haven't I brought you over this beautiful house as a shelter to you? So be aisy, my darling." But the serpent, being a cunning reptile, understood what blarney meant, as well as the saint himself.

9. Still, not wishing to affront his apparently friendly visitor, he said, by way of excuse, that the chest was not large enough for him. St. Patrick assured him that it would accommodate him very well. "Just get into it, my darlint, and see how aisy you'll be." The serpent thought to cheat the saint, so he whipped into the chest, but left an inch or two of his tail hanging out over the edge.

10. "I told you so," said he; "there's not room for the whole of me!" "Take care of your tail, my darling!" cried the saint, as he whacked the lid down upon the serpent. In an instant the tail disappeared, and St. Patrick proceeded to fasten all the bolts. He then took the chest on his shoulders. "Let me out," cried the serpent. "Aisy," cried the saint; "I'll let you out to-morrow."

11. So saying, he threw the box into the waters of the lake, to the bottom of which it sank, to rise no more. But forever afterward, the fishermen affirmed that they heard the voice of the poor cheated reptile eagerly inquiring, "Is to-morrow come yet? Is to-morrow come yet?" So much for St. Patrick.

12. In the time of Henry the Second of England, Ireland was conquered, and since that period has been under the English kings. It has, however, been very ill governed. King James the First did something toward improving the condition of the people, but neither he nor any subsequent king has been able to get St. Patrick out of their heads.

12. When was Ireland conquered? How has it since been governed? What of king James I.?

13. The saint was a Roman Catholic, and the greater part of the people are Catholics to this day. They are dissatisfied with the English government, and most of them deem its conduct to have been selfish, cruel, and unwise. The people have often been in a state of rebellion, and though the leaders are ever crushed by the power of the government, still others rise up to head them.

14. Thus Ireland has been for years in an almost constant state of agitation. Thousands of lives have been lost in attempts to obtain the freedom of the country, but in vain. In 1847, a plague carried off a million of the inhabitants. Of late, millions have emigrated, and it is to be hoped that happier prospects are before the people of this island.

13. What is the religion of Ireland? Do the people like the government of England? What excites them to rebellion? 14. What is the present state of Ireland? What of a plague? Emigration?

About Various Matters and Things.

1. I HAVE now told you something about England, Wales, Scotland, and Ireland; but it is impossible to do justice to so great a subject, in this little book. I have told you something about the kings, and the battles that have been fought.

2. But there are a great many interesting stories that I have been obliged to omit. If I had time, I could give you a more particular account of the Celtic religion taught by the druids, which was very curious, together with the manners of these Celts in other respects, which you would find very amusing.

3. I could tell you of Odin, or Woden, the Scandinavian hero, who established a strange mythology, which pervaded the northern nations of Europe, and became, for a time, the religion of some of the inhabitants of Britain. I could tell you how Christianity was introduced into England, sixty years after Christ; and how at first the people built rude churches of wood, and how they afterward constructed those fine Gothic buildings in which the people worship now.

4. If I had time, I could tell you of the Gypsies, a strange race of people to be found in most countries of Europe, but particularly in England, Spain, Hungary, and Bohemia; who wander from place to place, having no fixed homes; who come from some far land, but whether from Egypt or Asia, none can tell; who continue from age to age the same, while the nations among which they wander rise and fall, flourish and decay.

5. If I had time, I could tell you some curious stories about a famous robber by the name of Robin Hood, who lived in the woods, and performed strange things. I could also tell you of many celebrated people more worthy of being remembered than this freebooter.

6. I could tell you of Dr. Watts, who wrote that beautiful little book entitled Hymns for Infant Minds, a work which has given more pleasure, and done more good, than all the battles of the greatest conqueror that ever lived.

7. I could tell you of Hannah More, who wrote that beautiful story entitled the Shepherd of Salisbury

4. What of the Gypsies? Where do they live? 5. Who was Robin Hood?
6. What of Dr. Watts?

Plain; of Miss Edgeworth, who wrote the story of Frank; and Daniel De Foe, who composed that beautiful fancy story called Robinson Crusoe.

8. It would be very pleasant to read about these people; they seem like friends to us, and we should like to know where they lived, how they looked, and what adventures they met with. But these and other matters relating to the history of that beautiful and interesting country from which our forefathers came, I must leave for the present.

9. I have, then, only to add, that while you can read the history of the British nation in books, you can best study the character and manners of the people at home, in their own country. An Englishman is very agreeable in his own house, but out of his country, he is too often disagreeable and unreasonable.

10. The Scotch are a shrewd, money-saving race, and if you will go to their wild country, and pay well for what you want, you will be well served. If a Scotchman leaves his own country, it is generally to better his fortune. The Scotch are sometimes called British Yankees.

11. The Irish are much the same, wherever they may be: cheerful, witty, and generous. They live for to-day, and think little of to-morrow. They are generally without education, but if ignorant, they are better than most other ignorant people. They are of a nation possessing fine qualities, but injured by ages of oppression. They are constantly improving now, and their children may be among our best and happiest citizens.

Review.—The Dark Ages.—Important Inventions, &c.

1. SUCH is my brief story about Europe. I hope I have told you enough to excite your curiosity, and lead you to read larger works than mine, about the nations I have mentioned. You will find the subject very interesting, and worthy of your careful study. I have room now only to mention a few things that have been omitted in the progress of my story.

2. You will remember that Greece was settled before any other portion of Europe, and that the Greeks became a polished and powerful people. You will remember that Rome became a mighty empire, and extended its sway over nearly all parts of the world that were then known.

3. You will remember that four or five hundred years after Christ, the Roman empire was dismembered, and that the northern tribes of Europe spread themselves over Spain, Italy, and Greece. Thus the arts, learning, and refinement, which had been cultivated in these countries, were for a time extinguished, and all Europe was reduced to a nearly barbarous state.

4. This period is called the Dark Ages, because the nations were generally ignorant, fierce, and barbarous. So things continued, till about five hundred years ago, when the light of learning began to return. Since that time, society has advanced in civilization, till it has reached a higher state of improvement than was ever known before.

5. The history of the church of Christ is a subject

CHAPTER CLIX.—2. Which of the nations of Europe was first settled? What of Rome? 3. What happened four or five hundred years after Christ? 4. What period was called the Dark Ages? How long is it since learning began to revive?

at which I have been able only to take an occasional glance. After our Saviour's death, in the year 33, his apostles proceeded to spread the gospel throughout different countries. Paul was the most active and successful of these missionaries. He went several times through Asia Minor, travelled to Greece, and finally to Rome; everywhere preaching the truths of the Christian religion. He died at Rome, in the year 61.

6. At first, the Christians were persecuted by the Roman emperors, but the gospel continued to flourish, until it pervaded most parts of the Roman empire. It was introduced into Britain in the year 60, and into most other parts of Europe at an early period. But it was not till the year 306, when Constantine adopted it, that it found favor with any king or prince in Europe.

7. From this period it advanced rapidly. The mythology of Greece and Rome gave way before it. The horrid sacrifices and gloomy superstitions of the druids yielded to the gentle worship of one God, and the mysterious rites of Odin were forsaken for the religion of the cross.

8. In the course of time, the popes of Rome, finding

5. When did Christ die? What of the apostles? 6. How did the Romans first treat the Christians? When was Christianity introduced into Britain? What took place in 306? 7. What of the progress of Christianity?

that the Christian religion was going to pervade the world, pretended to place themselves at the head of it, that they might thus obtain an influence over mankind. They gradually acquired immense power, which they often used for the worst purposes.

9. In process of time, their authority was lessened, and a large part of the people of Christendom protested against their authority, and were thence called Protestants. At the present day, the pope of Rome has but little power.

10. I have mentioned the Inquisition, in the history of Spain. This was a secret court, whose business it was to arrest and bring to trial those who were suspected of not being true followers of the Popish, or Catholic religion.

11. It appears that this institution was sanctioned by pope Innocent III., in the year 1215. From that time it was gradually extended, and at length was established in Spain, in 1481. Here it acquired great power, and became the most cruel and bloody tribunal that has been known upon the face of the earth.

12. It was for many years a favorite instrument by which the pope of Rome carried on his schemes of

8. What of the popes? 9. Who were called Protestants? What of the pope at the present day? 10. What was the Inquisition? 11. By what pope was it sanctioned? When was it established in Spain? What did it then become?

tyranny. It was introduced into most countries of Europe where the Catholic religion prevailed, but in no country did it exercise its terrible power with such cruel despotism as in Spain. It was not finally abolished till the year 1820.

13. I have not had an opportunity to mention the abbeys and monasteries of Europe. These curious institutions, however, deserve notice. It appears that in most countries there have ever been some people who retire from the active business of life, and shut themselves up for religious contemplation. Such has been the case in Asia, and among the worshippers of Brama, Fo, Lama, and Mahomet, they are still found. Such was also the case among the idolaters of ancient Egypt, Greece, and Rome. Such was the case among the ancient Jews, and such has been the case among the believers of Christ, from very early ages.

14. The first monastery was founded by St. Anthony, in Upper Egypt, A. D. 305. This consisted of a number of huts, in which several hermits dwelt, devoting themselves to penance and prayer. Another monastery was established in France, in the year 360,

12. Into what countries was the Inquisition introduced? Where were its powers most cruelly exercised? 13. What appears to be the case in most countries? Mention some instances. 14. Who founded the first monastery? When? Of what did it consist? When and by whom was a monastery established in France? What of monasteries from this time?

by St. Martin. From this time, these institutions were multiplied, and became established in all Catholic countries. From the eighth to the fifteenth century, they received great encouragement, and many splendid edifices were erected for their use.

ABBAY OF THE MIDDLE AGES.

15. Some were called abbeys, and some monasteries. Many of them were filled with monks and friars, and others with females, called nuns. The splendid remains of many of these edifices are still to be found in England, France, Germany, and other parts of Europe. At first, the inhabitants of monasteries lived in a simple manner, and devoted themselves to religious contemplations. But in after times, the abbeys and monasteries became the seats of voluptuousness. None were permitted to enter them but the monks and nuns; these, therefore, while they pretended to be engaged in religious duties, screened from the eyes of the world, often gave themselves up to luxurious pleasures.

15. Who inhabited them? How did the monks and nuns formerly live? How in later days?

16. These institutions were, however, greatly encouraged by the popes, and it was not until the monstrous corruptions of the Catholic religion brought on the Reformation, in the sixteenth century, that monastic institutions began to decline. They were abolished in England in 1539, and in France in 1790. In several other countries of Europe they have ceased, but still continue in Italy and Spain.

17. In the early ages, war was carried on without guns and cannon. The Greeks and Romans were armed with swords, spears, and battle-axes, and carried shields for defence. The troops of Egypt, Carthage, and Persia, were armed in a similar manner. In the year 1330, gunpowder was invented, and cannon began to be used about the same time. They were first employed by the English at the battle of Cressy, in 1346. On that occasion, king Edward had four pieces of cannon, which greatly aided in gaining the victory.

18. From this time, fire-arms were rapidly introduced, and soon the whole art of war was changed. Bows and arrows, spears and shields, were thrown aside, and contending armies, instead of coming up close to each other, and fighting face to face, learned to shoot each other down at a distance.

19. One of the greatest discoveries of modern times is that quality of the mariner's compass by which it always points to the north pole. This useful instrument, which enables the seaman to traverse the trackless deep, appears to have been in use as early as 1180.

20. But a still more important invention was that of printing, in 1441. Previous to that time, all books were written with the pen. A copy of the Bible was worth as much in ancient times as a good house or a good farm is now. Of course, few people could learn to read, for the want of books. If Peter Parley had lived in those times, I am inclined to think he would have obtained a very poor living.

18. What happened from time to time? 19. What is a great discovery of modern times? When was the mariner's compass first used? 20. When was printing invented? How were books formerly made?

CHAPTER CLX.—AMERICA.

About America.

1. WE have long been occupied with the three great divisions of the eastern continent, Asia, Africa, and Europe. Let us now leave these countries, cross the Atlantic, and come to our own continent of America.

2. This continent, as you will see by the map, consists of two parts, North and South America. These are united by a narrow strip of land, called the isthmus of Darien, about sixty miles in width; at the narrowest part it is but thirty-seven miles. This vast continent is about nine thousand miles in length, and is nearly equal in extent to Asia. The whole population is estimated at nearly seventy millions.

3. The northern part of America is excessively cold. Whether it is there bounded by the sea, or whether it extends to the north pole, we cannot tell. Greenland, the coldest inhabited country on the globe, was formerly considered a part of our continent, but is now thought to be an island.

4. The countries in North America are the island of Iceland, Greenland, the Polar Regions, inhabited by the Esquimaux and other tribes of Indians; British America, Russian America, the United States, Mexico, and Central America.

5. Between North and South America are a number of beautiful islands, called the West Indies. South America is divided into Venezuela, New Grenada, Equator, Peru, Bolivia, Chili, and the United Provinces. These are republics. Brazil was a province of Portugal, but is now an independent empire. Patagonia is a land thinly settled by uncivilized tribes. Guiana consists of a French, Dutch, and British colony.

6. I have said that it was extremely cold at the northern part of North America. In this dreary region, no trees are to be found, and no plants flourish. For nine months in the year, the sea is frozen, and scarcely a living thing is able to dwell there. Ever in summer nothing is seen but now and then a lonely white bear, or a solitary reindeer feeding upon moss.

7. The English and Americans have sent many ships to these desolate scenes, at first to discover whether there was any passage by water from the east to the west, and afterward to make experiments in magnetism, and other strange things. The adventurers in these ships saw many marvellous sights. Dr. Kane, in 1860, found a natural shaft of green basalt, shaped exactly like a monument, and looking precisely like the work of men's hands! He named it "Tennyson's Monument," in honor of an English poet.

8. As you proceed south, you meet with a few willow and birch trees, and some hardy plants. Still further south, the vegetation improves, wild animals be come abundant, and wild birds are seen swimming in the waters, or hovering in the air.

TENNYSON'S MONUMENT.

2. Here you meet with tribes of Esquimaux and Chippewa Indians. When you get to Canada, you find a fruitful country. When you get as far south as the United States, the climate becomes pleasant. In the West Indies, around the Gulf of Mexico, and throughout all the northern parts of South America the climate is that of perpetual spring or summer.

10. As you go further south, it grows cold, and when you get to Cape Horn, you will find it a frozen country, where winter reigns three-fourths of the year. The wild animals of America are very numerous. The bison, wild goat, wild sheep, antelope, many kinds of deer, several kinds of bears, wolves, foxes, and many smaller quadrupeds, together with birds of many kinds, are natives of America.

11. Most of our domestic animals were not found here when the country was first discovered. It is said that the Newfoundland dog, and one or two other species, are natives of this country. But our domestic cattle, all our breeds of sheep, our horses, asses, mules, goats, hens, and cats, were originally brought from Europe. The domestic turkey, goose, and duck, are native birds.

12. The people of America may be divided into two

9. What of Indian tribes? What of the climate as you proceed south to the north of South America? 10. What of Cape Horn? Animals of America? Birds? 11. What animals were found there? What of cattle? Native birds?

great classes. First, the Indians, who were found scattered throughout the American continent when it was first discovered. These consisted of many tribes, living separately, and speaking different languages. And second, the descendants of the Europeans who have come to this country at various times, and settled here. To these we might add several millions of negroes who have been brought from Africa as slaves, or their descendants.

13. America is remarkable for three things: it has the largest lakes, the longest rivers, and the longest chain of mountains to be found in the world. The largest lake is Lake Superior, the longest river is the Mississippi, the longest chain of mountains is that which extends nearly the whole length of the continent, being called the Andes in South America, the Cordilleras in Guatemala and Mexico, and the Rocky Mountains in the United States.

12. Describe the two classes of people in America. 13. For what is America remarkable? What of Lake Superior? Mississippi river? The Andes?

ESQUIMAUX INDIANS.

The First Inhabitants of America.

1. WHEN we look around us, and see such fine cities as Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, New Orleans, Louisville, and Cincinnati; when we see the whole country dotted all over with towns, cities, and villages, we can hardly believe that three hundred and seventy years ago our whole continent of America was unknown to the inhabitants of Europe, Asia, and Africa.

2. Such, however, was the fact. The country was indeed inhabited by many tribes of Indians, but these people had no books, and knew nothing of the rest of the world. Where they came from, or when they first settled in America, no one can certainly tell.

3. It appears that the northern portions of North America, are inhabited by a race of people called Esquimaux. These differ from all the other Indians, and bear a close resemblance to the Laplanders. It seems likely, therefore, that these polar regions were settled by people who came from Europe in boats, many centuries since.

4. That such a thing is possible, appears from the fact that the Norwegians are known to have discovered Iceland, in the eighth century, and that they actually made settlements in Greenland in the ninth century. It appears, then, that portions of America were actually visited by these northern Europeans, who possessed no other than small vessels, and little knowledge in the arts of navigation.

5. But how did the other Indians get to this country? If you will look on a map of the Pacific ocean, you will see, at the northern part, that America and Asia come very close together. They are separated only by Behring's Straits, which are but eighteen miles wide.

6. Across this narrow channel, the people of the present day, living in the neighborhood, are accustomed to pass in their little boats. There is reason to believe, then, that many ages since, some of the Asiatic tribes of Tartars wandered to Behring's Straits, and crossed over to America. These may have been numerous, and consisting of different tribes: a foundation may thus have been laid for the peopling of the American continent.

7. That such was the fact, there is little reason to doubt. There is considerable resemblance between the American Indians and some Asiatic tribes: and they appear to possess some singular customs known in Asia. Thus it would seem that Asia, which furnished the first inhabitants of Africa and Europe, also supplied this continent with the first human beings that trod its shores.

6. What is there reason to believe? 7. Whom do our Indians resemble? How was America probably first peopled?

CHRISTOPHER COLUMBUS.

1. It has been conjectured that the ancient Carthaginians discovered South America, and made settlements there. But this is very unlikely; if it was the case, the event had been forgotten for two or three thousand years. It appears probable that the first inhabitant of the Old World, who gave any information of what was called the New World, was Christopher Columbus. He may, therefore, fairly be called the discoverer of America.

2. This illustrious person was born at Genoa, in Italy, in 1442. As he grew up, he paid great attention to the study of geography. The idea entered his mind that there must be vast tracts of undiscovered country somewhere on the face of the broad ocean.

3. If you will look at the map in the opposite page, you will get an idea of the state of geography in the time of Columbus. The places left white were the only ones known to the Europeans—that is, the whole of Europe, Great Britain, Iceland, the northern coast of Africa, Asia Minor, the entire coast of Arabia, and the coast of Hindostan, or India. Of the rest of the world, then existing and inhabited, they knew nothing whatever.

CHAPTER CLXII.—1. What has been conjectured? What of Christopher Columbus? 2. When and where was he born?

4. Columbus was poor, and had not the means of sailing in search of these unknown lands. He applied for assistance to the rulers of his native country; but they refused it. He next went to Portugal; but there he met with no better success.

5. At last, he came to the court of Spain. Ferdinand and Isabella were king and queen of that country. The king, like almost every body else, treated Columbus with neglect and scorn.

6. But the queen thought so favorably of his project, that she sold her jewels to defray the expenses of the voyage. Three small vessels were equipped with ninety men, and with provisions for one year. Columbus took the command, and sailed from Spain on the third of August, 1492, after having been blessed by the dignitaries of the church.

7. He first held his course southward, and touched at the Canary Islands. Thence he steered straight toward the west. After a few weeks, his men became alarmed. They feared that they should never again behold their native country, nor any land whatever, but should perish in the trackless sea.

8. Columbus did his utmost to encourage them. He promised to turn back, if land were not discovered within three days. On the evening of the last day, at about ten o'clock, he looked from the deck of his vessel, and beheld a light gleaming over the sea. He knew that this light must be on land. In the morning an island was seen, to which Columbus gave the name of St. Salvador.

9. This is one of the Bahama Islands. The natives thronged to the shore, and gazed with wonder at the three ships. Perhaps they mistook them for living monsters, and thought that their white sails were wings.

10. Columbus clothed himself magnificently, and landed with a drawn sword in his hand. His first act was to kneel down and kiss the shore. He then erected a cross, as a symbol that Christianity was now to take the place of paganism. He declared the island to be the property of queen Isabella. He then visited other islands, and returned to Spain, giving an account of the wonderful things he had seen. He made a second, but it was not till his third voyage that he discovered the continent of America.

11. No sooner had Columbus proved that there really was a new world beyond the sea, than several other navigators made voyages thitherward. Americus Vespuccius, a native of Florence, came here, and contrived to have the whole continent called by his name.

12. By degrees, discoveries were made along the whole coast of North and South America. People came from various nations of Europe, and formed settlements there. In relating the history of these settlements, I shall begin with the most northerly, although the earliest colonies were planted in the tropical regions.

A few words about Iceland and Greenland. Settlements of the French in America.

1. I HAVE already told you that the island of Iceland was discovered by a Norwegian pirate, in 860. After this, the Norwegians sent people to settle there. It is a cold, dreary country, and there is a terrible mountain in the island; called Hecla, which sometimes sends out fire, smoke, and ashes, and shakes the whole island with its frightful rumblings.

12. What of other countries?

CHAPTER CLXIII.—1. When was Iceland discovered? What of it? Mt. Hecla?

2. But still the inhabitants increased, and Christianity was introduced in 981. From that time to the present, they have continued a quiet, honest set of people. Their number is now fifty thousand, and they are under the government of Denmark. Greenland was discovered about the same time as Iceland, and settled soon after.

3. The colony continued to flourish till the year 1408. At this time, the winter was so severe as to block up the sea, and since that time nothing has been known of the colony of settlers. It is probable they all perished long since. This settlement was on the northern part of Greenland. Another colony was settled in the south-western part of Greenland; this continues to the present day, but the inhabitants are few in number. Most of them are native Esquimaux; the rest are the descendants of the Norwegian settlers.

4. The portion of America which is now under the government of Great Britain, consists of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Newfoundland, Upper and Lower Canada, and New Britain.

5. All these provinces together compose a tract of country two-thirds as large as the United States. They are bounded north by the Arctic Sea and Baffin's Bay, east by the Atlantic, south by the United States, and west by Russian America and the Pacific ocean.

6. The first people who formed settlements in America, to the northward of the present limits of the United States, were the French. Nearly three hundred years ago, they were in the habit of sending fishing-vessels to this coast.

7. In 1524, a Frenchman, named James Cartier, sailed up the St. Lawrence and built a fort, in which he passed the winter. Settlements were soon after formed in Canada and Nova Scotia. King Henry the Fourth of France appointed the Marquis de la Roche to be governor-general of Canada and the neighboring territories.

8. The city of Quebec was founded in the year 1608. It stands on the river St. Lawrence, about five hundred miles from the sea. Its foundation is on a rock of marble and slate.

9. The French settlers were on very friendly terms with the Indians. They purchased the furs which the red men obtained in their hunting expeditions. These were sent to Europe, and sold at a great profit. Some of the French were married to Indian wives.

10. When the English began to form settlements to the southward of Canada, the French incited the savages to make war upon them. Parties of French and Indians would sometimes come from Quebec or Montreal, and burn the New England villages. The inhabitants were killed, or carried captive to Canada.

11. In 1629, Sir David Keith, a British officer, took Quebec; but it was afterward restored to the French. The people of New England made several attempts to get it back again.

12. In 1711, the British government sent a strong fleet up the St. Lawrence, under the command of Admiral Sir Hovender Walker. There was an army of seven thousand men on board the ships.

13. If they had landed in safety, they would probably have succeeded in taking Quebec. But when they were entering the river, the vessels became involved in a fog. A strong wind began to blow, and drove eight or nine of them upon the rocky shore.

14. The next morning, the French found the dead bodies of a thousand men, in scarlet coats, heaped

The French Colonies conquered by the English.

1. WHENEVER there was a war between France and Old England, there was likewise a war between New England and the French provinces in America. The French built strong fortresses, and the English, or Americans, made great efforts to take them.

2. The French had carefully fortified the city of Louisbourg, on the island of Cape Breton. In 1745, the New England people formed a project of taking it. They raised a strong army, and gave the command to a Boston merchant, named William Pepperell.

3. The army sailed under the escort of an English fleet, and landed on the island of Cape Breton. General Pepperell's men were merely farmers and mechanics; and he himself knew but little about taking fortresses.

4. But if the New Englanders had no skill, they had plenty of courage. They erected batteries, and cannonaded the city for about a fortnight; and then the French commander hauled down his flag. The conquest of Louisbourg was considered a very brilliant exploit.

5. Louisbourg was restored to the French, at the close of the war. But it was again taken by General Wolfe, in 1758. The same general soon afterward led an army against Quebec.

6. This city was so strongly fortified, that it appeared almost impossible to take it. It had a citadel, which was built on a rock several hundred feet high; and there were strong walls all round the city. And besides the French garrison within the walls, there was a large French army on the outside.

7. But General Wolfe was determined to take Quebec, or lose his life in the attempt. After trying various other methods, he led his army from the shore of the river up a steep precipice. When they reached the top, they were on a level with the walls of Quebec.

8. This bold movement was performed in the night.

6, 7. Describe the capture of Quebec.

As soon as the Marquis de Montcalm, who commanded the French army, heard of it, he marched to meet the British. A battle was begun immediately.

9. General Wolfe put himself at the head of his troops, and led them bravely onward. Though he had received two wounds, he refused to quit the field. At last, a ball struck him in the body, and stretched him on the ground.

10. A few of his soldiers carried him to the rear. But, though the hand of death was on him, General Wolfe thought only of the battle that was raging around. He heard a voice shouting "They flee! They flee!" and he asked who it was that fled.

11. "It is the French!" said one of his attendants. "They are beaten! The victory is ours!" A glad smile appeared on the general's face. "Then I die happy!" he cried, and expired.

12. The victory was complete. The Marquis de Montcalm was mortally wounded. In a few days after the battle, Quebec was surrendered. The whole province, and all the French possessions in the north, soon fell into the hands of the British.

Description of the United States.

1. WE have been travelling all about the world, but we have now got home again. The United States are bounded on the north by the British possessions, east by the Atlantic ocean, south by the Gulf of Mexico and the states of Mexico, and west by the Pacific ocean. The whole country is nearly as extensive as all Europe, and contains about forty millions of inhabitants.

2. Not more than three-fourths of this vast country is settled. The whole central portion is unoccupied, or thinly scattered over with Indian tribes. The United States, at present (1874), comprise thirty-seven states, each having a governor, and a legislature to make laws.

13. To what are the old French colonies attached?

CHAPTER CLXV.—1. Boundaries of the United States? Extent? Population?
2. How large a portion is settled? What of the government? Divisions of the United States? (Answer this from map on p. 581.)

The whole are united under a national government, over which a president is placed as the chief ruler.

3. The United States are favored by a great many fine rivers, flowing through fertile valleys. There are many mountains, but none are so lofty as the Andes of South America, the Alps of Europe, or the Himalaya mountains of Asia. The climate of the north is temperate, and the soil yields apples, pears, peaches, and other fruits. In the south it is warm, and oranges, figs, and lemons, flourish.

Settlement and Colonial History of New England.

1. BEFORE speaking of the United States as one whole country, I must give a brief account of the settlement of the several colonies. I shall begin with New England, because that section of the Union is the most northerly, though not first settled.

2. New England contains the states of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, and Connecticut. It is bounded north by Lower Canada, east by New Brunswick and the Atlantic ocean, south by the Atlantic and Long Island Sound, and west by New York.

3. In the year 1620, a ship called the Mayflower arrived on the coast of New England. On board of this vessel were a number of ministers, and pious men and women. They had brought their children with them, for they never expected to return to their native land.

4. They had been driven from England by persecution, and they had come to this dreary wilderness, in order to worship God according to their own consciences. It was in the cold wintry month of December, when the Mayflower anchored in the harbor of Plymouth. The people went on shore, and the rock on which they landed has ever since been considered sacred.

5. They went to work and built themselves some poor huts. At first, they met with great difficulties and hardships. Many of them fell sick and died. The survivors were often in want of food, and were sometimes forced to dig for shell-fish on the sea-shore.

6. In addition to their other troubles, the wild Indians sometimes threatened to attack them. But the Pilgrims were as brave and patient as they were pious. They put their trust in God, and steadily pursued their design of making a permanent settlement in the country.

7. Soon after this settlement at Plymouth, other companies of religious persons came to different parts of New England. Some settled at Salem, and others at Boston. Thus a good many English people were established in the country. In the year 1635, sixty men, women, and children, journeyed from Massachusetts to Connecticut, to make a settlement there.

8. They went through the woods on foot, and drove their cattle before them, subsisting principally on milk. They waded through rivers and swamps, and traversed hills and mountains. At night, they lay down to sleep, with no shelter but the boughs of the trees.

9. When they reached the Connecticut river, they began to build Windsor, Hartford, and other towns. But the winter came upon them before they were prepared for it, and the snow fell very deep. So fourteen of their number set out to return, and would have perished on the way, had they not been relieved by the Indians. Windsor and Hartford were the first settlements in Connecticut.

ROGER WILLIAMS.

10. In 1636, a pious minister, named Roger Williams, was banished from Massachusetts. He went to Rhode Island, and settled at Providence. This good man was a great friend of the Indians, and they had a strong affection for him. By degrees, villages were built all along the sea-coast of New England, and settlements began to be formed on the inland rivers.

11. But a thick and dreary forest still overshadowed the greater part of the country, and bears and wolves often prowled around the cottages.

1. THE settlers of New England were good and pious people; but many of them seemed to have pretty much the same feeling toward the Indians that they had toward the bears and wolves. They considered them a sort of wild animal, or if men, very wicked ones.

2. The best friend that ever the red men had, was John Eliot. He considered them his fellow beings, and went about preaching to them; and so he was called the apostle of the Indians. He spent a great many years in translating the Bible into their language, and in teaching the Indians to read it.

3. There were, however, very few white men that loved the Indians, and the latter looked upon the settlers as their enemies. They were afraid that, in time, they would cut down all the trees of the forest, and change their hunting grounds into cultivated fields.

4. The settlers had, therefore, many wars with the Indians, but the most terrible one broke out in the year 1675, and was called king Philip's war. King Philip, though an Indian, was a man of great sagacity, and it was his design to destroy all the settlers, and make New England a wilderness again.

of Swanzey, in Massachusetts, as they were coming out of the meeting-house, on Fast day. Eight or nine persons were shot. Many others were killed and scalped in different parts of the country, and many houses were set on fire.

6. Almost every man in New England now shouldered his musket, and went out to fight king Philip. Even the ministers, instead of teaching the Indians to read the Bible, as John Eliot did, now took their guns and sent bullets at them whenever they had a chance.

7. In the course of the next winter, the settlers formed themselves into an army of nearly two thousand men, and drove king Philip and the other Indians into a strong fort, in Rhode Island. It stood in the midst of a swamp, and contained six hundred wigwams. All the Indian women and children had taken refuge there.

8. Four thousand Indian warriors were in the fort. But the settlers boldly attacked them, broke into the fort, and set the wigwams on fire. Many of the old and infirm Indians, as well as the women and poor helpless children, were burnt alive.

wounded, and several hundred were taken prisoners. The remainder fled. The fort presented a horrible spectacle, with half-burnt bodies of men, women, and children, strewn among the ashes of the wigwams.

10. But still the war was not at an end, for king Philip was alive. The next summer, it was known that he had taken refuge at Mount Hope, in Rhode Island. Captain Church pursued him thither, with a small party of men.

11. King Philip happened to come toward a clump of bushes, where an Englishman and a friendly Indian lay concealed. The Englishman fired at him, but missed. The Indian then took aim and fired, and the valiant king Philip fell dead.

12. After this war, the Indians were never again able to do so much mischief to the New England people. But, for many years afterward, they would sometimes steal out of the woods by night, set the villages on fire, and slaughter the inhabitants. The New England colonies, however, increased rapidly, and, in time, the country had many pleasant towns and villages.

Early History of Virginia.

1. THE colony of Virginia was settled some years before New England. Jamestown, on James River, was founded by Captain Christopher Newport, in 1607. The first settlers of Virginia were not such pious people as those of New England. They had not come to America for the sake of worshipping God, but were influenced by more worldly motives.

JOHN SMITH.

2. Many of them were wild young men, and it was difficult to keep them in order. Owing to this and other causes, the colony was sometimes on the brink of ruin. The Indians gave the settlers great trouble, and would probably have destroyed them, if it had not been for Captain John Smith.

3. Captain Smith was a gallant man, and had been a warrior all his lifetime. Before he came to Virginia, he had fought against the Turks, and had cut off the heads of three Turkish lords, in single combat. He showed himself equally valiant in his engagements with the Indians.

4. But one day, when Captain Smith was retreating from a large party of savages, he sank almost up to his neck in a swamp, so that he could neither fight nor flee. The Indians pulled him out of the swamp, and carried him to their king, Powhatan.

5. Powhatan was rejoiced to have Captain Smith in his power, for he had been more afraid of him than of all the other Englishmen together. In order to prevent any further trouble, he determined immediately to put him to death. Accordingly, Captain Smith's hands were tied, and he was stretched on the ground, with his head on a large stone.

6. King Powhatan, who was a man of immense size and strength, then seized a great club, intending to kill Captain Smith. He lifted the club on high for this purpose; but just as the blow was falling, his daughter Pocahontas rushed forward.

7. This beautiful Indian maiden threw herself upon the body of Captain Smith. If Powhatan's club had fallen, it would have killed her, instead of the prisoner. Pocahontas besought her father to have mercy; and the fierce Indian could not resist her tears and entreaties.

8. Captain Smith was therefore released, and sent back to Jamestown. The name of Pocahontas will always be honored in Virginia. She was afterward married to one of the English settlers, and her descendants are living in Virginia to this day.

8. What of Pocahontas ?

Braddock's defeat, and other matters.

BRADDOCK.

1. I MUST pass over the remainder of the history of Virginia, till the time of the old French war. This began in 1755. Not long after war was declared, the British general, Braddock, marched with an army to attack the French at Fort du Quesne. This fort stood at the head of the Ohio river, where Pittsburg is now situated.

2. Many Virginians and other colonists were in Braddock's army. Colonel George Washington, then a very young man, was one of his aids. Washington had already acquired much warlike skill; and if General Braddock had taken his advice, it would have saved his own life, and the lives of hundreds besides.

3. Braddock and his army marched onward, till they were within about seven miles of Fort du Quesne. Thick woods were all around them, and the settlements of Virginia were hundreds of miles behind.

Suddenly, a terrible volley of musketry was fired at them from behind the trees.

4. General Braddock now knew that he had fallen into an ambushade of French and Indians. He galloped about, endeavoring to encourage his men; but the bullets came so thick, that the bravest of them were appalled.

5. The general had five horses killed under him. At last, a bullet struck him in the breast. Nearly all the other officers were either killed or wounded; but Washington remained unhurt. It seems as if he were preserved to be the saviour of his country.

6. An Indian chief had taken aim and fired at him seventeen times, without once hitting him. It was Washington who rescued the army from total destruction. He and the Virginian troops kept off the Indians, and enabled the British to retreat.

7. I shall now proceed to speak of the other colonies. The first settlement in New York was made in 1613, on the shores of the Hudson river, where Albany now stands. The city of New York, founded about the same time, was at first called New Amsterdam; it derived its name from the capital of Holland, for the early settlers were natives of that country.

8. In 1664, the province of New York was surrendered by the Dutch into the hands of the English. It grew and prospered very fast, and became one of the most powerful of the colonies.

9. Pennsylvania was settled in 1681. Its founder was William Penn, a Quaker, and all the earliest settlers likewise belonged to the sect of Quakers. When William Penn arrived in the country, he bought land of the Indians, and made a treaty with them.

10. This treaty was always held sacred. The Indians saw that the Quakers were men of peace, and therefore they were careful never to do them any injury. There are no stories of Indian warfare with the Quakers of Pennsylvania.

11. The city of Philadelphia was laid out in accordance with Penn's instructions. He told the settlers not to make it like the crowded cities of the old world, but to plant it with gardens round each house, that it might look like a "greene country towne."

12. The province of Maryland was given by Charles the First to Lord Baltimore. He was a Roman Catholic, and, in 1634, he brought over two hundred people of the same religion, and made the first settlement in Maryland.

LORD BALTIMORE.

13. Carolina first began to be permanently settled in 1680. In 1729, it was divided into North and South Carolina. The first settlement in Georgia was made in 1733. The principal founder was General James Oglethorpe. He came from England with one hundred and sixteen settlers, and began to build the city of Savannah.

Brunswick and Florida, became covered with colonies, which were all under the government of Great Britain. The inhabitants were growing numerous.

2. When the king of Great Britain and his ministers beheld the prosperous condition of the colonies, they determined to derive some profit from them. For this purpose, in 1765, the British parliament passed what was called the Stamp Act.

3. Their object was, to take money out of the pockets of the Americans for the use of the king and ministry. But the Americans were resolved that no king on earth should take their property, without their own consent. Patrick Henry, a famous Virginian, told his countrymen not to mind about stamped paper, but to write on any paper they liked best.

PATRICK HENRY.

4. They made so strong an opposition to the Stamp Act, that parliament was forced to repeal it. But a tax was soon afterward laid on tea; so that no American lady could give a tea-party, without paying a tax to England. Soldiers were sent to America to compel the people to obey these unjust laws.

5. In the year 1770, a quarrel took place between some of these soldiers and the inhabitants of Boston. A company of the British red-coats assembled in State street, and fired upon a crowd of unarmed people. Three of them fell dead in the street, and five more were wounded. This affair was called the Boston Massacre.

6. But instead of being affrighted by this bloodshed, the people grew more determined in their resistance to the tyranny of England. In the year 1773, some ships were sent from London to the colonies, laden with cargoes of tea.

7. Three of the ships arrived in the harbor of Boston. One night, a number of persons went on board, in the disguise of Indians, and threw half the tea overboard. These Indian figures were never seen again; and, to this day, nobody can tell who they were.

8. When tidings of this event were carried to England, the king and ministry saw that they could never make slaves of the Americans, unless by force of arms.

Account of the Battle of Lexington.

1. IN 1775, General Thomas Gage was the commander-in-chief of the British forces in America. His head-quarters were at Boston.

2. On the night of the 18th of April, General Gage sent a detachment of eight hundred grenadiers to seize some cannon and ammunition at Concord, about eighteen miles from Boston. The grenadiers marched all night, and reached the town of Lexington at sunrise.

3. Lexington is a village about twelve miles from Boston. A meeting-house stood by the road-side, and near it there was a level tract of grass. On this green space, a company of militia were drawn up.

4. Major Pitcairn was the British commander. As soon as he saw the militia, he galloped forward, brandishing his sword, and drawing a pistol from his hol ster—"Disperse, you rebels!" he shouted. "Throw down your arms and disperse!"

5. As he spoke, without giving the militia men time to run away, he discharged his pistol at them. The British soldiers followed the example of Major Pitcairn, and fired a whole volley at the Americans. Several of them were killed and wounded.

6. The British troops then continued their march to Concord. But the Americans were now collecting on all sides. When the British reached Concord, they had a skirmish with a party of militia there. They now found it necessary to retreat as fast as possible.

7. As they marched along the road, the people fired at them from behind the fences and stone walls, and out of the windows of the houses. At every step, some of the British soldiers fell; but their comrades hurried on, without heeding them.

8. When General Gage heard what was going on, he sent Lord Percy out of Boston, with nine hundred men and two brass cannon. Lord Percy met Major Pitcairn and the grenadiers scampering back to Boston as fast as they could go; and, by firing his cannon, he kept the Americans off.

7. How were the British annoyed in their retreat to Boston? 8. What did General Gage do?

9. But the moment the troops resumed their march, the Americans shot at them again from behind the fences. Before the British arrived in sight of Boston, they had lost nearly three hundred men, in killed, wounded, and prisoners. The loss of the Americans was much less.

10. The news of this battle spread all over the country, and wherever the story was told, the people quitted their business and turned soldiers. For now the Revolution had broken out, and it was easy to foresee that there would be a bloody war.

CHAPTER CLXXII.—AMERICA CONTINUED.

The Battle of Bunker Hill.

1. IN a short time after the battle of Lexington, a large American army was assembled round Boston. The British troops could not venture out of the town. They found it difficult to get provisions enough to live upon.

9. What of the Americans and British? 10. What effect had the news of this battle?

CHAPTER CLXXII.—1. Where did an American army assemble? What of the British troops?

2. On the night of the sixteenth of June, Colonel Prescott marched with a thousand Americans to Bunker Hill, in Charlestown. On the summit of this hill, with their spades, they threw up a wall of earth and sods as high as their breasts.

3. They intended this as a fortification, from which they might fire upon the British fleet which lay in Boston harbor. No sooner did the British admiral see the wall of earth and sods, than he began to batter it with cannon-shot and bombs. At the same time, General Gage sent three thousand troops to take Bunker Hill by storm.

4. The troops landed in Charlestown, and marched boldly up the hill. They made a formidable appearance, moving in a long red line, with their glittering muskets. As they advanced, the cannon balls from the British fleet flew high over their heads, and struck among the Americans.

5. But when the British soldiers had come within twenty yards of the fortification, the Americans suddenly saluted them with a tremendous volley of musketry. The smoke cleared away, and there were the king's soldiers retreating in confusion to the water side.

2. What did Colonel Prescott do? 3. What of the British admiral and General Gage?

6. But many of them lay dead or wounded upon the hill. In the mean time, Charlestown had been set on fire, and was blazing like an immense furnace, and throwing clouds of smoke over the whole scene.

7. The officers encouraged the British troops, and led them again into battle. But a second time they were driven back, with terrible slaughter. It was not till the third trial, that the British were able to reach the breast-work.

THE BATTLE OF BUNKER HILL.

8. The Americans had now fired away all their powder and ball, and were forced to retreat. General Warren was among the last to leave the breast-work. A British officer snatched a musket from a soldier, and shot the gallant Warren dead.

9. But many a brave Englishman had laid down his life that day, and blood enough had been shed to redden all the grass on Bunker Hill.

10. In about a fortnight after this battle, General George Washington arrived at Cambridge. The continental congress at Philadelphia had appointed him commander-in-chief of the American armies. He managed matters so skilfully, that the British were driven out of Boston, in March, 1776.

Progress of the War. Capture of Burgoyne.

1. It was on the fourth of July, 1776, that the continental congress declared the United States a free and independent nation. This declaration caused great rejoicings all over America. Yet our affairs were not in a very promising situation.

2. After the enemy evacuated Boston, General

10. What of General Washington? When were the British driven out of Boston?

Washington marched from that town to New York. Some important battles were fought between our troops and the British; but Washington was finally compelled to retreat, by superior force. When winter came on, the American soldiers were almost naked. Wherever they marched, their bare feet left bloody tracks upon the frozen ground.

3. But, on a dark December night, Washington crossed the Delaware river with his troops, and marched to Trenton, in New Jersey. A large body of Hessian soldiers, who had been hired by the English, were encamped at this place. They were suddenly startled by the shouts of the Americans, who had broken into their camp, and they all laid down their arms.

4. Lord Cornwallis, the British general, was now in pursuit of the Americans; but Washington marched to Princeton, and attacked a party of the enemy, who had taken post in the college edifice. Sixty of them were killed, and three hundred taken prisoners.

5. The next year, 1777, the gallant Marquis de Lafayette came from France to assist the Americans. He was then only nineteen years old; but Congress appointed him major-general, and he became one of the bravest and best in the army.

2. What of Washington? What of the American soldiers? 3. Describe the attack upon Trenton. 4. Attack upon Princeton. 5. What of Lafayette?

6. During this year, the British general, Burgoyne, marched with a large army from Canada. He sailed down Lake Champlain, and went from thence to Saratoga. But General Gates was waiting for him there, with ten thousand American troops. Many battles were fought between them and the British.

7. In one of these battles, Colonel Cilley, an American officer, took a brass cannon from the enemy with his own hands. He immediately got astride of it, shouting and encouraging his men, and waving his sword, as if he were seated on a war-horse.

the camp to meet General Gates; and Burgoyne took his sword by the point, and offered the hilt to the American general. At the same time, all the British army grounded their arms.

The Story of the traitor Arnold and Major André.

1. IT would fill a much larger book than mine, if I were to relate the particulars of all the battles, skirmishes, and other warlike events that occurred during the Revolution. I must therefore leave far the greater part of them untold.

2. One of the most interesting incidents in the whole war took place in 1780. General Arnold, who had shown himself a very brave officer, became discontented, and resolved to desert the cause of his country.

3. Pretending that his wounds rendered him unfit for active service, he requested that the command of West Point might be given him. This strong fortress was situated among the highlands, on the shore of the Hudson river. Its loss would have been a severe misfortune to the Americans.

4. No sooner had Arnold got possession of West Point, than he sent to Sir Henry Clinton, the British general at New York, offering to surrender the fortress. Sir Henry Clinton sent a young officer, named André, to meet Arnold, and contrive the means of completing this treacherous business.

5. Major André had a meeting with Arnold, and they arranged the manner in which the fortress was to be given up to the British. André then wished to get on board the ship Vulture, which had brought him up the river from New York.

6. But the Vulture had now sailed further down the stream, and it was necessary for Major André to return by land. He therefore took off his uniform and put on a common coat, in order that the Americans might not know that he was a British officer.

7. Then mounting a horse, he set out on the road to New York. He had to pass through a part of the country that was guarded by the American troops, but he travelled most of the way without any trouble or hindrance.

8. But, when Major André reached a place called Tarrytown, he saw three young militia men by the road-side. They came up to him and seized his horse by the bridle. Now André had a passport from General Arnold in his pocket, and if he had shown it to the militia men, they would have let him go free. But instead of that, he asked them where they came from,

9. "From down the river," they replied. When André heard this, he mistook the three militia men for tories, or friends of the British. "I am a British officer," said he. "Let me pass on; for I am in haste!"

10. But these words were fatal to poor André. The three men took him prisoner, and found some treasonable papers in his boots. General Arnold made his escape to New York; but poor Major André remained in the hands of the Americans.

11. He was tried as a spy, and condemned to death. Washington and all the army were sorry for him, but nothing could save him from the gallows. He was therefore executed.

War in the South.—Surrender of Cornwallis.

1. IN the latter part of the war, many important events were transacted in the Southern states. In 1780, General Gates, the conqueror of Burgoyne, was defeated by Lord Cornwallis, at Camden, in South Carolina. Congress then sent General Greene to command the army of the south.

2. General Greene had been a Quaker in his youth; but when the Revolution broke out, he became the best officer in the American army, except General Washington. This was proved by his good conduct in the Southern states.

GENERAL GREENE.

3. He fought several battles with the British, and though he was sometimes compelled to retreat by the enemy's superior force, yet they never gained any real advantage over him. By his skill and valor, the British troops were finally driven into the city of Charleston. After this event, there was no more trouble with the enemy in the south.

4. Lord Cornwallis, with a large army, was now in Virginia. The American and French troops proceeded thither to attack him. General Washington had command of the whole; and, under Washington, the Count de Rochambeau was commander of the French.

CHAPTER CLXXV.—1. What took place in 1780? 2, 3. What of General Greene?
4. What of Lord Cornwallis? Who headed the Americans and French?

5. They besieged the British at Yorktown; for Lord Cornwallis did not feel strong enough to meet them in the open field. The Americans built breastworks round about the intrenchments of the British, and cannonaded them night and day.

6. Finally, on the nineteenth of October, 1781, Lord Cornwallis agreed to surrender his army. But he was ashamed to go through the ceremony of delivering his sword to the conqueror; and he therefore sent General O'Hara to do it in his stead.

7. General O'Hara accordingly marched forth at the head of the vanquished army. When he came in presence of General Washington, he offered him his sword. But Washington pointed to General Lincoln; for it was not proper that he himself should receive the sword of any but Lord Cornwallis.

8. General Lincoln took General O'Hara's sword, and the whole British army grounded their arms, and yielded their banners to the victorious Americans.

9. After the surrender of Cornwallis, no important battles were fought, although peace was not declared till 1783. In the summer and autumn of that year, all the British troops sailed homeward, and left America free and independent.

5. Describe the siege of Yorktown. 6-8. Describe the surrender of Lord Cornwallis and his army. 9. When was peace declared? What of the British troops?

10. Thus you see that the revolutionary war, which began by the battle of Lexington, in 1775, was terminated, after having continued eight years. The sufferings of our countrymen were very great, but the reward of their patience and patriotism was also great.

CHAPTER CLXXVI.—AMERICA CONTINUED.

The Presidents.

1. WHEN the revolutionary war was over, the people of the United States found it necessary to adopt a constitution of government. The present Federal Constitution was prepared by some of the wisest men in the country. It went into operation in 1789.

WASHINGTON.

2. The good and illustrious Washington was our first president. He came into office in 1789. Men were appointed to assist him, called the Secretary of State, the Secretary of War, the Secretary of the Navy, the Secretary of the Treasury, and the Attorney-General. This last was the president's lawyer.

3. Washington and Congress, which was composed of representatives of the people, then set to work to frame measures for raising the necessary money to carry on the government. This was done by placing taxes on the goods that arrived in ships. These measures were called the revenue system.

4. Next, they formed the Judiciary, a body of men appointed to say what was law, and to see that the laws were carried out. So that very soon all the departments of the government went into operation.

5. Washington was re-elected president in 1793, and served eight years in all. In 1797, John Adams was appointed to succeed him, and became the second president of the United States. During his administration, Washington became the capital instead of New York.

JOHN ADAMS.

6. The most mournful event that had ever befallen America, was the death of Washington. It took place in 1799, when he was sixty-eight years old. The whole country was overwhelmed with sorrow. But Washington had done his work on earth, and it was fit that he should ascend to heaven.

7. The next president, after John Adams, was Thomas Jefferson. The most remarkable event of Jefferson's administration was the purchase of Louisiana from France, in the year 1803. This immense territory included the country between the Mississippi and the Rocky Mountains. It was bought for fifteen millions of dollars.

8. In 1804, the president sent several ships of war against the Algerian pirates in the Mediterranean sea, who had attacked our ships, and had made slaves of our citizens. The pirates received a sound drubbing, and behaved better for some years afterward. But they were not finally crushed till the year 1815.

and was succeeded, in 1809, by James Madison. During his administration, the United States were on ill terms with Great Britain, and there was great reason to fear that hostilities would ensue.

10. Accordingly, on the eighteenth of June, 1812, Congress made a declaration of war. Troops were sent to invade Canada. There were several gallant conflicts on the Canadian frontier; but the Americans did not succeed in conquering the province.

11. Many glorious victories were won by the American navy, both on the ocean and the lakes. Hitherto the British navy had always been triumphant; but now, our brave sailors often compelled them to haul down their flag.

12. The last and most brilliant event of the war, was the battle of New Orleans. On the morning of the eighth of January, 1815, a strong British army advanced to take the city. But they were driven back with immense slaughter by the Americans under General Jackson. Peace had been made before this battle took place, though it was not yet known.

9. What happened in 1809? What was there reason to fear? 10. What happened in 1812? 11. What of victories? 12. Describe the battle of New Orleans.

13. In 1817, president Madison retired from office, and was succeeded by James Munroe. During the eight years of his administration, the country was quiet and prosperous. Many territories became states, and large tracts of our western country were settled.

14. In 1818, laws were passed giving pensions to the old soldiers of the Revolution, and a treaty was made with England, by which American fisherman were allowed to fish off the coasts of the British provinces. This was a very important arrangement for the United States.

JAMES MONROE.

15. Monroe was twice president, and was succeeded in 1825 by John Quincy Adams, the son of John Adams, the second president.

Little of interest happened during his administration. The country remained quiet, and was at peace with the whole world, except a few Creek and Cherokee Indians in Georgia.

J. Q. ADAMS.

16. On the Fourth of July, 1826, two presidents died, Jefferson and Adams. Jefferson's last words were, "I commend my soul to God, and my daughter to my country." Adams, who did not know of the death of Jefferson, uttered these words with his expiring breath: "Jefferson survives."

17. Andrew Jackson, the hero of the battle of New Orleans, was made president in 1829. While he was at the head of the nation, the state of South Carolina undertook to disobey a law of the United States, on the ground that it was more favorable to the North than to the South. Jackson sent soldiers to South Carolina, and threatened to go himself, but, in the mean time, Henry Clay proposed the Compromise measure, which settled all difficulties.

18. The other measures of Jackson were: the closing of the United States Bank, which brought great misfortunes upon the country; the removal of many tribes of Indians beyond the Mississippi; a war with the Seminoles in Florida, who refused to leave their homes;

1 MARTIN Van Buren became president in 1837. The country was then suffering from the extravagance of the people, the great expansion of the credit system, and the closing of the United States Bank. This was called the panic of 1837, and it lasted several years.

MARTIN VAN BUREN.

2. The country was far from prosperous. The Seminole war continued, but was finally concluded by the capture of Osceola. A war seemed at one time likely to break out between the United States and England relative to the boundary between Maine and New Brunswick; peace was made, however, by General Scott, who was sent to the scene of disturbance.

3. Van Buren had a hard time of it for four years.

and was succeeded, in 1841, by William Henry Harrison. Harrison had been a general, and had fought many battles with the English and the Indians in the north-west. He was too old, however, to be president, and died exactly a month after his inauguration.

4. Now you must know that the people had chosen a vice-president, at the time they had elected Harrison. If the president lives, the vice-president is the chief officer of the Senate; if he dies, he takes his place. John Tyler now became president, after the death of Harrison.

5. Tyler became very unpopular at an early date, by refusing to sign certain laws made by Congress. All the members of his cabinet deserted him, except Daniel Webster.

JOHN TYLER.

6. At this period, a great deal was said about the annexation of Texas. Texas was a part of Mexico, in which a great many Americans had settled. Texas then devices in Mexico, by being elected to the presidency. He entered upon the office on the fourth of March, 1849. He was the twelfth president of the United States. Millard Fillmore, of New York, was chosen vice-president.

10. At this time, California, owing to its gold mines, had become filled with Americans, who naturally desired that the territory should be admitted to the union as a state. The people petitioned Congress to this effect in February, 1850. This led to a long discussion, but California was admitted in the course of the year.

11. General Taylor died after having been a year in office, and Millard Fillmore succeeded him. During his term, the United States came near having a war with Great Britain about the Newfoundland fisheries, but the difficulty was amicably arranged.

countries. The mission was successful; and a treaty was made which led to the visit of the famous Japanese embassy to the United States in 1860.

13. Franklin Pierce became president in March, 1853. Six wars were threatened, with as many different powers, during his four years of office, but they were all avoided by friendly negotiation. In 1853, Dr. Kane, of whose discoveries I have spoken, sailed to the Arctic regions. Difficulties arose in Kansas, which have since been in a great measure settled.

14. England, France, and Turkey were at this period engaged in a war with Russia. England was in want of soldiers, and her ambassador at Washington, and her consuls in various American ports, openly engaged in enlisting men in the United States. As the country was neutral, and wished to remain so, these acts might have compromised our government with Russia, and so the president sent the ambassador and the consuls back the attempts to admit Kansas as a state, the war against the Mormons, the panic of 1857, the purchase of Washington's Home and Tomb at Mount Vernon by an association of American ladies, the laying of the Atlantic telegraph cable, and the visit of the Prince of Wales. The immense crop of 1860 restored prosperity to the country, which had been suffering since 1857.

About Slavery and Secession.

1. I have now a very sad story to tell you ; and, that you may understand it better, I must say a few words about slavery. Slaves, as you know, are persons held as property by other persons by whom they may be sold, and for whom they are obliged to work. Slavery has existed in all parts of the world, and from the earliest times.

15. What were the principal events of James Buchanan's administration ?

2. Queen Elizabeth of England introduced African slaves into America, the first having been landed in Virginia in 1620. Negro labor was found very useful in the warmer regions, and hence the slave trade flourished for many years. In the year 1861, there were four millions of slaves in the southern states of the Union—men, women and children. In the northern states, where slavery had never taken firm root, it had entirely died out.

3. Now the people of the free states believed not only that it was wrong to hold slaves, but that the system was injurious to the slave-holders themselves. They believed this and said so. They had no right to interfere in the matter, but they talked against slavery, printed books against it, and made the southerners very uncomfortable. Still nobody seriously thought of taking their slaves from them.

4. Now the government of the United States was continually acquiring new territory in the west and south, and the southerners claimed the right of settling there with their slaves and thus making new slave states. A large part of the northerners denied this right, and the election of a president in 1860 turned entirely upon this question. Abraham Lincoln was the candidate of those who thought that territory, once free, ought to remain free.

CHAPTER CLXXVIII.—1. What are slaves? What of slavery? 2. Who introduced slaves into America? When? What of slavery in the South? In the North? 3. What did the people of the North believe? What did they do? 4. State the different opinions about new territory.

5. But the people of the South feared—and it is useless to inquire here whether they were right or wrong—that Abraham Lincoln would, if elected, not only prohibit slavery in the territories, but in some way interfere with it in the states. They therefore threatened, in case of his election, to secede from the Union, that is, leave the United States and set up a government of their own.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN.

6. Certain southern leaders had long foreseen that something of this kind would happen, and had prepared the people for it. They had taught them to believe that the States could abandon the Union, if they did not approve its conduct, just as a man may discharge his agent, or his lawyer, or his servant!

7. Abraham Lincoln was elected president in November, 1860, but was not to take office till March of the following year. The South, however, determined to lose no time, and seized the forts, mints, arsenals, and other United States property within their borders. They know now that Mr. Lincoln had neither the will nor the power to injure them in any of the ways they feared.

8. President Buchanan opposed no resistance to these measures. He held the strange opinion that though a State had no right to secede, there was nothing to be done if it did. Therefore, when Abraham Lincoln took office on the 4th of March, 1861, he found that seven states had seceded, that four more were upon the point of following, that a new government had been set up, with Jefferson Davis as its chief, and that the United States flag floated on only two forts in the South, namely, Fort Sumter in South Carolina and Fort Pickens in Florida.

9. He also found that he had little or no power with which to contend against this movement. The vessels of the navy were scattered all over the world; the feeble garrisons maintained in the South had nearly all been captured, and batteries had even been erected to drive the soldiers from Sumter and Pickens.

What was done in the South? 8. Was any resistance offered? Why not? What did Abraham Lincoln find? 9. What was the condition of things?

1. THE story of Fort Sumter is a very singular one. It was garrisoned by seventy men under Major Anderson. They were soon in a very painful situation, almost without provisions, in the midst of enemies and with very little hope of relief. But an attempt to reach them with supplies was soon to be made, and the Southern commander, General Beauregard, hearing of this, summoned Major Anderson to surrender, on the 11th of April.

2. The Major refused and then the contest began, between seven thousand men on one side, and seventy on the other. On the afternoon of the 13th, the garrison, half dead from suffocation and fatigue, capitulated and marched out, carrying their flags with them. Not a man had been killed on either side. Thus began the war which lasted for four years, and which, I am sorry to say, was one of the most bloody in history.

3. You will not expect me to tell you of all that happened during this dreadful struggle. I can only refer, briefly, to some of the principal events. Nothing was now thought of but the drilling of troops, the building of ships and the forging of cannon ; for the president had issued a call for troops, and by far the larger part of the people of the North believed that secession must be put down by force, if necessary.

4. As the South expected help from England, it was deemed a wise measure to blockade the Southern ports. Ships of war were stationed at the mouths of the harbors, to prevent all trade by sea, and many vessels engaged in running the blockade, as it was called, were either captured or destroyed. From time to time, however, one got in or out, carrying supplies to the Southerners, or cargoes of cotton to the English spinners.

5. In July, the battle of Bull Run was fought in Virginia, near Washington. The Union forces wished to seize Richmond, the enemy's capital, and the enemy would have been very glad to get possession of Washington. The fight ended in a retreat of the Unionists in great disorder.

6. This was looked upon as a dire calamity at the time, but was soon recognized as a "blessing in disguise." It roused the North to the full sense of the efforts and the sacrifices which they were called upon to make. The president issued another call for troops, and the army defending Washington soon numbered two hundred thousand men, under the command of General McClellan.

7. Battles were now fought all over the country, but there seemed to be no fixed end in view and no definite military purpose. The capture of Forts Henry and Donelson with forty thousand men by General Grant, in February, 1862, was the first action producing decided results. The enemy fell back, and the Tennessee and Cumberland rivers were cleared for hundreds of miles.

8. Then in April, New Orleans was taken by a fleet commanded by flag-officer, afterwards Admiral, Farragut. This was a terrible affair, the vessels composing the squadron bombarding the forts for six days, and finally running by them, and in spite of rams, rafts and fire-ships, coming to anchor within twenty miles of the city. A land force under General Butler immediately took possession.

9. At about the same time, the splendid army collected near Washington moved from winter quarters, and advanced upon Richmond. The hopes of the country, largely centered upon this army, were doomed to bitter disappointment. For in less than three months, disease and battle had so reduced their number and their spirit, that the enemy assumed the offensive, and fears were felt for the safety of Washington.

10. The Secessionist army, under General Lee, left Richmond under the defence of its forts and batteries, and advanced northward, defeating a force under General Pope, upon the ground of the battle of Bull Run, and then fording the upper Potomac in its march upon Washington. This was a trying time, for the city could really make no defence.

11. McClellan's army was brought back in time, however, from Richmond, by water, and met the enemy upon the banks of the little river Antietam, in Maryland, defeating and driving it back, but not pursuing it. It was McClellan's failure to follow which led to his losing the command of the army. The enemy recrossed the Potomac on the 18th of September, defeated but not disheartened.

1. THE army of the Potomac fared no better under its new leaders than under McClellan. General Burnside was defeated by Lee at Fredericksburg, in Virginia, in December, and General Hooker at Chancellorsville, in April, 1863. In these two actions the Unionists lost thirty thousand men.

2. General Lee, knowing this, resolved to take the offensive once more, and again forded the upper Potomac, in June. General Meade was now in command of the Union army, and opposed the advance of the enemy at Gettysburg, in Pennsylvania. A terrible battle was fought here on the 1st, 2d, and 3d of July, in which the enemy were totally routed—a defeat from which they never recovered.

3. On the 4th of July, General Grant, after a campaign so bold that many people thought it dangerous, succeeded in taking the city of Vicksburg, upon the Mississippi, the fleet of Commodore Porter lending its aid. Five days afterwards, Port Hudson, also upon the Mississippi, surrendered, and the great river was once more open from its source to its mouth.

4. In these two affairs the enemy lost forty thousand men and seven hundred guns, and people began naturally to think that Grant must be a very great general. The president and congress thought so too, for, in March, 1864, they conferred upon him the title of Lieutenant General, and made him commander-in-chief of the Union forces. From this time forward, all the operations of the war tended to one end, and the armies, though hundreds of miles apart, fought with one common object in view.

5. General Grant now assumed personal command of the army of the Potomac, in Virginia, placing the principal western army under that of General Sherman, and sending him advice and directions constantly by telegraph. Both armies broke camp in the first week of May, the one to pursue and destroy the force defending Richmond, the other to seize Atlanta, a great arsenal and storehouse in the southwest.

6. The loss of life upon both sides during the next six weeks was frightful. Probably not less than one hundred thousand men died on the field or in the hospital. Grant's advance was not stayed, however, and Richmond was very soon closely besieged. Sherman, too, pushed on over hill and dale, and, after repulsing the army of General Hood, inflicting upon it a loss of 30,000 men, entered Atlanta in September.

7. You have doubtless heard of the "March to the Sea," and when you are older, will read about it in larger books than mine. I can only tell you here, that Sherman's army, to the great surprise of the whole world, now abandoned their base of supply—that is, a railroad which brought them their food and powder and ball from the north—and started upon a march through the heart of the enemy's country. They arrived upon the Atlantic coast before Christmas, capturing the city of Savannah. Just before this, Abraham Lincoln had been re-elected president.

8. Everybody now saw what an advantage it was to have one head plan the operations of the armies instead of half a dozen. Sherman's men, after a short rest, turned to the north, taking city after city, and every day lessening the distance between themselves and Richmond. Grant did not even wait for their arrival, but on a certain day, fell upon the army of Lee, and after a week of hard fighting and rapid pursuit, received its surrender upon the 1st of April.

9. This was the end of the war of secession, and you may well imagine that the joy of the people was very great. But an event happened which changed this joy to mourning. Abraham Lincoln was shot by an assassin on the evening of the 14th of April, and died early the following morning.

10. This calamity, great as it was, did not for a moment suspend the operations of the government. The vice-president, Andrew Johnson, at once took the oath of office, and everything went tranquilly on, precisely as if nothing had happened. No form of government was ever subjected to a severer trial.

The War of Secession Concluded.—The Abolition of Slavery.

1. BEFORE closing my very brief story of this sad war, I must mention a few things it is important you should know. More than a million of men served in the Union armies, the first two hundred thousand being volunteers. These received as wages their food and clothing and thirteen dollars a month. The larger portion of the remainder were also volunteers, but they

10. Who now became president? Was the course of the government disturbed?

CHAPTER CLXXXI.—1. What of the numbers and wages of the Union soldiers?

received bounty money from their States and towns. The rest were drafted men, that is, men drawn by lot.

2. The war cost the country nearly three thousand millions of dollars, and perhaps you may ask where this immense sum came from. About five hundred millions of it were bank bills, or promises to pay, and, being printed upon greenish paper, were popularly called greenbacks. The rest was obtained by borrowing from the people. More than four hundred millions have already been repaid, the people taxing themselves roundly for this purpose.

3. I have told you that the war was begun by the people of the South, to protect and preserve the system of slavery. I suppose you already know that it ended with the total destruction of what it was meant to defend. And this had been predicted by a good many far-sighted people. Abraham Lincoln, in a paper called the Emancipation Proclamation, issued on the 1st of January, 1863, declared all slaves in the seceding States free.

4. Now, as President of the United States, he had no right and no power to do this, and he would not and could not have done it, had there been no war. But when war exists, a ruler or a commander may do almost anything to weaken or destroy his enemy. The slaves were declared free as a war measure, and the abolition of slavery was in a few years legally and constitutionally accomplished.

2. What was the cost of the war? How was this sum obtained? How much of this debt has been paid off? 3. How did the war affect slavery? What of the Emancipation Proclamation?

5. Many events happened during the war which I have not been able to mention, and one of these days you will read of them. I mean such events as the fight between the little Monitor and the terrible Merrimac, which will remind you of Jack the Giant Killer ;

6. The sinking of the enemy's steamship Alabama by the gunboat Kearsarge; the passage of the forts in Mobile Bay by the fleet of Admiral Farragut; the battle so high up on a mountain that it was called the battle in the clouds—and hundreds of such daring and brilliant deeds.

7. It is not an easy thing for those who have been fighting against each other for years to forget their quarrels and to lay aside their enmities. Still, it is what the people of the North and South must do, for the war has decided that there is no such thing as the right of secession, and that the union of the States, once entered into, remains binding forever.

8. Some progress has been made in this direction since the close of the war. All the seceded States are now represented in Congress; the laws requiring Southern members to take more stringent oaths than other persons have been rescinded; several confederate generals have taken office under the general government, and have discharged their duty faithfully; the negroes have shown a strong desire for education, and with few exceptions, have proved worthy of freedom. Then, on the 30th of May, Decoration Day, the graves of the dead Southern soldiers are in some places strewn with flowers, just like those of the soldiers of the North.

9. The three States of Arkansas, Louisiana, and South Carolina are the most backward in the march of improvement; and here I must say a few words of a set of politicians who have acquired the name of "carpet-baggers." For some years the seceded States were prohibited by Congress from electing to certain offices persons who had been prominent in the war, and they were thus led to elect men from the Northern States who came and settled among them for this very purpose.

10. Now these men were principally adventurers, and cared very little about the people who elected them. As they were not natives, but came from a distance, and brought their baggage with them—and very little of that, as if they did not mean to stay long—they were called “carpet-baggers,” and the state of things thus brought about was called the “carpet-bag system.”

11. The evils thus introduced were for a time very serious, but as all the States may now elect for their governors or senators any general or any leader in the war of secession they please, they would seem to have their destinies henceforth in their own hands.

12. I must tell you of the Impeachment of President Andrew Johnson. A large majority of the House of Representatives believed that the president had broken the laws and defied congress, and resolved that he should be tried. For presidents can be tried as well as other people, only the United States Senate is the jury.

13. The country was very much interested in the trial, and anxiously awaited the result. It was necessary, in order to convict the president of high crime in office, that thirty-six Senators should vote against him. The vote stood thus: for conviction, thirty-five; for acquittal, nineteen. Andrew Johnson escaped, therefore, by one vote! This took place in 1867

Events since the War of Secession.

1. GENERAL ULYSSES S. GRANT was elected president in November, 1868, and was inaugurated in March of the following year. One of the principal events of his administration was the peaceful settlement of a long-standing difficulty with England, known as the Alabama affair, and of this I must give you some account.

ULYSSES S. GRANT.

2. I have told you that during the war of secession the enemy's steamship Alabama was destroyed by the Kearsarge. This steamship was built, equipped, provisioned and manned in England; and in this state of things it made no difference who commanded her. She sailed about capturing and burning American merchantmen, and the American government and people declared that they would look to England for redress.

3. For a long time the English maintained that they had done all they could to prevent the building and equipment of the Alabama, and that she escaped out of the port of Liverpool when the persons appointed to watch her were looking the other way. This was a very poor excuse, and many people thought the matter would one day end in war.

4. At last, President Grant proposed that the dispute should be settled by arbitration, that is, that it should be left to certain learned persons, whose decision should be binding forever. Five of these persons were appointed, and they met in the summer of 1872, in Geneva, in Switzerland.

5. Their decision was that England was responsible for the ravages of the Alabama, and must pay the United States fifteen millions of dollars damages. The payment was duly made by England the following year, and thus a troublesome question was set at rest.

6. The American people were very much pleased to see their president, whose skill in war had raised him to his high position, thus anxious to settle a dispute peacefully, and it was doubtless in part this satisfaction which led to the re-election of President Grant in the autumn of 1872.

7. As I now write, in the autumn of 1874, the country seems to be recovering somewhat from a period of distress brought on by the extravagance and recklessness in money matters of the people. Paper money always produces this effect, and when you are older you will understand why. We can never expect the permanent return of prosperity, till we can pay our debts and collect our dues in hard cash, and this, too, you will understand better by and by.

7. What of the present condition of the country? Paper money and hard cash?

General Remarks upon the History of the United States.

1. I HAVE now told you a short story about our own country. You will notice that the first settlement made by the white people in the United States, was at Virginia, in 1607; the next in New York, by the Dutch, in 1613; the next by the Puritans, or, as we often call them, the Pilgrims, at Plymouth, in Massachusetts, in 1620.

2. Other parts of the country were soon settled,

CHAPTER CLXXXIII.—1. Where and when was the first settlement in the United States? The next? The next?

chiefly by people from England ; but colonies were established also by Swedes, Germans, and French. Thus the whole country along the Atlantic border became inhabited. By degrees, the settlers went further and further into the wilderness, until towns and cities rose up throughout the whole interior of the land.

3. Thus you will observe that about two hundred and fifty years ago, there was not a white inhabitant throughout this vast country. The Indian tribes were numerous, and their whole number, within the present boundary of the United States, might have been a million, or more.

4. But these lords of the forest gradually disappeared before the white people. Many of them were slain in battles with the settlers ; the others gradually retired, as the forests were cut down, and the lands cleared.

5. They lived by hunting wild deer, bears, buffaloes, and wild turkeys, and as these animals fled from towns and cities, and took refuge in the forests, so the Indians went with them.

6. In this way the red man vanished from the settled portions of the country, and at this day there are few of them to be seen, except in the far western wilderness.

2. What of other parts of the country ? 3. What of this country two hundred and fifty years ago ? What of the Indians ? 4, 5. Tell the story of the Indians.

There herds of wild deer, vast flocks of bisons, bears, wild turkeys, and other wild animals, are to be found, and there is now the home of the Indians.

7. Well, as the Indians retired, the white people increased, being all under the government of the king of England. At the time of the Revolution, they were three millions in number, and as the king treated them ill, they threw off his authority and set up a government for themselves.

8. This government, or constitution, was formed in 1789, and we have lived under it very happily for over seventy years; and the little nation of three millions has now become nearly forty millions strong.

1. In reviewing the history of our country, we shall notice that it has been involved in three wars since it became independent. Previous to that event, the colonists had a great many battles with the Indian tribes, and they had a good deal of fighting to do in the old French war, which commenced about 1755.

6. Where are they now principally to be seen? What of animals? 7. What of the white people? Their numbers at the time of the Revolution? 8. When was the American government completed? Population of the United States at this time?

2. The revolutionary war was a great affair. The people were fighting for independence, for liberty. America was poor, and England was rich and powerful. In this struggle, our country may be compared to a stout boy in the grasp of a strong man, who is trying to bind him in chains. But the boy breaks the chains asunder, turns upon his oppressor, and drives him out of the country.

3. In looking back, then, we see that our forefathers toiled and suffered much to establish freedom in this country. We are now enjoying the fruits of their labors. Let us cherish their memory, for they were great and good men. Let us be thankful to Heaven, for 'it has smiled upon their labors.

4. Having taken a backward glance at the history of our country, let us consider for a moment its present condition. Look at the towns and cities that are scattered over the country. Look at the hills and valleys, covered with fruit trees and gardens, and yielding their annual harvests.

5. Look at the rivers, ploughed with whizzing steam-boats; look at the canals, bearing along their burden of produce and merchandise. Look at the steam-cars, hurrying along like birds upon the wing; look at our sea-ports, and see the forest of shipping that is crowded into their harbors. Look at our lines of telegraph, conveying messages and news more rapidly than if they were borne upon the wings of the wind.

6. Visit the city of New York, a busy, buzzing hive of men, containing nearly a million of people. Observe its beautiful streets, its fine houses, the banks, the churches, and other public edifices.

7. Enter the shops, and notice the beautiful articles of merchandise brought from China, from Java, from Hindostan, from Arabia, from all the shores of the Mediterranean sea, from England, France, Holland, and the borders of the Baltic.

8. Go to the top of Trinity Church, where you can have a view of the surrounding waters; notice the fringe of masts encircling the southern portion of the city. See there the flag of every commercial country under heaven. See there, too, ships, sloops, schooners, and steamboats, coming and going like bees in a summer morning, all bringing their burden to the hive.

9. What a beautiful sight is this, and in a country too, which has been settled but little more than two hundred years! And if you would know more of our country, get into a steamboat and sail up the Hudson, one of the finest streams on the face of the globe.

10. Visit Troy, Albany, Utica, Rochester, and Buffalo, all of them interesting and flourishing towns. Observe the numerous villages, the handsome houses, and the throngs of happy people that inhabit the state of New York.

11. If you are fond of travelling, cross Lake Erie in a steamboat, and proceed to Ohio. See there a country that has not been settled seventy years, now studded over with thriving towns and villages. Go to Cincinnati, Louisville, Chicago, St. Louis, and proceed on the great Pacific Railroad to San Francisco on the Pacific.

12. Consider the great valley through which the Mississippi flows; the millions of people that are already there; the rapid increase of wealth, the progress of refinement, and the multiplication of the inhabitants.

9. What of the Hudson? 10. Cities of New York? 11. State of Ohio? 12. What of the valley of the Mississippi?

13. When you have seen these interesting things, go home and reflect upon them. Sit quietly down, review the past, consider the present, and look forward to the future. What a glorious prospect for our country, if our present government continues, if the people are true to their own interests, and maintain the liberty their fathers left them!

14. I say if the people are true to their own interests. We live in a fine country, we have a good form of government, but these will not insure happiness. If the people become indolent, or if they become wicked, ruin and desolation will visit this land. Government may be compared to a house; those who live in it, must take good care of it.

15. They must keep their doors and windows shut, to prevent storms from driving in. If any part decays, or is injured by a tempest, it must be repaired. The fires must be watched at night. In short, the whole establishment must be taken care of by people who are worthy of being trusted, people who are skilful, and who cannot be tempted to neglect their duty.

16. If the house is entrusted to careless, ignorant, or faithless people, it may take fire, and the inhabitants be burned up. Or it may decay and fall down upon the heads of those who dwell in it. Or it may become leaky, so as to admit the cold wind, or the driving rain or snow. It may thus become a miserable and comfortless habitation.

13. What reflections should you make? 14-16. To what may government be compared?

17. It is so with government. If careless, ignorant, or faithless rulers are chosen to take care of the country, wars and commotions may follow; poverty and vice may spread over the land; ignorance and misery may take the place of knowledge and prosperity. Thus the government, which, like a house, is designed to protect us, when ill managed, like a house on fire, or borne down by the tempest, may be the cause of our ruin.

18. Think of these things, my young readers, and when you come to be men, always use your influence to have no other rulers than those who are capable, honest, and sincere friends of the country.

17. What will happen to the land if faithless rulers are chosen? 18. How should you use your influence?

About South America, El Dorado, and the Fountain of Youth.

1. No sooner had Columbus discovered America, than the pope of Rome claimed it all as his own. None of the Catholic kings of Europe were supposed to have any right to plant colonies there, unless his holiness granted them permission.

2. Alexander the Sixth was pope at that time. He very generously bestowed one half of the new world on the king of Spain, and the other half on the king of Portugal. These kings then sent out ships and men, who conquered immense territories, and reduced many of the inhabitants to slavery.

3. The Spaniards first took possession of the West Indies. They built the city of Havana, on the island of Cuba, and the Spanish governor had his residence there. Other nations afterward took possession of these islands. The great object of all who came to America, at this period, was to get gold and silver. The most wonderful stories were told about the abundance of these metals in some parts of the western continent.

4. There was supposed to be a kingdom, called El Dorado, or The Gilded, which was thus described. The king was every day covered with powdered gold, so that he looked like a golden image. The palace of this glittering monarch was built of brilliant marble as white as snow. The pillars of the palace were porphyry and alabaster. Its entrance was guarded by two lions, who were fastened to a tall column by chains of massive gold.

5. After passing the lions, a fountain was seen, from which gushed a continual shower of liquid silver, through four large pipes of gold. The interior of the palace was too splendid to be described.

6. It contained an altar of solid silver, on which was an immense golden sun. Lamps were continually burning, and their dazzling radiance was reflected from innumerable objects of silver and gold. Such was the splendid fiction, invented by somebody, and believed in Europe.

7. Numbers of adventurers went in search of El Dorado, and some pretended that they had really visited this golden kingdom. But it has long since been ascertained that no such kingdom ever existed.

8. Another thing which the Spaniards expected to find in America, was the fountain of youth. Far away beneath the shadows of the forest, they believed that there was a fountain, the bright waters of which would wash away wrinkles, and turn gray hair dark again.

9. Oh, if there were any such fountain, old Peter Parley would journey thither, lame as he is, and plunge head foremost into its bosom! After a while the children of America would ask—"Where is that lame old gentleman who used to tell us stories?"

10. And there would be a little rosy boy among them, a stranger, whom they had never seen before.

He would cry out, "I was old Peter Parley; but I have been bathing in the fountain of youth, and now I am a boy again! Come, let us see which will hop furthest!"

History of the Mexican Territories.—Guatemala.

1. THOUGH there was no El Dorado in America, there was gold enough to satisfy even the Spaniards, if such rapacious people ever could be satisfied. The empire of Mexico contained immense riches.

2. This country is in the southern part of North America. It extends across from the Gulf of Mexico to the Pacific ocean. Its capital city, which is likewise called Mexico, is one of the most magnificent in the world.

3. When America was first discovered, the city of Mexico was even more splendid than it is now. It had stately temples and houses, which were profusely ornamented with gold. Its inhabitants were more civilized than any other natives of America.

CHAPTER CLXXXVI.—1. What of gold in Mexico? 2. What of Mexico? Capital? 3. Describe the city of Mexico.

4. In the year 1519, Fernando Cortez, a Spaniard, invaded Mexico, with only about six hundred men. But, as his followers wore iron armor, and had muskets and cannon, they were able to fight whole armies of the Mexicans.

CORTEZ.

5. The emperor of Mexico was named Montezuma. He received Cortez and his men with great civility, for he was afraid to quarrel with them. But, after a short time, Cortez threw Montezuma into prison, and loaded him with chains.

6. Finding himself in so unhappy a situation, Montezuma consented to become a vassal of the king of Spain. But the Mexicans raised an insurrection, and when Montezuma endeavored to quiet them, they uttered shouts of scorn and anger.

7. So offended were they, that they discharged arrows and stones at him. One arrow struck poor Montezuma in the breast, and stretched him on the ground. He would not suffer the wound to be dressed, and, in a few days, this ill-fated emperor died.

8. The Mexicans elected Guatimozin, son-in-law of Montezuma, to succeed him. He made a vigorous attack on the Spaniards, and drove them from the city of Mexico. But Cortez soon came back with an army, and conquered the whole country.

9. The emperor Guatimozin was taken prisoner. He refused to confess where his treasures were concealed. Some of the Spaniards then laid him at full length on a bed of burning coals. There Guatimozin writhed in agony, till he was delivered by Cortez, who had borne no part in this horrible cruelty. But, about three years afterward, Guatimozin was suspected of being engaged in a conspiracy, and Cortez sentenced him to be hanged.

8. What did Guatimozin do? Cortez? 9. What was done to Guatimozin? His fate?

10. It has been affirmed that Cortez and his soldiers killed four millions of the Mexicans, in completing the conquest of the country. He pretended that his only object was to convert the people to the Christian religion. But he and his soldiers acted like fiends, rather than Christians.

11. From the time of its conquest by Cortez, the Mexican empire continued under the government of Spain, till the year 1810. A revolution then took place.

12. In 1813, the Mexican provinces declared themselves free and independent. But their independence was not established till several years afterward. Texas, one of the provinces, became one of our United States in 1845.

13. This gave rise to a war, as I have told you, between Mexico and the United States, in which General Scott's army took possession of the capital of the country. The war resulted in an immense loss of territory to Mexico—New Mexico, Utah, and California.

GENERAL SCOTT.

Spanish Peruvian Territories.

1. A FEW years after the conquest of Mexico, by Cortez, the Spaniards also conquered the vast empire of Peru, in South America. At the present day, Peru is bounded north by the republic of Ecuador, east by Brazil, south by Bolivia and the Pacific ocean, and west by the Pacific. But when the Spaniards first invaded it, the Peruvian empire included a much larger space.

2. The sovereigns of this empire were called Incas, and the Peruvians believed that their first inca was a child of the sun. The inhabitants were worshippers of the sun.

3. Peru contained many magnificent cities, and gold was more abundant even than in Mexico. Of course, no sooner did the Spaniards hear of it, than they determined to make themselves masters of the country.

4. The first invader was Francis Pizarro. In 1531, he marched into Peru, and took the inca prisoner in his own palace. The inca's name was Atabalipa. To regain his freedom, he offered Pizarro as much gold as would fill a spacious hall of his palace, piled as high as he could reach.

5. But after the gold had been delivered, Pizarro refused to give Atabalipa his freedom. He was not satisfied with the inca's treasure, but was determined to have his blood. So he condemned him to death; and Atabalipa was accordingly strangled and burnt.

6. When he had conquered the Peruvians, Pizarro quarrelled with one of his chief officers, named Almagro. They made war upon each other, and Pizarro caused Almagro to be beheaded. Soon afterward he was himself murdered.

7. In the course of time, the Peruvian empire was divided into several provinces. All of them were under the government of Spain. The Spanish territories comprised nearly all the western part of South America.

8. But the kingdom of Spain became so weak that it lost its authority over these colonies. The first resistance to the government was made while Joseph Bonaparte was king of Spain; and the people would not return to their allegiance, when the former king was again on the throne.

9. The different states in America, which were once Spanish provinces, are called the United Mexican States, Guatemala or Central America, New Grenada, Venezuela, Ecuador, Peru, Bolivia, Chili, Buenos Ayres, Uruguay, and Paraguay. Most of them have become independent, but are in a very unsettled condition.

Atlantic ocean; south by the Atlantic, Uruguay, and Paraguay; and west by Bolivia, Peru, and the republic of Ecuador. It is nearly as large as the whole United States.

2. When the Spaniards were making conquests in other parts of America, the Portuguese came to Brazil. It is said that, near the river Amazon, they found a nation of women, whose lives were spent in war.

3. We do not read that the Portuguese committed such horrible cruelties as the Spaniards did. The reason was, that the natives of Brazil possessed but little gold; and the Portuguese hardly thought it worth their while to colonize the country.

4. During many years, the government of Portugal was accustomed to send nobody but criminals thither; so that to be sent to Brazil was considered almost as bad as being sent out of the world.

5. In 1548, a multitude of Jews were banished to Brazil. They planted the sugar-cane there, and successfully cultivated it. When the king of Portugal found that the country was rich and fruitful, he sent over a governor, in order that he might not lose his share of the wealth.

CHAPTER CLXXXVIII.—1. Boundaries of Brazil? Extent? 2. What of the Portuguese? Amazons? 3. Why were the Portuguese not as cruel as the Spaniards? 4. Who were sent to Brazil? 5. What happened in 1548? What of Jews?

6. France, Spain, and Holland likewise attempted to get possession of Brazil. But the Portuguese resisted them, and finally became sole masters of the country. Perhaps, if the other nations had known of the hidden riches of Brazil, they would not have given up their claims so easily.

7. A long time after the settlement of the country, valuable mines of gold were discovered. Considerable quantities of this precious metal are also found in the beds of the rivers, mixed with sand and gravel. The topaz and the diamond are sometimes seen glittering among the gold.

8. The Rio Pardo, though it is a very small and shallow stream, produces a great number of diamonds. Other rivers are likewise enriched with them. Negro slaves are employed in washing the sand and gravel of these rivers, and when one of them finds a very large diamond, he receives his freedom.

9. In 1808, the king of Portugal removed to Brazil, and established his court in the city of Rio Janeiro. Fifteen years afterward, he returned to Lisbon. His son Pedro was then proclaimed emperor of Brazil.

6. What of other countries? 7. What were discovered in Brazil? 8. What of the Rio Pardo? What of negro slaves? 9. When did the king of Portugal remove to Brazil? Where did he establish his court? When did he return to Lisbon? What of his son Pedro?

10. In 1831, the Brazilians became discontented with the government of Pedro. He therefore gave up the imperial crown to his son, who was then only five years old. This boy was styled the emperor of Brazil, but the government was carried on by a council of regency till a few years since, when the emperor assumed the government. This seems to have acquired some stability, and the country is gradually improving.

The West Indies.

1. I MUST not close my story about America, without giving you some little account of the West India Islands, lying in the Atlantic ocean, between North and South America. These consist of three clusters, called the Bahamas, the Antilles, and the Caribbees. The Bahamas are the most northerly of the three groups, and lie near to Florida. They are about six hundred in number. Most of them are small, consisting of sand and rocks, and are uninhabited by man.

2. These, however, are the resort of a great variety of sea-fowl. Many of the birds which visit the lakes and shores of the United States in summer, retire to these lonely islands in winter, where they find a secure and pleasant abode. The Bahama Islands belong to Great Britain, and contain about seventeen thousand inhabitants. The principal are Turks Islands, Providence, and San Salvador, or Cat Island. This last is that which Columbus first discovered.

3. The Antilles, occupying the middle portion of the West Indies, consist of Cuba, which is the largest, and belongs to Spain; Hayti, or St. Domingo, which is independent, and governed by blacks; Porto Rico, which belongs to Spain; Jamaica, which belongs to Great Britain, and a few smaller islands.

4. The Caribbee Islands are very numerous, and lie south-easterly of the others. They stretch from Porto Rico in a semicircular group to the shores of South America. They belong to different European governments. The most celebrated of these islands are Martinique, Barbadoes, St. Thomas, Tobago, St. Lucia, St. Vincent, Guadaloupe, Antigua, St. Christopher, Dominica, Santa Cruz, and Trinidad.

5. The climate of the West Indies is that of perpetual summer. Frost and snow never come to visit them. The trees are ever clothed with leaves, and many of the shrubs and plants continue at all times to be adorned with blossoms.

6. The fruits which are common with us, such as apples, pears, cherries, and peaches, are unknown in these regions; but oranges, figs, lemons, pineapples, and many other nice things, are abundant.

7. The people do not cultivate Indian corn, wheat, rye, oats, and barley, as we do, but they raise sugar-cane, from which they extract sugar and molasses, and they cultivate coffee, cotton, indigo, tobacco, cocoa, all-spice, and other things.

8. The forests contain mahogany, lignum vitæ, iron wood, and other woods useful in the arts. Among the birds are parrots of various kinds, some of which are not bigger than a bluebird. A friend of mine made me a present of one of these little fellows, a few years since. Instead of sitting upon his perch, I have known him to hang by his claws to the top wires of the cage, with his head downward, and thus remain during the whole night.

9. Among the quadrupeds of the West Indies are some curious little monkeys, and several kinds of lizards. The chameleon is the most interesting of these. He was formerly supposed to live on air, and to have the power of changing his color at will. But it is now ascertained that he often makes a sly meal upon insects that come in his way, and that his color does not vary more than that of several other animals of a similar kind.

10. Although the West Indies are never disturbed by winter, they are often visited by terrible hurricanes. These sometimes come so suddenly as to tear the sails from the masts of vessels, and often overturn the houses and trees upon the land.

1. If you were to visit the West Indies at the present day, you would find them inhabited by Europeans and their descendants, together with a great many negroes. But you would meet with none of the native Indians. These have long since disappeared.

2. You already know that Columbus first discovered one of the Bahamas, to which he gave the name of San Salvador, and which is now called Cat Island. Here he found a great many people who appear to have been nearly the same as the Indians which formerly inhabited our country.

3. After leaving San Salvador, Columbus visited Cuba and St. Domingo. Both of these were thronged with Indians. It is supposed that Cuba alone contained several millions. They appeared to live very happily, for the climate was mild, and the soil fruitful. They received Columbus with kindness, and rendered him every service in their power. They little thought of the cruel consequences which were soon to follow.

4. Not many years after the discovery of the West India Islands, the largest and finest of them were taken possession of by the Spanish government. The Indians were a gentle race, and were easily subjugated. The Spaniards did not seem to regard them as human beings, but rather as wild animals, who were to be exterminated. They shot them down by thousands, and even trained bloodhounds to pursue them.

5. In this way, the numerous islanders who once swarmed like bees upon every hill-side and in every valley of these beautiful regions, were reduced to a very small number. Most of these were treated like slaves, and many of them were compelled to work in mines, where they soon perished from hard labor to which they were unaccustomed, and for the want of that free air which Heaven had sent them before the Europeans came to deprive them of it.

6. Thus, by degrees, the native West Indians vanished, and their fair lands came into the possession of various European governments. Spain held Cuba and Porto Rico in her firm grasp. England got possession of Jamaica, the Bermudas, and some other islands. France had St. Domingo, Martinique, Guadaloupe, and several others. Some of the smaller islands fell into the hands of the Dutch, Danes, etc.

7. The first object of the Europeans after the discovery of America, was to obtain gold and silver. They seemed to imagine that all the hills and mountains in this continent were filled with these precious metals. But this illusion soon vanished, and in the West Indies the people began to cultivate the soil, instead of digging into the bosom of the earth for gold and silver.

8. They discovered that the land was peculiarly suited to the raising of sugar-cane, oranges, pineapples, and other productions of a tropical climate. To these, then, they devoted their attention, and the lands soon became very productive. In order to till them, the people sent to Africa for negroes, who were brought by thousands and tens of thousands, and compelled to work as slaves. Nearly all the labor, at the present day, is performed by negro slaves.

The West Indies concluded.

1. I SHALL not undertake to tell you of all the interesting events which have occurred in the West Indies. Several of these islands have often changed hands, sometimes belonging to one government, and sometimes

8. What did they discover? What of negro slaves?

CHAPTER CXCI.—1. What of some of the West India islands?

to another. They have frequently been shaken by earthquakes, and often desolated by whirlwinds. But of these events I cannot tell you now.

2. I must not, however, overlook the story of Hayti. This fine island was discovered by Columbus on his first voyage, and here he left a part of his men, who made the first European settlement on this side of the Atlantic. The island was called Hayti by the natives, and Hispaniola by the Spaniards. The settlement increased rapidly, and soon the whole island became subject to Spain. In after times, the French obtained possession of a portion of the country, and until about sixty years ago, it was shared between the French and Spanish governments.

3. But the negro slaves had become much more numerous than the white inhabitants, and, in 1791, they rose against their masters. France, at this time, was in a state of revolution, and could afford no aid to put down the insurrection. The negroes therefore slaughtered the white people by thousands, pillaging their houses, and then setting them on fire. A few escaped, but a large proportion were killed.

4. The negroes now considered themselves independent, and began to form a government of their own. After various revolutions, the whole island was formed into a sort of republic, the officers of which were negroes or mulattoes. After a time, it became an empire, and so it continues to this day.

5. Before I leave the West Indies, I must say a few words about the buccaneers, a famous set of sea-robbers, who infested these islands during the seventeenth century. These at first consisted of men from England and France, who settled on the western coast of St. Domingo and the neighboring island of Tortuga, about the year 1630.

6. For a while, they lived by hunting wild animals, but when they became numerous, they procured vessels, and went forth upon the sea to rob and plunder whomsoever they might meet. This business succeeded so well, that a great many desperate adventurers from all parts of Europe united themselves to the buccaneers. They therefore procured larger vessels, which were equipped in the best manner for attack. These were filled with daring seamen, and commanded by bold leaders.

4. What of the negroes? Their government? State of society? 5. What of the buccaneers? Where were they originally from? Where and in what year did they settle? 6. How did they live for a while? What did they afterward do? By whom were they joined?

7. In this manner the buccaneers became very formidable. Their vessels hovered in the track of the merchant ships, ready, like hawks in the neighborhood of a barnyard, to pounce down upon whatever might come in their way. They often captured ships laden with rich merchandise, and sometimes with gold and silver.

8. In this way, they amassed great wealth, and such was their power at one time, that they made successful attacks upon large cities, sometimes pillaging the inhabitants, and sometimes laying them under contribution. But, at length, the European governments were roused, by the violence and cruelty of these robbers, to measures of retaliation. They sent large vessels to cruise in the neighborhood of the West Indies, and, after many struggles, the buccaneers were finally exterminated.

9. In later times, the West Indian seas have been infested by pirates, who have captured a good many trading vessels, but they are now never met with.

7. What of the ships of the buccaneers? 8. What of the power of these pirates? How were they finally subdued? 9. What of other pirates?

CHAPTER CXCIIL.—OCEANICA.

About Oceanica.—The Malaysian Islands.

1. HAVING now related the history of Asia, Europe, Africa, and America, the reader will probably think that my Universal History ought to close here. But, as an Irishman would say, there is a fifth quarter of the globe, on which I must now employ my pen.

2. America ought no longer to be called the New World; for there is a newer one, composed of the islands which lie in the Pacific and Indian oceans. The name of Oceanica has been given to this region. If all the islands were put together, they would cover a space of at least four millions of square miles.

3. There are three divisions of Oceanica. Those islands which lie in the Indian Ocean, near the continent of Asia, are called Malaysia. The largest of them are Borneo, Sumatra, and Java. Scarcely any thing has been written about the history of Malaysia, for the islands are chiefly inhabited by the natives, who keep no record of passing events, and have no desire to know the deeds of their forefathers.

CHAPTER CXCIIL.—2. What of Oceanica? Extent of Oceanica? 3. What of Malaysia? The natives?

4. The history of Java is best known, but is not very important or interesting. It was discovered by the Portuguese, in the year 1510. They found it an exceedingly fertile island, producing abundance of sugar, coffee, rice, pepper, spices, and delicious fruits. There were also mines of gold, silver, diamonds, rubies, and emeralds.

5. The island is six hundred and fifty miles in length. Soon after its discovery, the Dutch got possession of a large portion of it. They built the city of Batavia, on the north-western coast of the island.

6. The city is situated on a low, marshy plain, and canals of stagnant water are seen in many of the streets. But the edifices were so splendid, that Batavia was called the queen of the East. Its beauty was much increased by the trees that overshadowed the streets and canals.

7. In the year 1780, the population amounted to a hundred and sixty thousand. People from all the different parts of the world were among them. But the Europeans were the fewest in number, although the government was in their hands.

8. Of late years, Batavia has been fast going to decay. The climate is so unhealthy, that strangers are very liable to be attacked by dreadful fevers. Sometimes a vessel loses her whole crew by death.

9. In the year 1811, the English took possession of the island of Java. They kept it till 1816, and then restored it to its former owners. The Dutch are said to exercise great tyranny over the natives.

The Australasian division of Oceanica.

1. THE second division of Oceanica is called Australasia. This comprises New Holland, New Guinea, Van Diemen's Land, and the other islands in the vicinity. New Holland is an immense island, containing three millions of square miles, and is about as large as Europe.

2. The natives of New Holland are described as the most degraded people in the world. They are negroes, and have very lean arms and legs. Their features have a resemblance to the monkey tribe, and they are said to be not much handsomer or more intelligent than the orang-outangs, found in the Malaysian islands.

3. This great island was discovered by the Dutch, in 1610, but the whole of it is now claimed as a territory of Great Britain. Captain James Cook, the celebrated navigator, took possession of it in 1770.

4. It is divided into several settlements. The eastern is called New South Wales, and the western the Swan-river colony. New South Wales is the oldest, and began to be settled in 1778. It was then called Botany Bay.

5. The first colonists were not a very respectable sort of people. The English government conceived the plan of sending criminals to New Holland, instead of keeping them in jail, or sending them to the gallows. Accordingly, ship-loads were transported every year.

6. This cannot be considered a severe punishment, for the soil of New Holland is fertile, and the climate is delightful. Perhaps the English would have acted more equitably, if they had transported the honest poor people, who were starving at home.

7. But, during many years, there were hardly any honest men in the new colony. Few of the inhabitants felt any reluctance to commit crimes, or were ashamed to be found out; for they knew that their neighbors were as bad as themselves.

8. In later years, however, the people began to improve. The children of the convicts were now growing up, and their parents had taught them to be more virtuous than they themselves had been.

9. A young girl, who was born in New Holland, was once asked whether she would like to go to England. "Oh, no!" said she; "I should be afraid to go there, for the people are all thieves!" The child knew that a gang of thieves arrived in every ship which came from England, and she naturally supposed that the English were all thieves alike.

10. Criminals continued to be transported from England; and they were so numerous, that it was found necessary to plant new colonies of them. Since the year 1804, Van Diemen's Land has been appropriated to that purpose.

11. This island lies south of New Holland, and is two hundred miles in length. The population is over fifty thousand, of whom about one quarter are convicted criminals.

12. Gold has recently been found in great quantities in New Holland, and this has led to a sudden increase in the population of New Holland, which now goes by the name of Australia. The sending of criminals here has nearly ceased.

Polynesia.—The Sandwich Islands.

1. THE third division of Oceanica is called Polynesia. It consists of many groups of small islands, which are scattered over a large extent of the Pacific ocean. None of them are inhabited by civilized people.

2. The Sandwich Islands are among the most important in Polynesia. They consist of eight islands, of which Owhyhee, or Hawaii, is the largest. These islands were discovered by Captain James Cook, in 1778.

3. He found them inhabited by a race of people whose forms were very beautiful, although their complexions were darker than our own. They appeared to be of a gay, friendly, and sociable disposition.

4. But there were some shocking customs among them. They were in the habit of feasting on human flesh, and offering human sacrifices to their idols. They were also great thieves, and had many other vices.

5. The natives at first behaved in a very friendly manner to Captain Cook. But, after some time, a part of them stole one of the boats belonging to his vessel. The captain went on shore, intending to take the king of Hawaii prisoner, and keep him till the boat should be returned.

6. But when he had landed, the natives mustered in great numbers. Captain Cook found it necessary to retreat toward his own men, who were waiting for him in a boat near the shore. The natives followed him, shouting, throwing stones, and brandishing their weapons.

2. Which are the most important islands of the group? Which is the largest of the Sandwich Islands? Who discovered these islands? When? 3. What people did Captain Cook find inhabiting the Sandwich Islands? 4. What were some of their customs? 5. What took place between the natives and Captain Cook? 6, 7. What did Cook find it necessary to do? Relate what then happened.

7. Captain Cook pointed his musket at them, but it only made them more tumultuous and violent. He then took aim, and shot the foremost native dead. In a moment, before the smoke of his musket had blown away, the natives rushed upon him. One of them beat him down with a club, and then stabbed him with a dagger. His men fired their muskets at the natives, but could not rescue him.

8. The Sandwich Islands, soon after, became the resort of whale-ships, and of all other vessels that voyaged in that part of the Pacific ocean. But the inhabitants did not derive any advantage from their intercourse with civilized people.

9. On the contrary, they became a great deal more vicious than ever they were before. They contracted so many diseases, that their numbers were reduced from four hundred thousand to less than a hundred and fifty thousand. There was reason to fear that the islands would be depopulated.

10. Some American missionaries crossed the ocean, in hopes to save these poor islanders from destruction. They preached the gospel to them, and established schools, in which the natives were taught to read the Bible.

11. Kaahumana, the queen-regent of the Sandwich Islands, adopted the Christian religion. By her assistance, the missionaries met with great success. A number of schools were established. It appeared probable that the whole people would be civilized and Christianized.

12. These prospects have been in some degree realized. The present population of the Island is 58,000, of whom 42,000 are natives. Good houses, churches, roads, printing-presses, and other arts of civilization have been introduced. The government is in the hands of a native king, but the missionaries have much influence.

Polynesia continued. The Society Islands. The Bounty.

1. THE Society Islands likewise belong to Polynesia. They are situated about a thousand miles south of the equator, which is nearly the same distance that the Sandwich Islands are north of it.

2. The largest of the Society Islands is called Tahiti, or Otaheite. It is a hundred miles in circumference, and is inhabited by about ten thousand people. Like the natives of the Sandwich Islands, they are generally handsome, and of agreeable manners.

3. A very interesting event took place among these islands, many years ago. The brig Bounty, belonging to the British navy, was sent to the Society Islands in order to carry bread-fruit trees from thence to the West Indies. Her commander was Lieutenant William Bligh.

4. He arrived at Otaheite in 1788. His crew were delighted with the island. The air was balmy and full of sunshine. Fruits grew abundantly on every tree. There was no need of toiling for bread, since there were trees enough which produced it ready made, and almost as good as if it had been baked.

5. The natives of Otaheite received the Englishmen with kindness. The women behaved with great affection toward the poor storm-beaten sailors. In short, the crew spent their time so pleasantly, that they were very reluctant to depart.

6. They desired to spend their whole lives in these sunny islands, instead of wandering any more over the wide and dreary sea. When the Bounty sailed, they cast many a sad glance at the pleasant shores which they were leaving. They had not sailed many days, before they formed a resolution to return.

7. A young man by the name of Christian was an officer on board the Bounty. He was not on good terms with Lieutenant Bligh, and he incited the crew to mutiny against their commander, and take possession of the vessel.

8. One morning, before sunrise, Christian and his associates entered Lieutenant Bligh's cabin, while he was asleep. They bound his hands behind his back, threatening him with death if he made the least resistance. He was then put into a leaky boat, with eighteen other persons, who refused to join in the mutiny.

9. I can only say of Lieutenant Bligh and his companions, that they arrived safe in England, after severe hardships. The British frigate Pandora was then sent to Otaheite in search of the mutineers, that they might be brought to justice.

10. The frigate arrived at Otaheite and found fourteen of the mutineers. She took them on board and sailed for England, but was wrecked on her passage. Four of the mutineers were drowned. The other ten were saved and carried to England, where three of them were hanged.

11. Christian, the ringleader of the mutiny, had not been taken prisoner by the Pandora; for he and several companions had sailed from Otaheite in the Bounty. They had taken with them a plentiful supply of hogs, dogs, cats, and fowls, and also a number of Otaheitan men and women.

12. For a great many years, nobody could tell what had become of Christian and his friends, and of the brig Bounty, in which they had sailed away. As no news were heard of them, people universally believed that the vessel had gone to the bottom, with all her crew.

10. What happened to the Pandora? What became of the mutineers? 11. What had Christian and his companions done? 12. What was supposed to have become of them?

Story of the Bounty concluded.

1. BUT, after twenty years, when people had long ago done talking about the Bounty, it was found out what had become of her. In the year 1813, a British ship of war was sailing from the Marquesas Islands to the port of Valparaiso, in South America. The captain of the vessel was Sir Thomas Staines. In the course of his voyage, he happened to cast anchor off Pitcairn's Island.

2. This small island lies many leagues to the southwest of Otaheite. It was first discovered by Captain Carteret, in 1767, but very few people had since visited it, for it produced no valuable commodities, and it was supposed to be uninhabited.

3. But, as Sir Thomas Staines looked from the deck of his vessel to the shore, he was amazed to perceive that the island was cultivated, and that there were small houses on it. These houses were better built than those of the savages generally are, and they looked something like the dwellings of poor people in England.

CHAPTER CXC VII.—1. What happened in the year 1813? 2. Where is Pitcairn's Island? When was it discovered? 3. What was seen from the deck of the ship? How did the houses appear?

4. While Sir Thomas Staines and his sailors were wondering at these circumstances, a small boat put off from the shore. The waves rolled very high, but the boat skimmed like a sea-bird over the tops of them, and soon came alongside of the vessel.

5. The boat was rowed by two young men. They were handsome, though of rather a dark complexion. When they came near the vessel, one of them called out, in good English—"Won't you throw us a rope, friends?"

6. A rope was thrown to them, and they took hold of it, and clambered on board of the vessel. Sir Thomas Staines asked them who they were, and how they came to be living on that lonely island. The mystery was soon explained.

7. When Christian and his companions left Otaheite, they had steered for Pitcairn's Island, and had run the Bounty ashore on the rocks, and set her on fire. They had then built houses on the island, and had married the Otaheitan women whom they brought with them.

8. Christian and all his associates were now dead, except one old man, whose name was John Adams.

4. What of a boat from shore? 5. Describe the young men who rowed it. What did they call out? 6. What did they do? 7. Where had Christian and his companions steered on leaving Otaheite? What did they then do? 8. Who alone remained of the mutineers? How was the colony peopled?

But they had left children and grandchildren, so that there was now quite a flourishing colony on the island.

9. Old John Adams had taught the young people to read the Bible, to tell the truth, and to be honest and upright in their behavior. They seemed to be the happiest set of creatures that ever lived; for they hardly knew that there was any sin and sorrow in the world.

10. After this, several vessels touched at this island. The inhabitants were supposed to be from 80 to 100 in number. They were very industrious and moral, and seemed to be an interesting people. The island they inhabited was about seven miles in circumference, and rose to the height of 1000 feet. The shores were rocky and precipitous.

11. In 1856, the descendants of the mutineers, 199 in number, were removed to Norfolk Island, to the east of Australia, their original home being no longer large enough to contain them.

9. What had John Adams done for the young people? 10. What often happened since this? What of the people? The island? 11. What happened in 1856?

CHAPTER CC.—GENERAL VIEWS.

The Origin and Progress of Government.

1. I SUPPOSE by this time that my reader is weary, but I beg his patience for a short time, while I give a brief account of several important matters. I shall first speak of government.

2. You observe that, at the present day, some nations are governed in one way, and some in another. In this country, the people are governed by rulers of their own choice, and according to a constitution of their own formation. This nation is therefore called a republic.

3. Some nations are governed by kings or emperors, who rule according to their own will. These are called despotic monarchies. Other nations are ruled by kings or emperors, whose power is restrained by legislative assemblies, who make laws for the country. These are called limited monarchies.

4. Now you must not suppose that the world has always been governed in the same manner as now. The first kind of government sprang from that of the father of a family. In the first place, he ruled over his children, who acquired the habit of obeying him. His grandchildren followed their example, and thus the whole of the little community naturally yielded to the authority of their common parent.

CHAPTER CC.—2. How is this country governed? What is it called? 3. What are despotic monarchies? What are limited monarchies? 4. From what did the first kind of government spring?

5. This laid the foundation for that kind of government which is called patriarchal. It existed before the flood, and also prevailed in many parts of Asia long after that event. But mankind were at length divided into separate tribes, and these became involved in wars with each other. In the struggles which ensued, some men displayed superior strength, courage, and skill. These naturally became the leaders, and were entrusted with extensive authority.

6. All men are fond of power, and these leaders soon acquired almost complete dominion over the people. This produced the second kind of government, the head of which was a chief, and was usually that of warlike tribes, who had advanced from the savage to the barbarous state.

7. When society had progressed so far as to build towns and cities, the military chieftain was not exactly suited to the more refined and luxurious tastes of the people. They now desired a ruler with a more sounding title. He must be surrounded with pomp and ceremony; he must wear a crown upon his head, and dwell in a palace.

8. He must be attended by persons richly attired, and in order to give sacredness to his character, he must hold himself aloof from the people, as if superior to other mortals. Thus a third kind of government was formed, which is called monarchical.

9. But it was at length found that the monarchs or kings were selfish, and made slaves of the people. In some countries, therefore, the people elected their rulers, and made laws for themselves. Thus a fourth kind of government was instituted, called republican.

10. Now you will bear in mind that the first kind of government, called patriarchal, was adopted in the earliest ages of society, while the greater part of the people were devoted to agriculture and the rearing of cattle. The second kind of government, at the head of which was a chief, was adopted by warlike tribes who had not yet reached a state of civilization.

11. The third kind of government was adopted when people had become civilized and luxurious. It was the form of government among the ancient Assyrians, Egyptians, and Persians, and has been, since the period of these empires, in all ages of mankind, more prevalent than any other system. At the present day, nine-tenths of mankind are subject to monarchical government.

12. The republican form of government was partially adopted by the Jews, soon after their return from Egypt. But it was not till the time of the Greeks that a genuine republic was established. Several of the states of Greece formed themselves into republics at different times, but these were of short duration, and were usually overthrown by aspiring men, who made themselves kings.

13. Rome was at one time a republic, but here, too, freedom soon gave place to despotism. Other countries have been called republics, but it was not till the formation of the constitution of the United States, that a republic was formed, which secured, on permanent principles, the equal rights of all the citizens.

11. What of the third kind, or monarchical government? 12. What of the republican form of government? What of the Greeks? 13. What of Rome? The United States?

Architecture. Commerce.

1. THE first habitations of man were such as nature suggested, just sufficient to satisfy his wants: huts, grottoes, and tents. As civilization advanced, men began to build more durable and commodious habitations. They fitted the stones or bricks together more neatly, but at first without any cement. After they had learned how to build houses, they began to erect temples for their gods, which were much larger and better made than their own habitations.

2. Architecture appears to have been one of the earliest inventions, and its works have been regulated by hereditary imitation. Whatever rude structure the climate or materials of any country forced the first inhabitants to construct, the same form was kept up in after years by their more refined posterity.

3. Thus the Egyptian style of building derived its origin from the cavern and mound; the Chinese from the tent; the Grecian from the wooden cabin; and the Gothic from the bower of trees. Architecture at length became a fine art, and much pains were bestowed upon temples and palaces. Colonnades, halls, and courts soon appeared; the rough trunk was transformed into the lofty column, and the natural vault of a cavern into the splendid pantheon.

CHAPTER CCI.—1. What of the first habitations of man? What was done as civilization advanced? 2. What of architecture? 3. Mention the different styles of building. What of architecture at length?

4. The first nations who paid attention to architecture were the Babylonians, who built the temple of Belus and the hanging gardens; the Assyrians, who filled Nineveh with splendid buildings; the Phœnicians, whose cities were adorned with magnificent structures; and the Israelites, whose temple was considered wonderful. Of the Persian and Egyptian architecture we have some remains, and they are all in a style of prodigal splendor and gigantic height.

5. The Greeks first introduced a more simple and dignified style of building, called the Doric order. The Ionic and Corinthian columns were soon added to the Doric. After the Peloponnesian war, this noble simplicity had again given place to the excess of ornament; and after the death of Alexander, 323 B. C., the art declined, and was afterward but little cultivated in Greece.

6. The Romans had paid some attention to architecture, but did not equal the Greeks till the time of

4. What people first paid attention to architecture? What of Persian and Egyptian architecture? 5. What of the Greeks? Their architecture?

Augustus, who encouraged Greek artists to erect splendid buildings in Rome. But when the seat of government was removed to Constantinople, the art declined in Rome. About this time, the Roman, or Composite column originated, which was employed in temples and splendid buildings.

7. These beautiful works of art were almost entirely destroyed by the Goths and Vandals; but Theodoric, a friend of the arts, endeavored to restore them, and even erected several new ones. This is the era of the origin of modern art, and the style of building it introduced is called Gothic architecture.

8. Architecture has experienced different destinies in different countries, and it has risen and declined at different periods. In America, the Grecian architecture is prevailing, as it is better adapted than the Gothic to small buildings, and does not require splendid edifices to display its beauty.

9. The first mention made of nations trading one with another, appears in the book of Genesis, chapter xxxviii. 25, when Joseph's brethren sold him to a band of Ishmaelites, who were conveying spices, balm, and myrrh into Egypt. The balm was from Gilead, and

6. What of the Roman architecture? 7. What of the Goths and Vandals? Theodoric? Gothic architecture? 8. What of architecture in America? 9. What is the first mention made of trade?

the myrrh was the produce of Arabia. They were going through the land of Canaan into Egypt, which was then a highly cultivated kingdom.

10. The central situation of Egypt has always made it the emporium of commerce. By caravans, the treasures of Asia and Africa were brought thither. Trade was always held in esteem, because of the wealth it brought. Of the maritime trade of the Egyptians, we have no regular account, for they superstitiously neglected the sea for many ages.

11. Tyre and Sidon, cities of Phœnicia, are next found rising into notice. Their country was not rich in its productions; industry alone made their rocks productive; they conveyed their merchandise from port to port, and commerce, by feeding industry, was itself enriched.

12. About eleven hundred years before Christ, in the time of David, the Phœnicians, in the true spirit of commerce, continually extended their voyages, and finding plenty of gold in Spain, they formed a settlement for the purpose of trade, called Gadir, now Cadiz.

13. Solomon saw the advantage of commerce, and caused ships to be built, which he sent to Ophir, and which brought back gold, silver, ivory, birds, and other things. He had also great traffic with Egypt, whence he obtained horses and fine linen.

10. What of Egypt? Its commerce? 11. What of Tyre and Sidon? 12. What of the Phœnicians? Cadiz? 13. What encouragement did Solomon give to commerce?

14. About 869 years before Christ, Carthage was built, and became famous for her commerce throughout the civilized world. In 700 B. C., Corinth became distinguished as a maritime power, and made improvements in the building of ships.

15. In 588 B. C., Tyre became famous. We read an interesting account of her commerce and splendor in the 26th, 27th, and 28th chapters of Ezekiel. But the Tyrians drew upon themselves the vengeance of God, and they were subdued first by Nebuchadnezzar, and afterward more completely by Alexander, 332 B. C.

16. The Phœnicians, after the destruction of Tyre, still pursued and enlarged the sphere of commerce, by means of Carthage, till that city was destroyed by the Romans, 146 B. C. At one time, the Grecian states were conspicuous by their attention to naval affairs. Athens and Sparta in turn became famous, and remained so till their overthrow.

17. Alexander paid great attention to commercial affairs, and built the cities of Alexandria and Berenice, at which places he carried on an extensive trade with the West, by means of the Mediterranean sea, with the richer provinces of the East by the Red Sea, and with the central countries of Asia, by the Isthmus of Suez. He kept up large fleets, and his revenues were immense.

18. The Romans were ignorant of the value of commerce, and, as if they were determined to root it out, they destroyed Corinth, which was one of the most commercial cities of Greece. Great stagnation of commerce now followed, which was felt by all the surrounding countries, till the time of Julius Cæsar, who determined to revive it, and restored in one year both Corinth and Carthage.

19. As the Romans were now masters of all around the Mediterranean, they began to favor commerce for their own sake. They therefore obtained supplies from all the regions round about, to minister either to their necessities or their luxuries. The return they made for these various and choice articles was in money, and therefore this interchange can hardly be called commerce. Indeed, the Romans were never a commercial people; they despised the character of a merchant, and wished to rule and obtain riches only by the sword.

20. After the seat of government was removed to Constantinople, Theodoric became king of Italy, and under his wise and peaceful reign, commerce began again to flourish, though in a reduced state. In the East, silk began to be a great article of commerce, and the Persians enriched themselves very much in their trade with ships from India, which stopped at their ports.

21. In 732 A. D., Venice began to pay attention to commerce, and carried on an extensive traffic with the East. Many other states in Italy also carried on a large trade with different countries. In 1063, Pisa and Genoa became distinguished as commercial cities.

22. From the accession of William the Conqueror to the throne of England, in 1066, we date the commencement of commerce in that country, and much intercourse took place between Normandy and England.

23. The crusades we find giving the next spur to commerce. The crusaders, finding in the East luxuries that they could not procure at home, determined to supply themselves with these foreign elegancies, conveniences, and necessities. Commerce, therefore, began to extend itself with rapidity.

24. The discovery of the polarity of the loadstone gave new wings to commerce; it was applied to navigation about the year 1200. In the time of king John, in 1216, England became very rich and populous by trade, and the people flourished accordingly.

25. In 1241, the German towns began to engage in commerce, and entered into a league for mutual defence. They were called Hanse towns. They made themselves very rich and powerful. Edward I. of England allowed them great privileges in trade, which were, however, curtailed under Edward VI.

26. In the time of Elizabeth, another blow was struck at their commerce; but in spite of all, they became so formidable that the governments of several states entered into a league against them, which resulted in their power being weakened and finally sunk, in 1662.

27. About the year 1251, we find Florence rising into notice, in a commercial point of view. Its trade was immense, and its fabrics beautiful and costly. The merchants amassed great wealth, and became the bankers of all Europe. This state of splendor continued for centuries.

24. What of the loadstone? 25, 26. What of the Hanse towns? 27. What of Florence?

28. Flanders was for some time the seat of the principal manufactories of Europe. As far back as the year 960, we find the Flemish trading to great advantage. In 1253, they were famous for their linens, and they continued eminent for their manufactures till 1584, when Antwerp was destroyed by the duke of Parma. This put an end to the prosperity of the country, and her fine manufactures were dispersed among other nations.

29. Hitherto, the trade with India had been carried on by caravans, but in 1497, a passage being found round the Cape of Good Hope, the way was now open to wealth and luxury. In the year 1500, the Portuguese began to make settlements in Africa, and soon after Portugal became the centre of commerce, till 1580, when the kingdom was seized by the king of Spain.

30. From the reign of John, in 1216, to 1317, commerce flourished in England. But at that time, quarrels between the English and Flemish were so fierce, that all commercial intercourse was suspended. In

28. What of the commerce of Flanders? What destroyed it? 29. What of trade in India? In Portugal? 30. What of commerce in England?

1331, it was again revived under Edward III., who introduced the manufacture of woollen cloth.

31. In the reign of Henry VIII., the Reformation was of great service to commerce, and in the time of Edward VI., a trade was entered into with Russia. Queen Elizabeth greatly encouraged commerce. She formed several trading companies—one to Russia, and another to Turkey and the Levant. The East India Company began during her reign, in 1600.

32. As for the commerce of our own country, after independence was declared, our commercial resources began to develop themselves. Our ships penetrated to the most distant seas, and brought home with them the produce of every clime. Our commercial prosperity is now established on an enduring basis.

Origin and Progress of Various Arts.

1. I HAVE attempted to give you some idea of the origin and progress of government, of architecture,

31. What queen gave great encouragement to commerce? 32. What of commerce in our own country?

and commerce; but there are still many things necessary to be known, in order to understand the manners, customs, feelings, and opinions of mankind in former ages.

2. When you read of such a great man as Julius Cæsar, and know that he had immense wealth at his command, you might imagine that he rode in a beautiful coach, wore a fine beaver hat, silk stockings, leather shoes with silver buckles, and that he carried a splendid gold watch in his pocket.

3. But you must remember that no such things as coaches, hats, stockings, shoes, buckles, or watches were invented till long after the time of Julius Cæsar. The truth is, that by far the largest portion of the articles of furniture and of clothing, as well as the greater part of the tools and implements now in use, have been invented within the last five hundred years. I will endeavor to give you some little idea of the origin and progress of various inventions which essentially contribute to our comfort and convenience.

4. You know that all edge tools, such as knives, hatchets, axes, planes, etc., now used for cutting and shaping wood, are made of steel, which is a preparation of iron. Yet it appears probable, although iron is mentioned as being known before the deluge, that the use of it was afterward lost.

CHAPTER CCII.—2. What might you imagine of Julius Cæsar? 3. What articles were unknown until after his time? What have been invented within the last five hundred years? 4. What can you say of iron?

5. There is, therefore, no doubt that the ancient nations were ignorant of the use of iron, and therefore destitute of all those convenient edge tools now so common among us. Instead of these, the ancients used sharp stones, flints, horns, bones, and other things.

6. But it is said that iron was discovered by the burning of Mount Ida, in Crete, about the year 1406 B. C. It is probable that it was in use for various instruments, among the more civilized nations, not long after this period. Among the Romans, two or three hundred years before Christ, iron was used for chains, locks, axes, hoes, spades, and other tools.

7. But fine cutlery, such as is now in use, was not known till hundreds of years afterward. Knives for the table were not made in England till about 1500. Forks were unknown to the Greeks and Romans, and are not in use even now among the Turks, Chinese, and some other eastern nations. Razors appear to have been of great antiquity, as they are mentioned by

5. What did the ancients use instead of iron? 6. When was iron said to be discovered? What is probable? What of iron among the Romans? 7. What of fine cutlery? When were table knives first in use? What of forks? Razors?

Homer; but they were probably not of steel till long after.

8. The weaving of woollen and linen cloth was practised in very early times. The ladies of Rome paid great attention to these arts. Silk was manufactured in Persia several hundred years before Christ, and afterward in Tyre and Constantinople. In later times, the art of making silk fabrics passed into Italy, France, and other countries.

9. Cotton fabrics are also of great antiquity, and it appears that the inhabitants of India had the art of calico printing at least as early as the time of our Saviour.

10. The first houses of mankind were made of wood, stone, clay, and various other substances; they were, however, low, rough, and inconvenient. As the arts advanced, improvements were made in the dwellings. But even so late as the time of Nero, almost all the houses of Rome were built of wood, and when the city was set on fire by order of that cruel emperor, three-fourths of it were consequently burnt to the ground.

11. The houses of the rich had small windows of transparent stone, horn, or other substances, but most of the dwellings had no other windows than small holes in the walls to admit light and air. Glass windows were not introduced till the fifth century after Christ.

8. What of weaving? Silk? 9. What of cotton fabrics? Calico printing?
10. What of the first houses? Those in the time of Nero?

12. Chimneys were not in use till the twelfth century. Before this, the smoke escaped through an opening in the roof. It was, however, very troublesome, and we have reason to suppose that even Alexander and Cæsar often had their eyes almost put out with it. As late as the time of Elizabeth, three-fourths of the houses in England were destitute of chimneys.

13. These few remarks will show you that the world presents a very different state of things now from what it did formerly. The poorest person now enjoys a multitude of comforts, conveniences, and luxuries which Cæsar, with all his wealth, did not possess.

14. One of the most wonderful improvements of modern times is that of the steam-engine. This contrivance is now made to do the work which millions of men could not have done before. It is applied to the manufacture of an infinite variety of articles. Nor is this all; it is employed to drive vessels over the water, and to impel carriages upon rail-roads with immense speed.

11. What of windows? 12. What of chimneys? Smoke? 13. What of the present state of the world? 14. What of the steam-engine? Its various uses?

15. A steamboat was some years since taken to Calcutta, in Hindostan. The Hindoos looked at the huge vessel ploughing through the waves, and spouting forth fire and smoke, with great astonishment.

16. One of them remarked upon the occasion as follows: "Man is one curious thing; he catch elephant, make him work; he catch camel, make him work; he catch wind, make him work the big ship; he catch water, make him work the mill; now he catch fire, make him work the steamboat!"

17. But the electric telegraph, first applied in this country in 1846, is perhaps the most wonderful invention of man. My readers have all heard of this extraordinary invention, and perhaps some of them have sent messages by it. The first words transmitted over the wires were these: "What has God wrought!"

15, 16. Relate the anecdote of the steamboat at Calcutta. 17. What of the electric telegraph? When was it established? What was the first message?
